

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at <http://books.google.com/>

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are employed in the public sector has increased by 1.5 million (1990–1999) (Department of Health 2000).

There is a growing emphasis on the importance of the public sector in the provision of health care services. The public sector is seen as a key provider of health care services, and it is expected that it will continue to play a major role in the future. This is reflected in the fact that the public sector is the largest employer in the health care sector, and it is expected that this position will be maintained in the future.

The public sector is also seen as a key provider of health care services, and it is expected that it will continue to play a major role in the future. This is reflected in the fact that the public sector is the largest employer in the health care sector, and it is expected that this position will be maintained in the future.

The public sector is also seen as a key provider of health care services, and it is expected that it will continue to play a major role in the future. This is reflected in the fact that the public sector is the largest employer in the health care sector, and it is expected that this position will be maintained in the future.

The public sector is also seen as a key provider of health care services, and it is expected that it will continue to play a major role in the future. This is reflected in the fact that the public sector is the largest employer in the health care sector, and it is expected that this position will be maintained in the future.

The public sector is also seen as a key provider of health care services, and it is expected that it will continue to play a major role in the future. This is reflected in the fact that the public sector is the largest employer in the health care sector, and it is expected that this position will be maintained in the future.

The public sector is also seen as a key provider of health care services, and it is expected that it will continue to play a major role in the future. This is reflected in the fact that the public sector is the largest employer in the health care sector, and it is expected that this position will be maintained in the future.

The public sector is also seen as a key provider of health care services, and it is expected that it will continue to play a major role in the future. This is reflected in the fact that the public sector is the largest employer in the health care sector, and it is expected that this position will be maintained in the future.

The public sector is also seen as a key provider of health care services, and it is expected that it will continue to play a major role in the future. This is reflected in the fact that the public sector is the largest employer in the health care sector, and it is expected that this position will be maintained in the future.

The public sector is also seen as a key provider of health care services, and it is expected that it will continue to play a major role in the future. This is reflected in the fact that the public sector is the largest employer in the health care sector, and it is expected that this position will be maintained in the future.

The public sector is also seen as a key provider of health care services, and it is expected that it will continue to play a major role in the future. This is reflected in the fact that the public sector is the largest employer in the health care sector, and it is expected that this position will be maintained in the future.

The public sector is also seen as a key provider of health care services, and it is expected that it will continue to play a major role in the future. This is reflected in the fact that the public sector is the largest employer in the health care sector, and it is expected that this position will be maintained in the future.

The public sector is also seen as a key provider of health care services, and it is expected that it will continue to play a major role in the future. This is reflected in the fact that the public sector is the largest employer in the health care sector, and it is expected that this position will be maintained in the future.

1

2

3

RICHARD YATES,
Governor of the State of Illinois, 1901-1905.

COLLECTIONS

OF THE

Illinois State Historical Library

VOLUME I.

EDITED AND ANNOTATED BY

H. W. BECKWITH,

PRESIDENT OF THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES.

BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF THE ILLINOIS STATE HISTORICAL LIBRARY,

HIRAM W. BECKWITH,

EDMUND J. JAMES, PH. D.,

GEORGE N. BLACK.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL.:

THE H. W. ROKKER Co., PRINTERS AND BINDERS.

1903.

7000
-4-v.1

TO THE
BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF THE ILLINOIS STATE HISTORICAL LIBRARY

Copyright, 1908,

By the Board of Trustees of the Illinois State Historical Library.

CONTENTS.

Preface	1-2
Introduction. Editorial	3-7
Voyages and Discoveries of Father James Marquette in the Mississippi Valley. Part of John G. Shea's translation, with explanatory notes	8-40
French Plans of Conquest, La Salle's Letters Patent, etc. Ed- itorial	41-46
Hennepin's Narrative, from his "La Louisiane" of 1683.....	46-105
La Salle's Voyage down the Mississippi. The Proces Verbal.....	106-113
Will of La Salle.....	114
Memoir of the Sieur de La Salle.....	115-125
La Salle's Letters Patent from the King of France..	126-127
Memoir of Henry de Tonty, of 1693.....	128-164
The Aubry Manuscript, and explanatory notes.....	165-170
George Rogers Clark's Conquest of the Illinois, with explana- tory notes	171-289
Letters from the Canadian Archives.....	290-457
Appendix—Clark's account of old Fort Gage.....	458-463
Index to Marquette's Narrative, and explanatory notes thereto	466
Index to Hennepin's Narrative, and explanatory notes thereto	477
Index to the "Proces Verbal," and explanatory notes thereto..	495
Index to the Will of La Salle.....	500
Index to La Salle's Letters Patent, and explanatory notes thereto	505
Index to Memoir of Henry de Tonty, and explanatory notes thereto	506
Index to the Aubry Manuscript, and explanatory notes thereto	528
Index to Gen. George Rogers Clark's Conquest of the Illinois, and explanatory notes thereto; to the Letters from the Canadian Archives; and to the Appendix, with explan- atory notes	533
General Index	610

LIST OF ILLUSTRATIONS.

Richard Yates, Governor of the State of Illinois, 1901-1905.
Board of Trustees of the Illinois State Historical Library....	3
Jean Baptiste Talon.....	106
Rene Robert, Sieur de La Salle.....	115
Gen. George Rogers Clark.....	171
Powder Magazine at Williamsburgh, Va.	187
Old Court House at Williamsburgh, Va.	190
Earthwork Lines of old Fort Gage opposite Kaskaskia.....	197
Kaskaskia, and the old Fort across the river. Six views..	200-201
Plan of Fort Sackville, Vincennes.....	231
Map of the country from the Wabash River to Vincennes.....	242
Gen. John Edgar's house at Kaskaskia, LaFayette entertained there	415
The Old Jesuit House, or State House, Kaskaskia..	463

PREFACE

AT the session of our legislature in 1901, Hon. George W. Stubblefield, the Senator from McLean County, introduced a bill, approved May 10, 1901, whereby $2,500 was "appropriated for the purpose of procuring documents, papers, materials and publications relating to the Northwest and the State of Illinois, and [for] publishing the same." Which was "to be expended by the Trustees of the State Historical Library," for that purpose, "with the sanction of the Governor."

Under this act the Board of Trustees of the Library named, with the sanction of Governor Richard Yates, ordered material of the kind required, to be gathered for such publication. This work and the editing of it was assigned to H. W. Beckwith by his associate trustees. In touch with them he has accordingly collected, arranged, edited and annotated the matter, provided the cuts, and supervised the printing of the matter in this volume.

While the material herein is original and authentic, the Editor, as well for himself as for his associate trustees, says that they are not responsible for statements as to facts as they appear in any of the historical documents herein published.

To keep within the limit of its appropriation, the Board of Trustees was required, not only to glean and carefully curtail from a mass of matter at their command, while at the same time they deemed it but right to give the several sections of the State a fair share of representation in the volume.

The documents herein follow a general rule, in that they imply outside matter to make them rightly understood. Taken by themselves alone the novice would gain little knowledge, if not more likely to be misled by them. Hence the explanatory edits and annotations of the original text have been prepared with the hope of aiding the average reader in acquiring a knowledge which he could otherwise gain only at an outlay of means, time and research in which very few persons would care to indulge.

Where matter appears in the body of the text enclosed in brackets [thus], the Editor is responsible for the same.

H. W. BECKWITH,

E. J. JAMES,

GEORGE N. BLACK,

Board of Trustees of the Illinois State Historical Library.

523

GEORGE N. BLACK H. W. BECKWITH *E. J. JAMES
Board of Trustees of the Illinois State Historical Library.

*Photo Copyright 1903, by J. E. Purdy, Boston.

INTRODUCTION

EDITORIAL.

JOLIET AND FATHER MARQUETTE—THEIR JOURNALS AND MAPS OF THEIR VOYAGE ON THE ILLINOIS AND MISSIS-SIPPI.

THE fact of the Mississippi was known to the French and their missionaries several years before it was duly explored. Early in his appointment as the "King's Councilor and Intendant of Justice, of Police and Finances of New France," Jean Talon writes from Quebec to Jean Colbert, "the King's Prime Minister," as follows:

"Canada is of such a vast extent that I know not of its limits on the north, they are so great a distance from us; and on the south there is nothing to prevent his Majesty's name and arms being carried as far as Florida, New Sweden, New Netherlands, New England; and that through the first of these countries access can be had even to Mexico. All this country is diversely watered by the Saint Lawrence, and the beautiful rivers that flow into it latterly, that communicate with divers Indian Nations rich in furs, especially the more northern of them. The southern nations can also be reached by way of Lake Ontario, if the portages [beyond] with which we are not yet acquainted, are not very difficult, though this may be overcome. If these southern nations do not abound in peltries as those of the north, they may have more precious commodities. And if we do not know of these last it is because our enemies, the Iroquois, intervene between us and the countries that produce them.*

In the Jesuit Relations, etc., for 1668-9, Chapter IX, Father James Marquette, writing from the Mission of the Holy Ghost at La Point, Lake Superior, says:

"When the Illinois come [to trade at] the Point they pass a great river which is almost a league in width. It flows from north to south and to so great a distance that the Illinois, who know nothing of the use of the canoe, have never as yet heard of its mouth, etc. It is hardly probably [probable] that this great river discharges itself [into the Atlantic] in Virginia; we are more inclined to believe that it has its mouth in [the Gulf of California], etc." The zealous Father hoped for the means to "visit the nations who dwell along" its shores, in order to open the way to many of our Fathers, who for a long time have awaited this happiness. This discovery will give us a perfect knowledge of the sea either to the south or to the west," etc.

One other fact thus early known is that the stream in question was called the "Miss-i-sipi," vide, references in the Relations from 1666 to 1671. Its meaning in the Illinois dialect is the "great river," the name more generally used by the missionaries in their "Relations" above referred to. It is a compound from "Mechah" [big] and "seebee" [river] of the Ojebway or Chippewa language, the purest and most classical speech of all the western Algonquin tribes.

The interest grew apace until finally in 1672, Talon, the Intendant, forestalled the missionaries and ordered the matter to be made one of official inquiry. On a conference with Count de Frontenac, the Governor, they chose Louis Joliet to make the exploration. He had been in the west, long an Indian trader, and was an expert topographer. A prime purpose of the French was to make the savages of New France, Christians, and agreeably to a custom for this purpose, Claude F. Dablon, the Father Superior of the Jesuit Missions, was notified, and he with rare good judgment appointed the Reverend Father James Marquette to go with Joliet. In this way the most ardent wish of the saintly Marquette was finally gratified.

* Talon, Intendant, etc., Quebec, Oct. 4, 1665, to the Prime Minister at Paris, where the original is found in the archives of the "Department of the Marine and Colonies."

Some two years later Frontenac writes the Prime Minister that the "Sieur Joliet, whom Monsieur Talon advised me, on my arrival from France, to dispatch for the discovery of the South sea [or Pacific Ocean], has returned three months ago, and discovered some very fine countries and a navigation so easy through the beautiful rivers he has found, that a person can go from Lake Ontario and Fort Frontenac [at Kingston, Canada] in a bark to the Gulf of Mexico, there being only one carrying place [around Niagara Falls] of half a league in length where Lake Ontario connects with Lake Erie. A settlement could be made at this point and another bark built on Lake Erie."

Thus early do we see the foreshadowing of La Salle's later discoveries.

Continuing, Governor Frontenac says that "Joliet has been within ten days' journey of the Gulf of Mexico and believes that water communications could be found leading to the Vermilion and California seas [i. e., the Gulf of California], by means of the river [Missouri] that flows from the west into the Grand River [Mississippi] that he has discovered, and which last runs from north to south and is as large as the Saint Lawrence before Quebec. I send you by my secretary the map he has made of it, and the observations he has been able to recollect, as he lost all his minutes and journals in the shipwreck he suffered in sight of [and just above] Montreal [at the rapids of La Chine where La Salle afterwards had his first trading post].

"Joliet left with the Fathers at Sault Ste. Marie, of Lake Superior copies of his journals. We cannot get these before next year. You will glean from them additional particulars of this discovery, in which he has very well acquitted himself."*

It seems to the Editor here that a copy of these journals and the map referred to of Joliet were gotten by Melchiseds Thevenot, a book printer at Paris and published by him, with the map referred to by Frontenac produced in 1681.† The volume is very rare. An abridged translation of Joliet's journal and map by Jared Sparks, President of Harvard University, appears in his "Life of Father Marquette" issued in 1844. The entire text was translated by Benjamin F. French and is found in his "Historical Collections of Louisiana."‡ The journal seems like his work or by him [Thevenot] and Joliet jointly. Be this as it may, it was meant and should stand for Joliet's official report of his voyage.

Meanwhile Father Marquette made and sent on his report to his superior, Father Claude F. Dablon, at Quebec, and the original manuscript was edited and prepared for publication by him in 1678. It, with Marquette's pen-made map of his and Joliet's voyage, lay unknown for more than 150 years when they were unearthed in St. Mary's College at Montreal by Prof. Benjamin F. French, who wished to publish them in his Historical Collections of * Frontenac to the Minister. Quebec Nov, 14, 1674.

† In his volume titled Recueil—De Voyages—De M. Thevenot—Dedie au Roi—A. Paris—MDCLXXXI—Avec Privilege du Roy.

‡ Part II. Philadelphia 1850.

Louisiana. Instead, the document and map were turned over to and translated by the late John Gilmary Shea and annotated by him and Mr. French jointly.

The text so arranged was published in Shea's "Discoveries and Explorations of the Mississippi" in 1852, some of the volumes appearing as "part IV" of French's Historical Collections. Both of these being out of print are now classed as rare Americana.

The small map drawn up by Joliet on his return to Quebec for Frontenac and sent by his secretary to Colbert, is quite instructive. The late Francis Parkman who was conversant with the original, says that on its marginal address to Frontenac "Joliet says Lake Frontenac [Ontario] is separated by a fall of half a league from Lake Erie, from which one enters that of the Hurons and by the same navigation that of the Illinois [Michigan] from the head of which one crosses to the river Divine, i. e., the Des Plaines branch of the River Illinois, by a portage of a thousand paces. This [last named] river falls into the River Colbert [Mississippi] which discharges itself into the Gulf of Mexico."

1 * Hence it is not to be confused with Joliet's later map
3 tenac, Joliet leaves out all that is said above relative to 2 of 1674, whereon, in his marginal address to Count Fron-4 the Chicago portage and Desplaines river and inserts matter about the forest, fruits, game, Indian corn, crops, and large canoes, etc., of the savages along the Mississippi.

Father Marquette's account as translated by Doctor Shea, so pertinent to the history of the northwest and especially to Illinois, is substantially like that of Joliet and is reproduced by the editor here, first because it is authentic beyond doubt, and second because it is fuller in detail. The Editor follows Shea's divisions of the matter as to introduction, head-lines, chapters and sections.—H. W. BECK-

WITH.

* Line dropped by linotype operator read lines as numbered.

CHAPTER I.*

1673—OF THE FIRST VOYAGE MADE BY FATHER MARQUETTE TOWARD NEW MEXICO, AND HOW THE DESIGN WAS CON-CEIVED.

FATHER MARQUETTE had long projected this enterprise impelled by his ardent desire of extending the kingdom of Jesus Christ, and of making Him known and adored by all nations of that country. He beheld himself, as it were, at the door of these new nations, when, in 1670, he was laboring at the mission of Lapointe du St. Esprit, which is at the extremity of the upper lake of the Ottawas. He even saw at times many of those new tribes, concerning whom he gathered all the information that he could. This induced him to make several efforts to undertake the enterprise, but always in vain; he had even given up all hopes of succeeding, when the Almighty presented him the following opportunity:

In 1673, the Comte de Frontenac, our Governor, and M. Talon, then our intendant, knowing the importance of this discovery, either to seek a passage from here to the China sea by the river which empties into the California or Red Sea, or to verify what was afterward said of the two kingdoms of Theguaio and Quivira, which border on Canada, and where gold mines are, it is said, abundant, these gentlemen, I say, both at the same time selected for the enterprise the Sieur Jollyet, whom they deemed competent for so great a design, wishing to see Father Marquette accompany him.

* J. G. Shea's Translation of "The Voyages and Discoveries of Father James Marquette in the Valley of the Mississippi." Prepared for publication by Father Claudius Dablon in 1678.

They were not mistaken in their choice of the Sieur Jollyet, for he was a young man, born in this country, and endowed with every quality that could be desired in such an enterprise. He possessed experience and a knowledge of the languages of the Ottawa country, where he had spent several years; he had the tact and prudence so necessary for the success of a voyage equally dangerous and difficult; and, lastly, he had courage to fear nothing where all is to be feared. He accordingly fulfilled the expectations entertained of him, and if, after having passed through dangers of a thousand kinds, he had not unfortunately been wrecked in the very harbor—his canoe having upset below the Saut St. Louis, near Montreal, where he lost his men and papers, and only escaped, by a kind of miracle, with his life—the success of his voyage had left nothing to be desired.

SECTION I.

1673—DEPARTURE OF FATHER JAMES MARQUETTE FOR THE DISCOVERY OF THE GREAT RIVER, CALLED BY THE INDIANS MISSISSIPI, WHICH LEADS TO NEW MEXICO.

THE day of the Immaculate Conception of the Blessed Virgin, whom I had always invoked since I have been in this Ottawa country, to obtain of God the grace to be able to visit the nations on the River Missisipi, was identically that on which M. Jollyet arrived with orders of the Comte de Frontenac, our Governor, and M. Talon, our Intendant, to make this discovery with me. I was the more enraptured at this good news, as I saw my designs on the point of being accomplished, and myself in the happy necessity of exposing my life for the salvation of all these nations, and particularly for the Illinois, who had, when I was at Lapointe du St. Esprit, very earnestly entreated me to carry the word of God to their country.

We were not long in preparing our outfit, although we were embarking on a voyage the duration of which we could not foresee. Indian corn, with some dried meat, was our whole stock of provisions. With this we set out in two bark canoes, M. Jollying, myself, and five men, firmly resolved to do all and suffer all for so glorious an enterprise.

It was on the 17th of May, 1673, that we started from the mission of St. Ignatius at [the "Point" on the mainland near] Michilimackinac, where I then was. Our joy at being chosen for this expedition roused our courage, and sweetened the labor of rowing from morning till night. As we were going to seek unknown countries, we took all possible precautions, that, if our enterprise was hazardous, it should not be foolhardy; for this reason we gathered all possible information from Indians who had frequented those parts, and even from their accounts traced a map of all the new country, marking down the rivers on which we were to sail, the names of the nations and places through which we were to pass, the course of the great river, and what direction we should take when we got to it.

Above all, I put our voyage under the protection of the Blessed Virgin Immaculate, promising her, that if she did us the grace to discover the great river, I would give it the name of Conception; and that I would also give that name to the first mission which I should establish among these new nations, as I have actually done among the Illinois.

SECTION II.

1673—THE FATHER VISITS BY THE WAY THE WILD-OATS TRIBES—WHAT THESE WILD OATS ARE—HE ENTERS THE BAY OF THE FETID—SOME PARTICULARS AS TO THIS BAY—HE REACHES THE FIRE NATION.

WITH all these precautions, we made our paddles play merrily over a part of Lake Huron and that of the Illinois into the Bay of the Fetid [Green Bay].

The first nation that we met was that of the Wild Oats [Me-nom-o-nees or the "Fol-Avoines," for the French so called both the grain and these Indians]. I entered their river to visit them, as we have preached the gospel to these tribes for some years past, so that there are many good Christians among them.

The wild oats, from which they take their name, as they are found in their country, are a kind of grass which grows spontaneously in little rivers with slimy bottoms, and in marshy places; they are very like the wild oats that grow up among our wheat. The ears are on stalks knotted at intervals; they rise above the water about the month of June, and keep rising till they float about two feet above it. The grain is not thicker than our oats, but is as long again, so that the meal is much more abundant.

The following is the manner in which the Indians gather it and prepare it for eating. In the month of September, which is the proper time for this harvest, they go in canoes across these fields of wild oats, and shake the ears on their right and left into the canoe as they advance; the grain falls easily if it is ripe, and in a little while their provision is made. To clear it from the chaff, and strip it of a pellicle in which it is enclosed, they put it to dry in the smoke on a wooden lattice, under which they keep up a small fire for several days. When the oats are well dried, they put them in a skin of the form of a bag, which is then forced into a hole, made on purpose, in the ground; they then tread it out so long and so well, that the grain being freed from the chaff is easily winnowed; after which they pound it to reduce it to meal, or even unpounded, boil it in water seasoned with grease, and in this way, wild oats are almost as palatable as rice would be when not better seasoned.

I informed these people of the Wild Oats of my design of going to discover distant nations to instruct them in the mysteries of our Holy Religion; they were very much surprised, and did their best to dissuade me. They told me, that I would meet nations that never spare strangers, but tomahawk them without any provocation; that the war which had broken out among various nations on our route, exposed us to another evident danger—that of being killed by the war parties which are constantly in the field; that the Great River is very dangerous, unless the difficult parts are known; that it was full of frightful monsters who swallowed up men and canoes together; that there is even a demon there who can be heard from afar, who stops the passage and engulfs all who dare approach; lastly, that the heat is so excessive in those countries, that it would infallibly cause our death.

I thanked them for their kind advice, but assured them that I could not follow it, as the salvation of souls was concerned; that for them, I should be too happy to lay down my life; that I made light of their pretended demon, that we would defend ourselves well enough against the river monsters; and, besides, we should be on our guard to avoid the other dangers with which they threatened us. After having made them pray and given them some instruction, I left them, and, embarking in our canoes, we soon after reached the extremity of the Bay of the Fetid, where our Fathers labor successively in the conversion of these tribes, having baptized more than two thousand since they have been there.

This bay bears a name which has not so bad a meaning in the Indian language, for they call it rather Salt Bay than Fetid Bay, although among them it is almost the same, and this is also the name which they give to the sea. This induced us to make very exact researches to discover whether there were not in these parts some salt springs, as there are among the Iroquois, but we could not find any. We accordingly concluded that the name has been given on account of the quantity of slime and mud there, constantly exhaling noisome vapors which cause the loudest and longest peals of thunder that I ever heard.

The bay is about thirty leagues long, and eight wide at its mouth; it narrows gradually to the extremity, where it is easy to remark the tide which has its regular flow and ebb, almost like that of the sea. This is not the place to examine whether they are real tides, whether they are caused by the winds, or by some other age; whether they are winds, out-riders of the moon, or attached to her suite, who consequently agitate the lake and give it a kind of flow and ebb, whenever the moon rises above the horizon. What I can certainly aver is, that when the water is quite tranquil, you can easily see it rise and fall with the course of the moon, although I do not deny that this movement may be caused by distant winds, which pressing on the centre of the lake, make it rise and fall on the shore in the way that meets our eyes.

We left this bay to enter a river, [Fox river] emptying into it. It is very beautiful at its mouth, and flows gently; it is full of bustards, duck, teal and other birds, attracted by the wild oats of which they are very fond; but when you have advanced a little up the river, it becomes very difficult, both on account of the currents and of the sharp rocks which cut the canoes and the feet of those who are obliged to drag them, especially when the water is low. For all that we passed the rapids safely, and as we approached Machkoutens, the Fire nation, ["Mush-kooda'—Uh-ke," or Prairie land tribes] I had the curiosity to drink the mineral waters of the river which is not far from this town. I also took time to examine an herb, the virtue of which an Indian, who possessed the secret, had, with many ceremonies, made known to Father Alloues. Its root is useful against the bite of serpents, the Almighty having been pleased to give this remedy against a poison very common in the country. It is very hot, and has the taste of powder when crushed between the teeth. It must be chewed and put on the bite of the serpent. Snakes have such an antipathy to it, that they fly from one rubbed with it. It produces several stalks about a foot long, with pretty long leaves, and a white flower, much like the gilly-flower. I put some into my canoe to examine it at leisure,* while we kept on our way toward Maskoutens, where we arrived on the 7th of June.

* A fine description of the so-called "Indian turnip," or triphyllum, quite common throughout the northwest, and held as an antidote for snake bite.—H. W. B.

SECTION III.

1673—DESCRIPTION OF THE VILLAGE OF MASKOUTENS—WHAT TRANSPIRED BETWEEN THE FATHER AND THE INDIANS—
THE FRENCH BEGIN TO ENTER A NEW AND UNKNOWN COUNTRY, AND REACH THE MISSISSIPPI.

HERE we are then at Maskoutens. [Prairie or Fire made lands, as their name implies.] This word in Algonquin, may mean Fire nation, and that is the name given to them. This is the limit of the discoveries made by the French, for they have not yet passed beyond it.

This town is made up of three nations gathered here, Miamis, Maskoutens, and Kikabous. The first are more civil, liberal and better made; they wear two long earlocks, which give them a good appearance; they have the name of being warriors and seldom send out war parties in vain; they are very docile, listen quietly to what you tell them, and showed themselves so eager to hear Father Allouez when he was instructing them, that they gave him little rest, even at night. The Maskoutens and Kikabous are ruder and more like peasants, compared to the others.

As bark for cabins is rare in this country, they use rushes, which serve them for walls and roof, but which are no great shelter against the wind, and still less against the rain when it falls in torrents. The advantage of this kind of cabins is that they can roll them up, and carry them easily where they like in hunting-time.

When I visited them, I was extremely consoled to see a beautiful cross planted in the midst of the town, adorned with several white skins, red belts, bows and arrows, which these good people had offered to the Great Manitou [such is the name they give to God] to thank him for having had pity on them during the winter, giving them plenty of game when they were in greatest dread of famine.

I felt no little pleasure in beholding the position of this town; the view is beautiful and very picturesque, for from the eminence on which it is perched, the eye discovers on every side prairies spreading away beyond its reach, interspersed with thickets or groves of lofty trees. The soil is very good, producing much corn; the Indians gather also quantities of plums and grapes, from which good wine could be made, if they chose.

No sooner had we arrived than M. Jolliet and I assembled the sachems; he told them that he was sent by our governor to discover new countries, and I, by the Almighty, to illumine them with the light of the gospel; that the Sovereign Master of our lives wished to be known by all nations, and that to obey His will, I did not fear death, to which I exposed myself in such dangerous voyages; that we needed two guides to put us on our way, these, making them a present, we begged them to grant us. This they did very civilly, and even proceeded to speak to us by a present, which was a mat to serve us as a bed on our voyage.

The next day, which was the tenth of June, two Miamis whom they had given us as guides, embarked with us, in the sight of a great crowd, who could wonder enough to see seven Frenchmen alone in two canoes, dare to undertake so strange and so hazardous an expedition.

We knew that there was, three leagues from Maskoutens, a river [the Wisconsin, near Portage City, in that State] emptying into the Mississippi; we knew, too, that the point of the compass we were to hold to reach it, was the west-south-west; but the way is so cut up by marshes and little lakes, that it is easy to go astray, especially as the river leading to it is so covered with wild oats, that you can hardly discover the channel. Hence, we had good need of our two guides, who led us safely to a portage of twenty-seven hundred paces, and helped us to transport our canoes to enter this river, after which they returned, leaving us alone in an unknown country, in the hands of Providence.

We now leave the waters which flow to Quebec, a distance of four or five hundred leagues, to follow those which will henceforth lead us into strange lands. Before embarking, we all began together a new devotion to the Blessed Virgin Immaculate, which we practiced every day, addressing her particular prayers to put under her protection both our persons and the success of our voyage. Then after having encouraged one another, we got into our canoes. The river on which we embarked is called Meskousing; it is very broad, with a sandy bottom, forming many shallows, which render navigation very difficult. It is full of vine-clad islets. On the banks appear fertile lands, diversified with wood, prairie, and hill. Here you find oaks, walnut, whitewood, and another kind of tree with branches armed with long thorns. We saw no small game or fish, but deer and moose in considerable numbers.

Our route was southwest, and after sailing about thirty leagues, we perceived a place which had all the appearances of an iron mine, and in fact, one of our party who had seen some before, averred that the one we had found was very good and very rich. It is covered with three feet of good earth, very near a chain of rock, whose base is covered with fine timber. After forty leagues on this same route, we reached the mouth of our river, and finding ourselves at $42\frac{1}{2}$ degrees N., we safely entered the Mississippi on the 17th of June, with a joy I can not express.

SECTION IV.

1673—OF THE GREAT RIVER CALLED MISSISSIPPI—ITS MOST STRIKING PECULIARITIES—VARIOUS ANIMALS, AND PARTICULARLY THE PISIKIOUS OR WILD CATTLE—THEIR FORM AND DISPOSITION—THE FIRST ILLINOIS VILLAGES REACHED BY THE FRENCH.

HERE, then, we are on this renowned river, of which I have endeavored to remark attentively all the peculiarities. The Mississipi river has its source in several lakes in the country of the nations to the north; it is narrow at the mouth of the Miskousing; its current, which runs south, is slow and gentle; on the right is a considerable chain of very high mountains, and on the left fine lands; it is in many places studded with islands. On sounding, we have found ten fathoms of water. Its breadth is very unequal; it is sometimes three-quarters of a league, and sometimes narrows in to three arpents [220 yards.] We gently follow its course, which bears south and south-east till the forty-second degree. Here we perceive that the whole face is changed; there is now almost no wood or mountain, the islands are more beautiful and covered with finer trees; we see nothing but deer and moose, bustards and wingless swans, for they shed their plumes in this country. From time to time we meet monstrous fish, one of which struck so violently against our canoe, that I took it for a large tree about to knock us to pieces. Another time we perceived on the water a monster with the head of a tiger, a pointed snout like a wild-cat's, a beard, and ears erect, a grayish head and neck all black. We saw no more of them. On casting out nets, we have taken sturgeon and a very extraordinary kind of fish [the "spoon bill"]; it resembles a trout with this difference, that it has a larger mouth, but smaller eyes and snout. Near the latter is a large bone, like a woman's busk, three fingers wide, and a cubit long; the end is circular and as wide as the hand. In leaping out of the water the weight of this often throws it back.

Having descended as far as 41 degrees 28 minutes, following the same direction, we find that turkeys have taken the place of game, and the pisikious, [the Algonquin for Buffalo] or wild cattle, that of other beasts. We call them wild cattle, because they are like our domestic cattle; they are not longer, but almost as big again, and more corpulent; our men having killed one, three of us had considerable trouble in moving it. The head is very large, the forehead flat and a foot and a half broad between the horns, which are exactly like those of our cattle, except that they are black and much larger. Under the neck there is a kind of large crop hanging down, and on the back a pretty high hump. The whole head, the neck, and part of the shoulders, are covered with a great mane like a horse's; it is a crest a foot long, which renders them hideous, and falling over their eyes, prevents their seeing before them. The rest of the body is covered with a coarse curly hair like the wool of our sheep, but much stronger and thicker. It falls in summer, and the skin is then as soft as velvet. At this time the Indians employ the skins to make beautiful robes, which they paint of various colors; the flesh and fat of the pisikious are excellent, and constitute the best dish in banquets. They are very fierce, and not a year passes without their killing some Indian. When attacked, they take a man with their horns, if they can, lift him up, and then dash him to the ground, trample on him, and kill him. When you fire at them from a distance with gun or bow, you must throw yourself on the ground as soon as you fire, and hide in the grass; for, if they perceive the one who fired, they rush on him and attack him. As their feet are large and rather short, they do not generally go very fast, except when they are irritated. They are scattered over the prairies like herds of cattle. I have seen a band of four hundred.

We advanced constantly, but as we did not know where we were going, having already made more than a hundred leagues without having discovered anything but beasts and birds, we kept well on our guard. Accordingly we make only a little fire on the shore at night to prepare our meal, and after supper keep as far from it as possible, passing the night in our canoes, which we anchor in the river pretty far from the bank. Even this did not prevent one of us being always as a sentinel, for fear of a surprise.

Proceeding south and south-southwest, we find ourselves at 41 degrees north; then at 40 degrees and some minutes, partly by southeast and partly by southwest, after having advanced more than sixty leagues since entering the river, without discovering anything.

At last, on the 25th of June, we perceived footprints of men by the water-side, and a beaten path entering a beautiful prairie. We stopped to examine it, and concluding that it was a path leading to some Indian village, we resolved to go and reconnoitre; we accordingly left our two canoes in charge of our people, cautioning them strictly to beware of a surprise; then M. Jolliet and I undertook this rather hazardous discovery for two single men, who thus put themselves at the discretion of an unknown and barbarous people. We followed the little path in silence, and having advanced about two leagues, we discovered a village on the banks of the river, and two others on a hill, half a league from the former.

Then, indeed, we recommended ourselves to God, with all our hearts; and, having implored His help, we passed on undiscovered, and came so near that we even heard the Indians talking. We then deemed it time to announce ourselves, as we did by a cry, which we raised with all our strength, and then halted without advancing any farther. At this cry the Indians rushed out of their cabins, and having probably recognized us as French, especially seeing a black gown, or at least having no reason to distrust us, seeing we were but two, and had made known our coming, they deputed four old men to come and speak with us. Two carried tobacco-pipes well-adorned, and trimmed with many kinds of feathers. They marched slowly, lifting their pipes toward the sun, as if offering them to him to smoke, but yet without uttering a single word. They were a long time coming the little way from the village to us. Having reached us at last, they stopped to consider us attentively. I now took courage, seeing these ceremonies, which are used by them only with friends, and still more on seeing them covered with stuffs, which made me to judge them to be allies. I, therefore, spoke to them first, and asked them who they were; they answered that they were Illinois, and, in token of peace, they presented their pipes to smoke. They then invited us to their village where all the tribe awaited us with impatience. These pipes for smoking are called in the country, calumets, a word that is so much in use, that I shall be obliged to employ it in order to be understood, as I shall have to speak of it frequently.

SECTION V.

1673—HOW THE ILLINOIS RECEIVED THE FATHER IN THEIR VILLAGE.

AT THE door of the cabin in which we were to be received, was an old man awaiting us in a very remarkable posture, which is their usual ceremony in receiving strangers. This man was standing, perfectly naked, with his hands stretched out and raised toward the sun, as if he wished to screen himself from its rays, which nevertheless passed through his fingers to his face. When we came near him, he paid us this compliment: "How beautiful is the sun, O Frenchman, when thou comest to visit us! All our town awaits thee, and thou shalt enter all our cabins in peace." He then took us into his, where there was a crowd of people, who devoured us with their eyes, but kept a profound silence. We heard, however, these words occasionally addressed to us: "Well done, brothers, to visit us!"

As soon as we had taken our places, they showed us the usual civility of the country, which is to present the calumet. You must not refuse it, unless you would pass for an enemy, or at least for being impolite. It is, however, enough to pretend to smoke. While all the old men smoked after us to honor us, some came to invite us on behalf of the great sachem of all the Illinois to proceed to his town, where he wished to hold a council with us. We went with a good retinue, for all the people who had never seen a Frenchman among them could not tire looking at us; they threw themselves on the grass by the wayside, they ran ahead, then turned and walked back to see us again. All this was done without noise, and with marks of a great respect entertained for us.

Having arrived at the great sachem's town, we espied him at his cabin-door, between two old men, all three standing naked, with their calumet turned to the sun. He harangued us in a few words, to congratulate us on our arrival, and then presented us his calumet and made us smoke; at the same time we entered his cabin, where we received all their usual greetings. Seeing all assembled and in silence, I spoke to them by four presents which I made; by the first, I said that we marched in peace to visit the nations on the river to the sea; by the second, I declared to them that God their Creator had pity on them, since, after their having been so long ignorant of Him, He wished to become known to all nations; that I was sent on His behalf with this design; that it was for them to acknowledge and obey Him; by the third, that the great chief of the French informed them that he spread peace everywhere, and had overcome the Iroquois. Lastly, by the fourth, we begged them to give us all the information they had of the sea, and of the nations through which we should have to pass to reach it.

When I had finished my speech, the sachem rose, and laying his hand on the head of a little slave, whom he was about to give us, spoke thus: "I thank thee, Blackgown, and thee, Frenchman," addressing M. Jollyinget, "for taking so much pains to come and visit us; never has the earth been so beautiful, nor the sun so bright, as today; never has our river been so calm, nor so free from rocks, which your canoes have removed as they passed; never has our tobacco had so fine a flavor, nor our corn appeared so beautiful as we behold it today. Here is my son, that I give thee, that thou mayest know my heart. I pray thee to take pity on me and all my nation. Thou knowest the Great Spirit who has made us all; thou speakest to Him and hearest His word; ask Him to give me life and health, and come and dwell with us, that we may know Him." Saying this, he placed the little slave near us and made us a second present, an all-mysterious calumet, which they value more than a slave; by this present he showed us his esteem for our governor, after the account we had given of him; by the third, he begged us, on behalf of his whole nation, not to proceed further, on account of the great dangers to which we exposed ourselves.

I replied, that I did not fear death, and that I esteemed no happiness greater than that of losing my life for the glory of Him who made all. But this these poor people could not understand.

The council was followed by a great feast which consisted of four courses, which we had to take with all their ways; the first course was a great wooden dish full of sagamity, that is to say, of Indian meal boiled in water and seasoned with grease. The master of ceremonies, with a spoonful of sagamity, presented it three or four times to my mouth, as we would do with a little child; he did the same to M. Jollyet. For the second course, he brought in a second dish containing three fish; he took some pains to remove the bones, and having blown upon it to cool it, put it in my mouth, as we would food to a bird; for the third course, they produced a large dog, which they had just killed, but learning that we did not eat it, it was withdrawn. Finally, the fourth course was a piece of wild ox, the fattest portions of which were put into our mouths.

After this feast we had to visit the whole village, which consists of full three hundred cabins. While we marched through the streets, an orator was constantly haranguing, to oblige all to see us without being troublesome; we were everywhere presented with belts, garters, and other articles made of the hair of the bear and wild cattle, dyed red, yellow, and gray. These are their rareties; but not being of consequence, we did not burthen ourselves with them.

We slept in the sachem's cabin, and the next day took leave of him, promising to pass back through his town in four moons. He escorted us to our canoes with nearly six hundred persons, who saw us embark, evincing in every possible way the pleasure our visit had given them. On taking leave, I personally promised that I would return the next year to stay with them, and instruct them. But before leaving the Illinois country, it will be well to relate what I remarked of their customs and manners.

SECTION VI.

1673—CHARACTER OF THE ILLINOIS—THEIR MANNERS AND CUSTOMS—THEIR ESTEEM OF THE CALUMET, OR TOBACCO PIPE, AND THEIR DANCE IN ITS HONOR.

TO say Illinois is, in their language, to say “the men,” as if other Indians compared to them were mere beasts. And it must be admitted that they have an air of humanity that we had not remarked in the other nations that we had seen on the way. The short stay I made with them did not permit me to acquire all the information I would have desired. The following is what I remarked in their manners:

They are divided into several villages, some of which are quite distant from that of which I speak, and which is called Peouarea. This produces a diversity in their language which in general has a great affinity to the Algonquin, so that we easily understood one another. They are mild and tractable in their disposition, as we experienced in the reception they gave us. They have many wives, of whom they are extremely jealous; they watch them carefully, and cut off their nose or ears when they do not behave well: I saw several who bore the marks of their infidelity. They are well-formed, nimble, and very adroit in using the bow and arrow; they use guns also, which they buy of our Indian allies who trade with the French; they use them especially to terrify their enemies by the noise and smoke, the others lying too far to the west, have never seen them, and do not know their use. They are war-like and formidable to distant nations in the south and west, where they go to carry off slaves, whom they make an article of trade, selling them at a high price to other nations for goods.

The distant nations against whom they go to war, have no knowledge of Europeans; they are acquainted with neither iron or copper, and have nothing but stone knives. When the Illinois set out on a war party, the whole village is notified by a loud cry made at the door of their huts the morning and evening before they set out. The chiefs are distinguished from the soldiers by their wearing a scarf ingeniously made of the hair of bears and wild oxen. The face is painted with red lead or ochre, which is found in great quantities a few days' journey from their village. They live by game, which is abundant in this country, and on Indian corn, of which they always gather a good crop, so that they have never suffered from famine. They also sow beans and melons, which are excellent, especially those with a red seed. Their squashes are not of the best; they dry them in the sun, to eat in the winter and spring.

Their cabins are very large; they are lined and floored with rush-mats. They make all their dishes of wood, and their spoons of the bones of the buffalo, which they cut so well, that it serves them to eat their sagamity, easily.

They are liberal in their maladies, and believe that the medicines given them operate in proportion to the presents they have made the medicine-man. Their only clothes are skins; their women are always dressed very modestly and decently, while the men do not take any pains to cover themselves. Through what superstition I know not, some Illinois, as well as some Nadouessi [Sioux or Dacotas], while yet young, assume the female dress, and keep it all their life. There is some mystery about it, for they never marry, and glory in debasing themselves to do all that is done by women; yet they go to war, though allowed to use only a club, and not the bow and arrow, the peculiar arm of men; they are present at all the juggleries and solemn dances in honor of the calumet; they are permitted to sing, but not to dance; they attend the councils, and nothing can be decided without their advice; finally, by the profession of an extraordinary life, they pass for manitous [that is, for genii], or persons of consequence.

It now only remains for me to speak of the calumet, than which there is nothing among them more mysterious or more esteemed. Men do not pay to the crowns and sceptres of kings the honor they pay to it; it seems to be the god of peace and war, the arbiter of life and death. Carry it about you and show it, and you can march fearlessly amid enemies, who even in the heat of battle lay down their arms when it is shown. Hence the Illinois gave me one, to serve as my safeguard amid all the nations that I had to pass on my voyage. There is a calumet for peace, and one for war, distinguished only by the color of the feathers with which they are adorned, red being the sign of war. They use them also for settling disputes, strengthening alliances, and speaking to strangers. It is made of a polished red stone, like marble, so pierced that one end serves to hold the tobacco, while the other is fastened on the stem, which is a stick two feet long, as thick as a common cane, and pierced in the middle; it is ornamented with the head and neck of different birds of beautiful plumage; they also add large feathers of red, green, and other colors, with which it is all covered. They esteem it particularly because they regard it as the calumet of the sun; and, in fact, they present it to him to smoke when they wish to obtain calm, or rain, or fair weather. They scruple to bathe at the beginning of summer, or to eat new fruits, till they have danced it. They do it thus:

The calumet dance, which is very famous among these Indians, is performed only for important matters, sometimes to strengthen a peace or to assemble for some great war; at other times for a public rejoicing; sometimes they do this honor to a nation who is invited to be present; sometimes they use it to receive some important personage, as if they wished to give him the entertainment of a ball or comedy. In winter the ceremony is performed in a cabin, in summer in the open fields. They select a place, surrounded with trees, so as to be sheltered beneath their foliage against the heat of the sun. In the middle of the space they spread out a large party-colored mat of rushes; this serves as a carpet, on which to place with honor the god of the one who gives the dance; for every one has his own god, or manitou as they call it, which is a snake, a bird, or something of the kind, which they have dreamed in their sleep, and in which they put all their trust for the success of their wars, fishing, and hunts. Near this manitou and at its right, they put the calumet in honor of which the feast is given, making around about it a kind of trophy, spreading there the arms used by the warriors of these tribes, namely, the war-club, bow, hatchet, quiver, and arrows.

Things being thus arranged, and the hour for dancing having arrived, those who are to sing take the most honorable place under the foliage. They are the men and the women who have the finest voices, and who accord perfectly. The spectators then come and take their places around under the branches; but each one on arriving must salute the manitou, which he does by inhaling the smoke and then puffing it from his mouth upon it, as if offering incense. Each one goes first and takes the calumet respectfully, and supporting it with both hands, makes it dance in cadence, suiting himself to the air of the song; he makes it go through various figures, sometimes showing it to the whole assembly by turning it from side to side.

After this, he who is to begin the dance appears in the midst of the assembly, and goes first; sometimes he presents it to the sun, as if he wished it to smoke; sometimes he inclines it to the earth; and at other times he spreads its wings as if for it to fly; at other times, he approaches it to the mouths of the spectators for them to smoke, the whole in cadence. This is the first scene of the ballet.

The second consists in a combat, to the sound of a kind of drum, which succeeds the songs, or rather joins them, harmonizing quite well. The dancer beckons to some brave to come and take the arms on the mat, and challenges him to fight to the sound of the drums; the other approaches, takes his bow and arrow, and begins a duel against the dancer who has no defence but the calumet. This spectacle is very pleasing, especially as it is always done in time, for one attacks, the other defends; one strikes, the other parries; one flies, the other pursues; then he who fled faces and puts his enemy to flight. This is all done so well with measured steps, and the regular sound of voices and drums, that it might pass for a very pretty opening of a ballet in France.

The third scene consists of a speech delivered by the holder of the calumet, for the combat being ended without bloodshed, he relates the battles he was in, the victories he has gained; he names the nations, the places, the captives he has taken, and as a reward, he who presides at the dance presents him with a beautiful beaver robe, or something else, which he receives, and then he presents the calumet to another, who hands it to a third, and so to all the rest, till all having done their duty, the presiding chief presents the calumet itself to the nation invited to this ceremony in token of the eternal peace which shall reign between the two tribes. * * * * *

We take leave of our Illinois about the end of June, at three o'clock in the afternoon, and embark in sight of all the tribe, who admire our little canoes, having never seen the like.

We descend, following the course of the river, toward another called Pekitanoui, [the Missouri] which empties into the Mississippi, coming from the northwest, of which I have something considerable to say, after I have related what I have remarked of this river.

Passing by some pretty high rocks which line the river, I perceived a plant which seemed to me very remarkable. Its root is like small turnips linked together by little fibres, which had the taste of carrots. From this root springs a leaf as wide as the hand, half of a finger thick with spots in the middle; from this leaf spring other leaves like the sockets of chandeliers in our salons. Each leaf bears five or six bell-shaped yellow flowers. We found abundance of mulberries, as large as the French, and a small fruit which we took at first for olives, but it had the taste of an orange, and another as large as a hen's egg; we broke it in half and found two separations, in each of which were encased eight or ten seed shaped like an almond, which are quite good when ripe. The tree which bears them, has, however, a very bad smell, and its leaf resembles that of the walnut. There are also, in the prairies, fruit resembling our filberts, but more tender; the leaves are larger, and spring from a stalk crowned at the top with a head like a sunflower, in which all these nuts are neatly arranged; they are very good cooked or raw.

As we coasted along rocks [near Alton], frightful for their height and length, we saw two monsters painted on one of these rocks, which startled us at first, and on which the boldest Indian dare not gaze long. They are as large as a calf, with horns on the head like a deer, a fearful look, red eyes, bearded like a tiger, the face somewhat like a man's, the body covered with scales, and the tail so long that it twice makes the turn of the body, passing over the head and down between the legs, and ending at last in a fish's tail. Green, red, and a kind of black, are the colors employed. On the whole, these two monsters are so well painted, that we could not believe any Indian to have been the designer, as good painters in France would find it hard to do as well; besides this, they are so high upon the rock that it is hard to get conveniently at them to paint them. This is pretty nearly the figure of these monsters, as I drew it off.

As we were discoursing of them, sailing gently down a beautiful, still, clear water, we heard the noise of a rapid into which we were about to fall. I have seen nothing more frightful; a mass of large trees, entire, with branches, real floating islands, came rushing from the mouth of the river Pekitanoui, so impetuously, that we could not, without great danger, expose ourselves to pass across. The agitation was so great that the water was all muddy and could not get clear.

Pekitanoui is a considerable river which coming from very far in the northwest, empties into the Missisipi. Many Indian towns are ranged along this river, and I hope, by its means, to make the discovery of the Red, or California sea.

We judged by the direction the Missisipi takes, that if it keeps on the same course it has its mouth in the Gulf of Mexico; it would be very advantageous to find that which leads to the South sea, toward California and this, as I said, I hope to find by Pekitanoui, following the account which the Indians have given me; for from them I learn that advancing up this river for five or six days, you come to a beautiful prairie twenty or thirty leagues long, which you must cross to the northwest. It terminates at another little river on which you can embark, it not being difficult to transport canoes over so beautiful a country as that prairie. This second river runs southwest for ten or fifteen leagues, after which it enters a small lake, which is the source of another deep river, running to the west, where it empties into the sea. I have hardly any doubt that this is the Red sea, and I do not despair of one day making the discovery, if God does me this favor and grants me health, in order to be able to publish the gospel to all the nations of this new world who have so long been plunged in heathen darkness.

Let us resume our route after having escaped as best we could, the dangerous rapid caused by the obstacle of which I have spoken.

SECTION VII.

1673—NEW COUNTRIES DISCOVERED BY THE FATHER—VARIOUS PARTICULARS—MEETING WITH SOME INDIANS—FIRST TIDINGS OF THE SEA AND OF EUROPEANS—GREAT DANGER AVOIDED BY THE CALUMET.

AFTER having made about twenty leagues due south, and a little less to the southeast, we came to a river called Ouaboukigou [Wabash, as the Ohio was early called], the mouth of which is at 36 degrees north. Before we arrived there, we passed by a place dreaded by the Indians, because they think that there is a manitou there, that is, a demon who devours all who pass, and of this it was, that they had spoken, when they wished to deter us from our enterprise. The devil is this [rapids above Cairo]—a small bay, full of rocks, some twenty feet high, where the whole current of the river is whirled; hurled back against that which follows, and checked by a neighboring island, the mass of water is forced through a narrow channel: all this is not done without a furious combat of the waters tumbling over each other, nor without a great roaring, which strikes terror into Indians who fear everything.

It did not prevent our passing and reaching Oabskigo. This river comes from the country on the east, inhabited by the people called Chaouanons, in such numbers that they reckon as many as twenty-three villages in one district, and fifteen in another, lying quite near each other; they are by no means warlike, and are the people the Iroquois go far to seek in order to wage an unprovoked war upon them; and, as these poor people can not defend themselves, they allow themselves to be taken and carried off like sheep, and innocent as they are, do not fail to experience, at times, the barbarity of the Iroquois, who burn them cruelly.

A little above, [below?], this river of which I have just spoken, are cliffs where our men perceived an iron mine, which they deemed very rich; there are many veins, and a bed a foot thick. Large masses are found combined with pebbles. There is also there a kind of unctuous earth of three colors, purple, violet, and red, the water in which it is washed becomes blood-red. There is also a very heavy, red sand; I put some on a paddle, and it took the color so well, that the water did not efface it for fifteen days that I used it in rowing.

Here we began to see canoes, and large reeds [cane brakes] on the banks of the river; they are of a very beautiful green; all the knots are crowned with long, narrow, pointed leaves; they are very high, and so thick-set, that the wild cattle find it difficult to make their way through them.

Up to the present time we had not been troubled by musquitoes, but we now, as it were, entered their country. Let me tell you what the Indians of these parts do to defend themselves against them. They raise a scaffolding, the floor of which is made of simple poles, and consequently a mere grate-work to give passage to the smoke of a fire which they build beneath. This drives off the little animals, as they can not bear it. The Indians sleep on the poles, having pieces of bark stretched above them to keep off the rain. This scaffolding shelters them too from the excessive and insupportable heat of the country; for they lie in the shade in the lower story, and are thus sheltered from the rays of the sun, enjoy the cool air which passes freely through the scaffold.

With the same view we were obliged to make on the water a kind of a cabin with our sails, to shelter ourselves from the musquitoes and the sun. While thus borne on at the will of the current, we perceived on the shore Indians armed with guns, with which they awaited us. I first presented my feathered calumet, while my comrades stood to arms, ready to fire on the first volley of the Indians. I hailed them in Huron, but they answered me by a word which seemed to us a declaration of war. They were, however, as much frightened as ourselves, and what we took for a signal of war, was an invitation to come near, that they might give us food; we accordingly landed and entered their cabins, where they presented us wild-beef and bear's oil with white plums, which are excellent. They have guns, axes, hoes, knives, beads, and double glass bottles in which they keep the powder. They wear their hair long and mark their bodies in the Iroquois fashion; the head-dress and clothing of their women were like those of the Huron squaws.

They assured us that it was not more than ten days' journey to the sea; that they bought stuffs and other articles of Europeans on the eastern side; that these Europeans had rosaries and pictures; that they played on instruments; that some were like me, who received them well. I did not, however, see any one who seemed to have received any instruction in the faith; such as I could, I gave them with some medals.

This news roused our courage and made us take up our paddles with renewed ardor. We advanced then, and now begin to see less prairie land, because both sides of the river are lined with lofty woods. The cotton-wood, elm and white-wood, are of admirable height and size. The numbers of wild cattle we heard bellowing, made us believe the prairies near. We also saw quails on the water's edge, and killed a little parrot with half the head red, the rest, with the neck, yellow, and the body green. We had now descended to near 33 degrees north, having almost always gone south, when on the water's edge we perceived a village called Mitchigamea. We had recourse to our patroness and guide, the Blessed Virgin Immaculate; and, indeed, we needed her aid, for we heard from afar the Indians exciting one another to the combat by continual yells. They were armed with bows, arrows, axes, war-clubs, and bucklers, and prepared to attack us by land and water; some embarked in large wooden canoes, a part to ascend, the rest to descend, the river, so as to cut off our way, and surround us completely. Those on shore kept going and coming, as if about to begin the attack. In fact, some young men sprang into the water to come and seize my canoe, but the current having compelled them to return to the shore, one of them threw his war-club at us, but it passed over our heads without doing us any harm. In vain I showed the calumet, and made gestures to explain that we had not come as enemies. The alarm continued, and they were about to pierce us from all sides with their arrows, when God suddenly touched the hearts of the old men on the water-side, doubtless at the sight of our calumet, which at a distance they had not distinctly recognized, but as I showed it continually, they were touched, restrained the ardor of their youth, and two of the chiefs having thrown their bows and quivers into our canoe, and as it were at our feet, entered and brought us to the shore, where we disembarked, not without fear on our part. We had at first to speak by signs, for not one understood a word of the six languages I knew; at last an old man was found who spoke a little Illinois.

We showed by our presents, that we were going to the sea; they perfectly understood our meaning, but I know not whether they understood what I told them of God, and the things which concerned their salvation. It is a seed cast in the earth which will bear its fruit in season. We got no answer, except that we would learn all we desired at another great village called Akamsea, only eight or ten leagues farther down the river. They presented us with sagamity and fish, and we spent the night among them, not, however, without some uneasiness.

SECTION VIII.

1673—RECEPTION GIVEN TO THE FRENCH IN THE LAST OF THE TOWNS WHICH THEY SAW—MANNERS AND CUSTOMS OF THESE SAVAGES—REASONS FOR NOT GOING FURTHER.

WE embarked next morning with our interpreter, preceded by ten Indians in a canoe. Having arrived about half a league from Akamsea [Arkansas], we saw two canoes coming toward us. The commander was standing up holding in his hand the calumet, with which he made signs according to the custom of the country; he approached us, singing quite agreeably, and invited us to smoke, after which he presented us some sagamity and bread made of Indian corn, of which we ate a little. He now took the lead, making us signs to follow slowly. Meanwhile they had prepared us a place under the war-chiefs' scaffold; it was neat and carpeted with fine rush mats, on which they made us sit down, having around us immediately the sachems, then the braves, and last of all, the people in crowds. We fortunately found among them a young man who understood Illinois much better than the interpreter whom we had brought from Mitchigamea. By means of him I first spoke to the assembly by the ordinary presents; they admired what I told them of God, and the mysteries of our holy faith, and showed a great desire to keep me with them to instruct them.

We then asked them what they knew of the sea; they replied that we were only ten days' journey from it [we could have made this distance in five days]; that they did not know the nations who inhabited it, because their enemies prevented their commerce with these Europeans; that the hatchets, knives, and beads, which we saw, were sold them, partly by the nations to the east, and partly by an Illinois town four days' journey to the west; that the Indians with fire-arms whom we had met, were their enemies who cut off their passage to the sea, and prevented their making the acquaintance of the Europeans, or having any commerce with them; that, besides, we should expose ourselves greatly by passing on, in consequence of the continual war-parties that their enemies sent out on the river, since being armed and used to war, we could not, without evident danger, advance on that river which they constantly occupy.

During this converse, they kept continually bringing us in wooden dishes of sagamity, Indian corn whole, or pieces of dog-flesh; the whole day was spent in feasting.

These Indians are very courteous and liberal of what they have, but they are very poorly off for food, not daring to go and hunt the wild-cattle, for fear of their enemies. It is true, they have Indian corn in abundance, which they sow at all seasons; we saw some ripe; more just sprouting, and more just in the ear, so that they sow three crops a year. They cook it in large earthen pots, which are very well made; they have also plates of baked earth, which they employ for various purposes. The men go naked, and wear their hair short; they have the nose and ears pierced, and beads hanging from them. The women are dressed in wretched skins; they braid their hair in two plaits, which falls behind their ears; they have no ornaments to decorate their persons. Their banquets are without any ceremonies; they serve their meats in large dishes, and every one eats as much as he pleases, and they give the rest to one another. Their language is extremely difficult, and with all my efforts, I could not succeed in pronouncing some words. Their cabins, which are long and wide, are made of bark; they sleep at the two extremities, which are raised about two feet from the ground. They keep their corn in large baskets, made of cane, or in gourds, as large as half barrels. They do not know what a beaver is; their riches consisting in the hides of wild cattle. They never see snow, and know the winter only by the rain which falls oftener than in summer. We eat no fruit there but water-melons; if they knew how to cultivate their ground, they might have plenty of all kinds.

In the evening the sachems held a secret council on the design of some to kill us for plunder, but the chief broke up all these schemes, and sending for us, danced the calumet in our presence, in the manner I have described above, as a mark of perfect assurance; and then, to remove all fears, presented it to me.

M. Jollyet and I held another council to deliberate on what we should do, whether we should push on, or rest satisfied with the discovery that we had made. After having attentively considered that we were not far from the Gulf of Mexico, the basin of which is 31 degrees, 40 minutes north, and we at 33 degrees 40 minutes, so that we could not be more than two or three days' journey off; that the Missisipi undoubtedly had its mouth in Florida or the Gulf of Mexico, and not on the east, in Virginia, whose seacoast is at 34 degrees north, which we had passed, without having as yet reached the sea, nor on the western side in California, because that would require a west, or west-southwest course, and we had always been going south. We considered, moreover, that we risked losing the fruit of this voyage, of which we could give no information, if we should throw ourselves into the hands of the Spaniards, who would undoubtedly, at least, hold us as prisoners. Besides, it was clear, that we were not in a condition to resist Indians allied to Europeans, numerous and expert in the use of fire-arms, who continually infested the lower part of the river. Lastly, we had gathered all the information that could be desired from the expedition. All these reasons induced us to resolve to return; this we announced to the Indians, and after a day's rest, prepared for it.

SECTION IX.

1673—RETURN OF THE FATHER, AND THE BAPTISM OF A DYING CHILD.

AFTER a month's navigation down the Missisipi, from the 42d to below the 34th degree, and after having published the gospel as well as I could to the nations I had met, we left the village of Akamsea on the 17th of July, to retrace our steps. We accordingly ascended the Missisipi, which gave us great trouble to stem its currents. We left it indeed, about the 28th degree, to enter another river, [the Illinois], which greatly shortened our way, and brought us, with little trouble, to the lake of the Illinois [as Lake Michigan was early called].

We had seen nothing like this river for the fertility of the land, its prairies, woods, wild cattle, stag, deer, wild-cats, bustards, swans, ducks, parrots, and even beaver; its many little lakes and rivers. That on which we sailed, is broad, deep, and gentle for sixty-five leagues. During the spring and part of the summer, the only portage is half a league.

We found there an Illinois town [a few miles below Ottawa, Ill.], called Kaskaskia, composed of seventy-four cabins; they received us well, and compelled me to promise to return and instruct them. One of the chiefs of this tribe, with his young men, escorted us to the Illinois lake, whence at last we returned in the close of September to the bay of Fetid, whence we had set out in the beginning of June.

Had all this voyage caused but the salvation of a single soul, I should deem all my fatigue well repaid, and this I have reason to think, for, when I was returning, I passed by the Indians of Peoria. I was three days announcing the faith in all their cabins, after which, as we were embarking, they brought me on the water's edge a dying child, which I baptized a little before it expired, by an admirable Providence for the salvation of that innocent soul.

1671-1678—FRENCH PLANS OF CONQUEST.

LA SALLE'S LETTERS PATENT, ETC.

EDITORIAL.

THE success of the French in their plan of colonizing was so great, and the trade with the savages, exchanging fineries, guns, knives, and more than all, spirituous liquors for valuable furs, yielded such exorbitant profits that an impetus was given to still greater enterprises. They involved no less than the hemming in of the British Colonies to the Atlantic coast.

These purposes are boldly avowed in a letter of M. Talon, the King's enterprising Intendant at Quebec, in 1671, to the great Colbert at Paris. The letter is as follows:

Says Talon: "I am no Courtier, and assert, not through a mere desire to please the King, nor without just reason, that this portion of the French Monarchy will become something grand." "What I discover around me causes me to foresee this, and those colonies of various nations so long settled on the seaboard already tremble with affright in view of what his Majesty has accomplished here in the interior within seven years. Measures adopted to confine them within narrow limits by taking possession, which I have caused to be effected do not allow them to spread, without subjecting themselves at the same time to be treated as usurpers and to have war waged against them, and this truth is what by all their acts they seem to greatly fear. They already know that your name is spread abroad among the savages throughout all those countries and that he alone is there regarded by them, [the savages], as the arbitrator of peace and war. All detach themselves insensibly from other Europeans and excepting the Iroquois, of whom I am not as yet assured, we may safely promise ourselves to make the others take up arms whenever we please."*

It is not the purpose of the Editor here to detail the earlier life of Robert Cavalier, later ennobled as the Sieur de la Salle. It is sufficient to refer only to so much of it as relates to the Northwest, to Illinois and the Mississippi Valley.

The French had a decayed wooden fort near the present City of Kingston, Canada. It was named Fort Frontenac and at the time here referred to, it was on the frontier of Canada. La Salle had been put in charge of it. It was a check against the forays of the Iroquois nation upon the settled parts of Canada and its Indian allies. And in 1674 La Salle returned to France and petitioned the King to grant him the Seigniory of Fort Frontenac, together with four leagues of country along the border of Lake Frontenac, [Lake Ontario], and the adjacent islands and inlets, with the usual rights and privileges, that pertained to those who held lands in this country in Seigniory.

[1]. In consideration of this he agreed to repair and maintain said fort in a better state of defense; to have a garrison there equal to that at Montreal, and as many as fifteen to twenty laborers during the first two years to clear and till the land, to provide it, [the fort], with necessary artillery, arms and ammunition so long as he should command there in his Majesty's name.

* Talon to the Minister, Quebec, November 2d, 1671.—H. W. B.

[2]. To repay Count de Frontenac, his Majesty's Governor and Lieutenant General in Canada, the expense he incurred for the establishment of said fort amounting to the sum of twelve to thirteen thousand livres as proved by the statements thereof prepared.

[3]. To make grants of land to all those willing to settle there in the manner usual in said country; to allow them the trade when the settlement would be in the condition required by the edicts and regulations of the Sovereign Counsel of said country.

[4]. To attract thither the greatest number possible of Indians; to grant them land for villages and tillage; to teach them trades and induce them to lead lives more conformable to ours, as the said La Salle had begun to do with some success when he commanded there.

[5]. To build a church when there would be one hundred persons; meanwhile to entertain from this very moment one or two Recollet Friars to perform devout services and administer the sacraments there.

[6]. If his Majesty so accepts these proposals he is very humbly supplicated to grant to La Salle letters of Nobility, in consideration of the voyages and discoveries which he made in that country at his own expense during the seven years he has continually lived there, the services he rendered in the country, and those he will continue to render; and all other letters necessary to serve him in the possessory titles to said Seigniory.*

La Salle's petition was granted fully.

Later on La Salle replaced the wooden structure with an enlarged Fort made of stone.

La Salle again sailed for Paris, where he and Colbert matured their plan for La Salle to make further discoveries. Agreeably to his petition the King granted him a permit, of May 12th, 1678, "to find a port for the King's vessels in the Gulf of Mexico, to discover the western parts of New France and find a way to penetrate Mexico."

* La Salle's petition for the grant of Fort Frontenac.—H. W. B.

Nothing is said about finding a passage to the South Sea, or discovering where the Mississippi river empties its waters. The explorations of Jolliet and Marquette had settled that geographical problem beyond all cavil. La Salle was further authorized to make new discoveries, construct forts at such places as he thought proper and to enjoy the same monopoly in those places as at Fort Frontenac. All this was on condition that the enterprise should be at his expense, to be completed within five years, and that he should not trade with the savages about the outlets of Lake Superior, or other nations who came there to carry their peltries and beavers to Montreal. Instead, he and his associates were given the privilege of an exclusive trade in Cibola skins.*

The above is condensed from La Salle's license of May 12th, 1678.

Before leaving France the Prince de Conti introduced his friend, Henri de Tonty to La Salle. Being out of employment Tonty, at the instance of the Prince entered the services of La Salle, and suffered the privations with him and became an important historian of his adventures.

Ready and alert, patient and of great courage, quiet and prudent he furthered all of La Salle's plans, followed and defended him under the most dangerous trials with an unselfish fidelity rarely known.

With power thus enlarged La Salle, with Tonty and thirty men, among whom were pilots, sailors, carpenters and other mechanics, with a supply of material necessary for the intended expedition, left France for Quebec. Here the party were joined by some Canadians and was sent forward to Fort Frontenac.

* Cibola was the Spanish name for the American buffalo.

Here he met Louis Hennepin, a Franciscan Friar, whom it seems had been sent thither along with Fathers Gabriel de la Ribourde and Zenobius Membre, all of the same religious order and chosen to accompany La Salle's expedition.

These Fathers were of a religious order of the Roman Catholic Church. They also were known as grey friars, or grey gowns because their robes were all of that color. They were also known in France, Belgium and Holland as Recollets. Like the Jesuit Fathers they were prominent in the missionary work of Canada and the Mississippi; and their writings form an important part of their first known history.

Father Hennepin became the historian of this expedition of La Salle's as far as the Editor here deems it pertinent to bring it before the reader for the purpose of this volume. Indeed, we would not know of many of the details of La Salle's voyage from Fort Frontenac through the lakes, their connecting rivers or straits and on the Illinois river, but for the account Hennepin has given.

Hennepin wrote three volumes, at as many different times, of his voyage. The first was issued in 1683 at Paris: the second at Utrecht by William Broedelet in 1697; and the third at the same place by Antoine Schouten in 1698. The same year the two last named volumes were translated into English and published at London. The first publication of Hennepin which is styled "Description de la Louisiane" of 1683 remained in the original French for nearly two hundred years, when it was translated into English in 1880 by the late Dr. John Gilmary Shea, with many references or foot notes by that most eminent scholar and learned historian.

Without entering upon the controversy as to the plagiarisms and falsehoods in Hennepin's later volumes, his statements in the first are regarded as substantially true. He was vain, loquacious and inclined to exaggerate, and would often portray himself as the principal in affairs where he took only a subordinate part.* With this explanation we quote from Hennepin as follows:

1679-1680—HENNEPIN'S NARRATIVE FROM HIS "LA LOUISIANE" OF 1683.

Our boat being in the water out of reach of insult, I proceeded to the fort by Lake Frontenac, in the little brigantine in order to rejoin our Recollects who resided there, in order to enjoy spiritual consolation with them, obtain wine for the celebration of masses, and make the Sieur de la Salle a report of affairs, and we proceeded with him, we three Recollect missionaries, to Niagara, in the beginning of the month of August in the same year, 1679. He found his bark ready to sail, but his people told him that they had not been able to make it ascend beyond the entrance of Lake Conty, [Erie] not having been able to stem with sails the strong current of Niagara river. We embarked to the number of thirty-two persons, with our two Recollect Fathers who had come to join me, our people having laid in a good supply of arms, merchandise, and seven small iron cannon.

* For example, while at Upper Peoria Lake, the Sioux came there clamoring to La Salle for traders. He put Michel Accan and another trusted voyager, in charge of a canoe full of suitable goods, to go down the Illinois and thence on, up the Mississippi to those savages. Hennepin, sent along as a missionary, assumes that he was the principal in the expedition.—The Editor.

At last, contrary to the pilot's opinion, we succeeded in ascending Niagara river. He made his bark advance by sails when the wind was strong enough, and he had it towed in the most difficult places, and thus we happily reached the entrance of Lake Conty.

We made sail the 7th of the month of August, in the same year 1679, steering west by south. After the "Te Deum" we fired all the cannon and wall pieces, in presence of several Iroquois warriors who were bringing in prisoners from the nations on the prairies, situated more than five hundred leagues from their country, and these savages did not neglect to give a description of the size of our vessel to the Dutch of New York, with whom the Iroquois carry on a great trade in furs, which they carry to them in order to obtain fire arms and goods to clothe themselves.

Our voyage was so fortunate that on the morning of the tenth day, the feast of Saint Lawrence, we reached the entrance of the Detroit [strait] by which Lake Orleans empties into Lake Conty, and which is one hundred leagues from Niagara river. This strait is thirty leagues long and almost everywhere a league wide, except in the middle where it expands and forms a lake of circular form, and ten leagues in diameter, which we called Lake St. Clare, on account of our passing through it, on that Saint's day.

The country on both sides of this beautiful strait is adorned with fine open plains, and you can see numbers of stags, does, deer, bears, by no means fierce, and very good to eat, poules d'inde, and all kinds of game, swans in abundance. Our guys were loaded and decked with several wild animals cut up, which our Indian and our Frenchmen killed. The rest of the strait is covered with forests, fruit trees like walnuts, chestnuts, plum and apple trees, wild vines loaded with grapes, of which we made some little wine. There is timber fit for building. It is the place in which deer most delight.

We found the current at the entrance of this strait as strong as the tide is before Rouen. We ascended it, nevertheless, steering north and northeast, as far as Lake Orleans. There is little depth as you enter and leave Lake St. Clare, especially as you leave it. The discharge from Lake Orleans divides at this place into several small channels, almost all barred by sandbanks. We were obliged to sound them all, and at last discovered a very fine one, with a depth of at least two or three fathoms of water, and almost a league wide at all points. Our bark was detained here several days by head winds, and this difficulty having been surmounted, we encountered a still greater one at the entrance of Lake Orleans. The north wind which had been blowing some time rather violently, and which drives the waters of the three great lakes into the strait, had so increased the ordinary current there, that it was as furious as the bore is before Caudebec. We could not stem it under sail, although we were then aided by a strong south wind; but as the shore was very fine, we landed twelve of our men who towed it along the beach for half a quarter of an hour, at the end of which we entered Lake Orleans on the 23d of the month of August, and for the second time we chanted Te Deum in thanksgiving, blessing God, who here brought us in sight of a great bay in this lake, where our ancient Recollects had resided to instruct the Hurons in the faith, in the first landing of the French in Canada, and these Indians once very numerous have been for the most part destroyed by the Iroquois.

The same day the bark ran along the east coast of the lake, with a fair wind, heading north by east, till evening when the wind having shifted to southwest with great violence, we headed northwest, and the next day we found ourselves in sight of land, having crossed by night a great bay, called Sakinam, which sets in, more than thirty leagues.

On the 24th we continued to head northwest till evening, when we were becalmed among some islands, where there was only a fathom and a half or two fathoms of water. We kept on with the lower sails a part of the night to seek an anchorage, but finding none where there was a good bottom, and the wind beginning to blow from the west, we headed north, so as to gain deep water and wait for day, and we spent the night in sounding before the bark, because we had noticed that our pilot was very negligent, and we continued to watch in this way during the rest of the voyage.

On the 25th the calm continued till noon, and we pursued our course to the northwest, favored by a good southerly wind, which soon changed to southwest. At midnight we were compelled to head north on account of a great Point which jutted out into the lake; but we had scarcely doubled it, when we were surprised by a furious gale, which forced us to ply to windward with mainsail and foresail, then to lie to, till daylight.

On the 26th the violence of the wind obliged us to lower the topmasts, to fasten the yards at the clew, to remain broadside to the shore. At noon the waves running too high, and the sea too rough, we were forced to seek a port in the evening, but found no anchorage or shelter. At this crisis, the Sieur de la Salle entered the cabin, and quite disheartened told us that he commended his enterprise to God. We had been accustomed all the voyage to induce all to say morning and evening prayers together on our knees, all singing some hymns of the church, but as we could not stay on the deck of the vessel, on account of the storm, all contented themselves with making an act of contrition. There was no one but our pilot alone, whom we were never able to persuade.

At this time the Sieur de la Salle adopted, in union with us, Saint Anthony of Padua as the protector of our enterprise, and he promised God if he did us the grace to deliver us from the tempest, that the first chapel he should erect in Louisiana should be dedicated to that great Saint.

The wind having fallen a little we lay to, all the night, and we drifted only a league or two at most.

On the morning of the 27th we sailed northwest with a south-west wind, which changed towards evening into a light south-east trade wind, by favor of which we arrived on the same day at Missilimakinac, where we anchored in six fathoms of water in a bay, where there was a good bottom of potter's clay. This bay is sheltered from south-west to north, a sand bank covers it a little on the northeast, but it is exposed to the south which is very violent.

Missilimakinac ["Point Ignace"] is a point of land at the entrance and north of the strait, by which Lake Dauphin empties into Lake Orleans. This strait is a league wide and three long, and runs west, north-west. Fifteen leagues east of Missilimakinac you find another point which is at the entrance of the channel by which Lake Conde empties into Lake Orleans. This channel has an opening of five leagues, and is fifteen in length. It is interspersed with several islands, and gradually narrows in, down to Sault Sainte Marie, which is a rapid full of rocks, by which the waters of Lake Conde are discharged, and are precipitated in a violent manner. Nevertheless they succeed in poling canoes up one side near the land, but for greater security a portage is made of the canoe and the goods which they take to sell to the nations north of Lake Conde.

There are Indian villages in these two places; those who are settled at Missilimakinac, on the day of our arrival, which was August 26, 1678 [1679], were all amazed to see a ship in their country, and the sound of the cannon caused an extraordinary alarm.

We went to the Outtaouactz to say mass, and during the service, the Sieur de la Salle, very well dressed in his scarlet cloak trimmed with gold lace, ordered the arms to be stacked along the chapel, and the sergeant left a sentry there to guard them. The chiefs of the Outtaouactz paid us their civility in their fashion, on coming out of the church. And in this bay where the Griffin was riding at anchor, we looked with pleasure at this large, well equipped vessel, amid a hundred or a hundred and twenty bark canoes, coming and going from taking white fish, which these Indians catch with nets, which they stretch sometimes in fifteen or twenty fathoms of water, and without which they could not subsist.

The Hurons who have their village surrounded by palisades twenty-five feet high and situated near a great point of land opposite the island of Missilimakinac, proved the next day that they were more French than the Outtaouactz, but it was in show, for they gave a salute by discharging all their guns, and they all have them, and renewed it three times, to do honor to our ship, and to the French, but this salute had been suggested to them by some Frenchmen, who come there, and who often carry on a very considerable trade with these nations, and who designed to gain the Sieur de la Salle by this show, as he gave umbrage to them, only in order better to play their parts subsequently by making it known that the bark was going to be the cause of destruction to individuals, in order to render the one who had built her, odious to the people.

The Hurons and the Outtaouactz form alliances with one another in order to oppose with one accord the fury of the Iroquois, their sworn enemy. They cultivate Indian corn on which they live all the year, with the fish which they take to season their sagamity. This they make of water and meal of their corn which they crush with a pestle in a trunk of a tree hollowed out by fire.

The Indians of Sainte Marie du Long Sault are called by us the Saulteurs on account of the place of their abode, which is near the Sault, and where they subsist by hunting stags, moose or elk, and some beaver, and by the fishing of white fish, which is very good, and is found there in great abundance, but this fishery is very difficult to, all but these Indians who are trained to it from childhood. These latter do not plant any Indian corn as their soil is not adapted to it, and the fogs on Lake Conde which are very frequent, stifle all the corn that they might be able to plant.

Sault St. Marie and Missilimakinac are the two most important passes for all the Indians of the west and north who go to carry all their furs to the French settlements, and to trade every year at Montreal, with more than two hundred loaded canoes.

During our stay at Missilimakinac, we were extremely surprised to find there the greater part of the men whom the Sieur de la Salle had sent on ahead to the number of fifteen, and whom he believed to be long since at the Illinois. Those whom he had known as the most faithful, reported to him that they had been stopped by the statements made to them on their way, at Missilimakinac; that they had been told that his enterprise was only chimerical, that the bark would never reach Missilimakinac, that he was sending them to certain destruction, and several other things of the kind, which had discouraged and seduced most of their comrades, and that they had been unable to induce them to continue their voyage; that six* of them had even deserted, and carried off more than 3,000 livres worth of goods, under the pretext of paying themselves, saying that they would restore the surplus over what was due them, and that the others had stupidly wasted more than twelve hundred livres worth, or spent it for their support at Missilimakinac, where they had been detained, and where provisions are very dear.

The Sieur de la Salle was all the more provoked at this conduct of his men, as he had treated them well, and made some advances to all, among the rest having paid on account of one of them [La Rousseliere] 1200 livres that he owed various persons at Montreal. He had four of the most guilty arrested, without giving them any harsher treatment. Having learned that two of the six deserters [La Rousseliere and Hunaut] were at Sault Sainte Marie he detached the Sieur de Tonty with six men arrested them and seized all the goods which they had in their hands, but he could not obtain any justice as to the others. The high winds at this season long retarded the return of the Sieur de Tonty, who did not reach Missilimakinac till the month of November, so that we were dreading the approach of winter and resolved to set out without waiting till he arrived.

On the 2nd of the month of September, from Missilimakinac we entered Lake Dauphin, [Michigan] and arrived at an island situated at the entrance of the Lake, or Bay of the Puants, forty leagues from Missilimakinac, and which is inhabited by Indians of the Poutouatami nation. [Still called Pottawattomie Island, being one in the chain of several that stretch across the outlet of Green Bay. Here was the chief town.—THE EDITOR.] We found some Frenchmen there, who had been sent among the Illinois in previous years, and who had brought back to the Sieur de la Salle a pretty fair amount of furs.

* St. Croix, Minime, Le Barbier, Poupart, Hunaut, Roussel dit la Rousseliere.

The chief of this nation ["On-an-ghis-se," or him with a medal] who had all possible affection for the Count de Frontenac, who had entertained him at Montreal, received us as well as he could, had the calumet danced to the Sieur de la Salle by his warriors; and during four days' storm while our vessel was anchored thirty paces from the bay shore, this Indian chief believing that our bark was going to be stranded, came to join us in a canoe at the risk of his life and in spite of the increasing waves, we hoisted him with his canoe into our vessel. He told us in a martial tone that he was ready and wished to perish with the children of Onnontio, the Governor of the French, his good father and friend.

Contrary to our opinion, the Sieur de la Salle, who never took any one's advice, resolved to send back his bark from this place, to continue his route by canoe, but as he had only four, he was obliged to leave considerable merchandise in the bark, a quantity of utensils and tools. He ordered the pilot to discharge every thing at Missilimakinac, where he could take them again on his return. He also put all the peltries in the bark with a clerk and five good sailors. Their orders were to proceed to the great fall of Niagara, where they were to leave the furs, and take on board other goods which another bark from Fort Frontenac, which awaited them near Fort Conty, was to bring them, and that as soon as possible thereafter, they should sail back to Missilimakinac, where they would find instructions as to the place to which they should bring the bark to winter.

They set sail on the 18th of September, with a very favorable light west wind, making their adieu by firing a single cannon; and we were never afterwards able to learn what course they had taken, and though there is no doubt but that she perished, we were never able to learn any other circumstances of their shipwreck than the following: The bark having anchored in the north of Lake Dauphin, the pilot against the opinion of some Indians, who assured him that there was a great storm in the middle of the lake, resolved to continue his voyage, without considering that the sheltered position where he lay, prevented his knowing the force of the wind. He had scarcely sailed a quarter of a league from the coast, when these Indians saw the bark tossing in an extraordinary manner, unable to resist the tempest, so that in a short time they lost sight of her, and they believe that she was either driven on some sandbank, or that she foundered.

We did not learn all this till next year, and it is certain that the loss of this bark costs more than 40,000 livres in goods, tools and peltries, as well as men and rigging, which he had imported into Canada from France and transported from Montreal to Fort Frontenac in bark canoes. This would appear impossible to those who know the weakness of this kind of craft, and the weight of anchors and cables, on which he paid eleven livres per hundred pounds.

We set out the next day, September 19th, with fourteen persons in four canoes, I directing the smallest, loaded with five hundred pounds, with a carpenter just arrived from France, who did not know how to avoid the waves, during rough weather. I had every difficulty to manage this little craft. These four bark canoes were loaded with a forge and all its appurtenances, carpenters, jointers and pit sawyer's tools, arms and merchandise.

We took our course southerly towards the mainland four good leagues distant from the island of the Poutouatamis. In the middle of the traverse and amid the most beautiful calm in the world, a storm arose which endangered our lives, and which made us fear for the bark, and more for ourselves. We completed this great passage amid the darkness of the night, calling to one another so as not to part company. The water often entered our canoes, and the impetuous wind lasted four days with a fury like the greatest tempests of ocean. We nevertheless reached the shore in a little sandy bay, and stayed five days, waiting for the lake to grow calm. During this stay, the Indian hunter who accompanied us killed, while hunting, only a single porcupine which served to season our squashes and the Indian corn that we had.

On the 25th we continued our route all day, and a part of the night favored by the moon, along the western shore of Lake Dauphin, but the wind coming up a little too strong, we were forced to land on a bare rock, on which we endured the rain and snow for two days, sheltered by our blankets, and near a little fire which we fed with wood that the waves drove ashore.

On the 28th, after the celebration of mass, we kept on until far into the night, and until a whirlwind forced us to land on a rocky point covered with bushes. We remained there two days, and consumed the rest of our provisions, that is to say, the Indian corn and squashes that we had bought of the Poutouatamis and of which we had been unable to lay in a greater supply, because our canoes were too heavily laden, and because we hoped to find some on our route.

We set out the first of October, and after making twelve leagues fasting, arrived near another village of the Poutouatamies. These Indians all flocked to the lake shore to receive us and to haul us in from the waves, which rose to an extraordinary height. The Sieur de la Salle fearing that his men would desert, and that some of them would carelessly waste some of the goods, pushed on and we were obliged to follow him three leagues beyond the village of the Indians, notwithstanding the evident peril, and he saw no other alternative to take in order to land in safety than to leap into the water with his three canoeemen, and all together take hold of the canoe and its load and drag it ashore, in spite of the waves which sometimes covered them over their heads.

He then came to meet the canoe, which I guided with this man who had no experience in this work, and jumping waist high into the water, we carried our little craft all at once, and went to receive the other two canoes in the same manner as the former. And as the waves breaking on the shore formed a kind of undertow, which drags out into the lake those who think they are safe, I made a powerful effort and took on my shoulders our good old Recollect who accompanied us, and this amiable missionary of Saint Francis, seeing himself out of danger, all drenched as he was with water, never failed to display an extraordinary cheerfulness.

As we had no acquaintance with the Indians of this village, the Commandant first ordered all the arms to be got ready, and posted himself on an eminence where it was difficult to surprise us, and whence he could with a small force defend himself against a greater number. He then sent three of his men to buy provisions in the village, under the protection of the calumet of peace which the Pontouatamis of the Island had given the Sieur de la Salle, and which they had previously accompanied with their dances and ceremonies, which they use in their feasts and public solemnities.

This calumet is a kind of large pipe for smoking, the head of which is of a fine red stone well polished, and the stem two feet and a half long, is a pretty stout cane adorned with feathers of all sorts of colors, very neatly mingled and arranged, with several tresses of woman's hair, braided in various ways, with two wings, such as are usually represented on the Caduceus of Mercury, each nation embellishing it according to its especial usage. A calumet of this kind is a sure passport among all the allies of those who have given it; and they are convinced that great misfortunes would befall them, if they violated the faith of the calumet. And all their enterprises in war and peace and most important ceremonies are sealed and attested by the calumet, which they make all smoke with whom they conclude any matter of consequence.

These three men with this safeguard and their arms, arrived at the little village of the Indians three leagues distant from the landing, but they found no one. These Indians, at the sight of our canoes, perceiving that we had not landed, on passing them, had taken fright and abandoned their village. Accordingly these men after using all endeavors in vain to speak to some of these Indians, took what Indian corn they could carry from their cabins, and left goods there in place of what they appropriated; and then took the road to return to us.

Meanwhile twenty of these Indians armed with guns, axes, bows, arrows and clubs which are called casse-tetes, [skull breakers], approached the place where we were. The Sieur de la Salle advanced to accost them with four of his men armed with guns, pistols and sabres. He asked them what they wished; seeing that they appeared perplexed, he told them to come on, for fear his men, who, he pretended were out hunting, might kill them, if they found them out of the way. He made them sit down at the foot of the rising ground on which we had camped, and from which we could watch all their movements. We began to occupy them with different things, to amuse them till our three men got back from the village. These men appearing some time afterwards, as soon as the Indians perceived the peace calumet which one of our men carried, they rose uttering a great cry of joy, and began to dance after their fashion. Far from being angry about the Indian corn which they saw, and which had been taken from them, they on the contrary sent to the village to bring more, and gave us some also the next day, as much as we could conveniently put in our canoes.

It was nevertheless deemed prudent to fell the trees around and to command our men to pass the night under arms, for fear of any surprise. About ten o'clock the next day, the old men of the village arrived with their peace calumet and feasted all the French. The Sieur de la Salle thanked them by a present of some axes, knives and some masses of beads for their women's adornment, and left them very well satisfied.

We set out the same day, October 2d, and we sailed for four days along the shore. It was bordered by great hills running abruptly down to the lake, where there was scarcely place to land. We were even forced every evening to climb to the summit, and carry up there our canoes and cargoes, so as not to leave them exposed by night to the waves that beat the foot. We were also obliged by too violent headwinds, during these four days and very frequently afterwards, to land with the greatest hardship. To embark, it required that two men should go waist high into the water, and hold the canoe head on to the wave, pushing it ahead or drawing it back as the wave rolled in or ran out from land, until it was loaded. Then it was pushed out to wait till the others were loaded in the same way; and we had almost as much trouble at the other landings. The Indian corn, that we ate very sparingly, and provisions failing us, our good old Recollect had several times fainting fits. I twice brought him to, with a little confection of hyacinth, which I preserved preciously. For twenty-four hours we ate only a handful of Indian corn cooked under the ashes or merely boiled in water, and during all the time we were obliged to keep on towards a good country and to paddle with all our strength, whole days. Our men frequently ran for little haws and wild fruit, which they ate with great avidity. Several fell sick who thought that these fruits had poisoned them. The more we suffered, the more God seemed to give me, especially, strength, and I often outstripped in paddling our other canoes. During this scarcity, He who cares for the smallest birds, allowed us to see several crows and eagles, which were on the lake shore. Plying our paddles with redoubled zeal towards these carnivorous birds, we found there half a very fat deer which the wolves had killed and half eaten. We recruited ourselves on the flesh of this animal, blessing Providence which had sent us such timely aid.

Thus our little fleet advanced toward the South where we found the country always finer and more temperate.

On the 16th of October [1679] we began to find a great abundance of game, and our Indian, a very excellent hunter, killed stags and deer, and our Frenchmen very fat poules d'inde [wild turkeys]. And at last on the 28th of the month of October we reached the extremity or southern trend of Lake Dauphin, where the heavy wind forced us to land.

We went out to scout, as we were accustomed to do, in the woods and prairies. We found very good ripe grapes, the berries of which were as large as damson plums. To get this fruit we had to cut down the trees on which the vines ran. We made some wine which lasted us nearly three months and a half and which we kept in gourds. These we put every day in the sand to prevent the wine from souring, and in order to make it last longer, we said mass only on holidays and Sundays, one after the other. All the woods were full of vines which grow wild. We ate this fruit to make the meat palatable, which we were forced to eat without bread.

Fresh footprints of men were noticed at this place. This forced the Sieur de la Salle to keep his men on their guard, and without making any noise. All our men obeyed for a time, but one of them having perceived a bear, could not restrain himself from firing his gun at it, which killed the animal and sent it rolling from the top of the mountain to the bottom, to the very foot of our cabins.

This noise revealed to us a hundred and twenty-five Indians of the nation of the Outouagamis, [Fox Indians] who live near the extremity of the Bay of the Puants who were cabined in our vicinity. The Sieur de la Salle was very uneasy about the trails we had seen. He blamed our men for their lack of prudence, and then to prevent surprises, he placed a sentinel near the canoes, under which all the goods were placed to protect them from the rain.

This precaution did not prevent thirty Outouagamis under cover of the rain which was falling in torrents, and through the negligence of the sentinel who was on duty, from gliding by night with their usual dexterity, along the hill where our canoes were, and lying on their bellies near one another, succeed[ing] in stealing the coat of the Sieur de la Salle's lackey, and a part of what was under, which was passed from hand to hand. Our sentinel hearing some noise and rousing us, each one ran to arms. These Indians seeing themselves thus discovered, their chief called out that he was a friend. He was told in answer, that it was an unseasonable hour, and that people did not come in that way by night except to steal, or kill those who were not on their guard.

He replied that in truth, the shot that had been fired, had made his countrymen all think that it was a party of Iroquois, their enemies, as the other Indians, their neighbors, did not use such fire-arms, and that they had accordingly advanced with the intent of killing them, but having discovered that they were Frenchmen whom they regarded as their brethren, the impatience which they felt to see them, had prevented their waiting for daylight to visit us and to smoke in our calumet with us. This is the ordinary compliment of these Indians, and their greatest marks of affection.

We pretended to credit these reasons, and they were told to approach to the number of four or five only, because their young men were given to stealing, and that our Frenchmen were in no humor to put up with it. Four or five old men having advanced we endeavored to entertain them till daylight; when day came we left them at liberty to retire.

After their departure, our ship carpenters perceived that they had been robbed, and as we knew perfectly the disposition of the Indians, and we knew that they would form similar enterprises every night, if we dissembled on this occasion, we resolved to insist on redress. The Sieur de la Salle at the head of our men ascended an eminence of peninsular form; he tried in person to find some Indian off by himself; he had scarcely marched three hundred paces, when he found the fresh trail of a hunter. He followed him, pistol in hand, and having overtaken him soon after opposite a hill, where I was gathering grapes with Father Gabriel, he called me and begged me to follow him. He seized and put him under guard of his men, after having learned from him all the circumstances of the theft. He again took the field with two of his men, and having arrested one of the most important Indians of his nation, he showed him at a distance the one he already held as a prisoner, and sent him back to tell his people, that he would kill their comrade, if they did not bring back all that they had stolen during the night.

This proposition embarrassed these savages, because they had cut the lackey's coat in pieces, and taken some goods with the buttons to divide them among them. Thus unable to restore them whole, and not knowing by what means to deliver their comrade, as they have a strong friendship for one another, they resolved to rescue him by force.

The next morning, 30th of the month of October, they all advanced arms in hand to begin the attack. The peninsula, where we were encamped, was separated from the wood where the Indians appeared by a long sandy plain two gun shots wide. At the end of this plain towards the wood we noticed that there were several small mounds, and that the one nearest to us commanded the others. This the Sieur de la Salle occupied and commanded five men who carried their blankets half rolled around the left arm, to shield themselves against the arrows of the Indians. He followed his men immediately after, to support the former, but the youngest of the Indians, seeing the French approach to charge on them, drew off and took to cover under a large tree on the hill. This did not prevent their chiefs from continuing to remain near us.

There were only seven or eight who had guns, the others had bows and arrows only; and during all these manoeuvres on both sides, we three Recollets were there saying our office, and as I was the one of the three who had seen most in matters of war, having served as King's chaplain under the direction of the Very Rev. Father Hayacinth le Fevre, I came out of our cabin to see what figure our men made under arms and to encourage two of the youngest whom I saw grow pale, and who nevertheless made for all that a show of being brave and haughty as much as their leader. I approached in the direction of the oldest Indian, and as they saw that I was unarmed, they readily inferred that I approached them with a view to part the combatants and to become the mediator of their differences. One of our men seeing a band of red stuff, which served as a head band to one of these Indians, went and tore it off his head, giving him to understand that he had stolen it from us.

This bold act of eleven armed Frenchmen against a hundred and twenty-five Indians, so intimidated these savages that two of their old men near whom I was, presented the peace calumet, and having advanced on the assurance given that they could do so without any fear, they said that they had not resorted to this extreme course, except from the inability they were in to restore what they had stolen from us, in the condition in which they had taken it; that they were ready to restore what was whole, and to pay for the rest. At the same time they presented some beaver robes to the Sieur de la Salle to dispose his mind to peace, excusing themselves for the small value of their present, as the season was too far advanced. We contented ourselves with their excuses, they fulfilled what they had promised, and thus peace was restored.

The next day was spent in dances, in feasts and speeches, and the head chief of these Indians turning towards the Recollects, said: "See, the Grey Gowns, for whom we feel great esteem! they go bare-footed like us, they despise the beaver robes which we wish to give them, without any hope of return; they have no arms to kill us; they flatter and caress our little children, and give them beads for nothing, and those of our nation who have carried furs to the villages of the French have told us that the Onnotio, the great chief of the French, loves them, because they have come and visit us, and to remain with us. You are the chief of those who are here, arrange so as to make one of the Gray Gowns remain with us. We will give them part of all we have to eat, and we will take them to our village after we have killed some buffalo; and you who are the master, arrange so as to stay here also with us; do not go to the Isolinois, for we know that they wish to massacre all the French. It will be impossible for you to resist that numerous nation. He added that since an Iroquois, whom the Isolinois had burned, had assured them that the war which the Iroquois made on them, had been advised by the French, who hated the Isolinois. They added several like reasons which alarmed almost all our Frenchmen, and greatly disquieted the Sieur de la Salle, because all the Indians whom he had met on our whole route, had told him pretty nearly the same thing.

Nevertheless as he knew that these reasons might have been inspired by those who opposed our enterprise and by the jealousy of the Indians to whom the Isolinois were formidable by their valor, and who feared that they might become still more haughty, when by means of the French they had acquired the use of fire arms, we resolved to pursue our course, taking all necessary precautions for our safety.

He accordingly answering the Outouagamis, told them that he thanked them for the information which they gave us, but that the French who are spirits [the Indians so style us, saying that they are only men, but that we are spirits] did not fear the Isolinois, and that we would bring them to reason by friendship or by force.

The next day, the first of the month of November, we all re-embarked and we arrived at the rendezvous, which we had arranged with twenty other Frenchmen who were to come and meet us by the other side of the lake. It was at the mouth of the river of Miamis, [the Saint Joseph of Lake Michigan], which coming from the south empties into Lake Dauphin.

We were surprised to find no one there, because the French whom we expected, had had a much shorter route to make than we had, and their canoes were not heavily laden.

We had resolved to make the Sieur de la Salle see that he ought not to expose us unseasonably and not to wait for winter, to conduct us to the Islinois, because during that season these nations, in order to hunt more conveniently, break up into families or bands of two or three hundred persons each, and that the longer we lingered in that spot, the greater difficulty we should find in getting there. That as the hunting began to fail where we were, his whole party ran a risk of starving to death, and that among the Islinois we should find Indian corn for our food, and that we should live better, being only fourteen men by our route, than if we were thirty-two; that if the rivers should freeze over, we would not be able of ourselves to carry all the equipage, for a hundred leagues. He answered us that when the twenty men whom he expected had joined us, he would be able without danger to make himself known to the first band of Islinois whom he should find hunting, and gain them by kind treatment, and by presents, learning some tincture of the Islinois language, and that by this means he would easily form alliance with the rest of the nation.

We understood by similar remarks, that he regarded his own will alone as reason; and he told us that if all his men deserted he would remain with our Indian hunter, and that he would easily find means by hunting to enable the three Recollect missionaries to live.

In this thought, he availed himself of the delay of the Frenchmen whom he expected; he told his men that he was resolved to wait, and to amuse them by some useful occupation, he proposed to them to build a fort, and a house for the security of the bark and of the goods which she was to bring, in order to serve us as a refuge in case of need.

There was at the mouth of the river of the Miamis [on the north side as Hennepin's and other maps place the fort] an eminence with a kind of platform on top and naturally fortified. It was high and steep, of triangular figure, formed on two sides by the river, and on the other by a deep ravine. He felled the trees by which it was covered and cleared away the underbrush for two gun shots in the direction of the woods. Then he began a redoubt forty feet long by eighty broad, fortified by squared beams and joists, and musket proof, laid one on another; his design being to put inclined palisades around the two sides facing the river. He cut down palisades which he wished to plant, en tenaille twenty-five feet high on the land side.

The month of November was spent in these works, during which time we ate nothing but bear meat that our hunter killed. There were at this place many of these animals, that were attracted to it by the great quantities of grapes growing everywhere there; but our people seeing the Sieur de la Salle all unmanned by the fear he entertained of the loss of his bark, and utterly annoyed also at the delay of his men, whom the Sieur de Tonty was to bring us, the rigorous setting in of winter as a climax disheartening them, the mechanics worked only reluctantly, storming against the fat bear meat, and at their being deprived of liberty to go and kill deer to eat with the bear fat, but their aim all tended to desertion.

We made a bark cabin during this halt, in order to say mass more conveniently, and on holidays and Sundays

Father Gabriel and I preached alternately, choosing the most impressive matters to exhort our men to patience and perseverance.

From the commencement of the same month we had examined the mouth of the river. We had marked a sand bank there, and to facilitate the entrance of the bark, in case it arrived, the channel was marked out by two tall poles planted on either side of the entrance, with bear skin pendants, and buoys all along. We had, moreover, sent to Missilimakinac two of our men, informed of all things, to serve as guides to Luke, the pilot.

On the 20th of November, the Sieur de Tonty arrived with two canoes loaded with several stags. This revived a little the drooping spirits of our workmen, but as he brought us only half of the men whom we expected, and had left the rest at liberty three days from our works, this gave the Sieur de la Salle some uneasiness; our new comers said that the bark had not touched at Missilimakinac, and that they had heard no tidings of her from the Indians, coming from all sides of the lakes, nor from the two men who had been sent to Missilimakinac and whom they had met on the way. He feared, and with reason, that his bark had been wrecked. Nevertheless he kept his men working at the Fort of the Miamis, as he called it, and not seeing her appear after waiting so long, he resolved to set out, for fear of being stopped by the ice, which began to close the river, and which broke up at the first light rain. Nevertheless we had to wait for the rest of the men whom the Sieur de Tonty had left behind, and to repair the fault that he had committed, he retraced his steps to make them come on and join us at once. On the way he wished to hold a little, and resist the high wind, against the opinion of Sieur Dautray and his other canoeman, and as he had only one hand and could not help his two men the waves made them yaw, and threw them broadside on the lake shore, where they lost their guns and their little baggage. This obliged them to come back to us, and fortunately the rest of our men followed soon after them, except two whom we most mistrusted and who, we believed, had deserted.

We embarked on the 3d of December with thirty men in eight canoes and ascended the river of the Miamis, [to near South Bend, Indiana] taking our course to the south-east for about twenty-five leagues. We could not make out the portage which we were to take with our canoes and all our equipage, in order to go and embark at the source of the River Seignelay [Kankakee] and as we had gone higher up in a canoe without discerning the place where we were to march by land to take this other river, which runs to the Illinois, we halted to wait for the Sieur de la Salle, who had gone exploring on land, and as he did not return, we did not know what course to pursue. I begged two of our most alert men to penetrate into the woods and fire off their guns so as to give him notice of the spot where we were waiting for him. Two others ascended the river but to no purpose, for the night obliged them to retrace their steps.

The next day I took two of our men on a lightened canoe, to make greater expedition, and to seek him by ascending the river, but in vain, and at four o'clock in the afternoon we perceived him at a distance, his hands and face all black with the coals and the wood that he had lighted during the night which was cold. He had two animals [opossums] of the size of muskrats, hanging at his belt, which had a very beautiful skin, like a kind of ermine, which he killed with blows of a stick, without these little animals taking flight, and which often let themselves hang by the tail from branches of trees, and as they were very fat, our canoemen feasted on them. He told us that the marshes he met with obliged him to make a wide sweep, and as moreover he was hindered by the snow which was falling rapidly, he was unable to reach the bank of the river before two o'clock at night. He fired two gun shots to notify us, and no one having answered him, he thought that the canoes had gone on ahead of him, and kept on his way, along and up the river. After marching in this way more than three hours, he saw fire on a mound, which he ascended brusquely, and after calling two or three times, but instead of finding us asleep as he expected, he saw only a little fire among some brush, and under an oak tree, the spot where a man had been lying down on dry herbs, and who had apparently gone off at the noise which he had heard. It was some Indian who had gone there in ambush to surprise and kill some of his enemies along the river. He called him in two or three languages, and at last to show him that he did not fear him, he cried that he was going to sleep in his place. He renewed the fire and after warming himself well, he took steps to guarantee himself against surprise, by cutting down around him a quantity of bushes, which falling across among those that remained standing, blocked the way, so that no one could approach him without making considerable noise, and awakening him. He then extinguished his fire and slept, although it snowed all night.

Father Gabriel and I begged the Sieur de la Salle not to leave his party as he had done showing him that the whole success of our voyage depended on his presence.

Our Indian had remained behind us to hunt, and not finding us at the portage, he went higher up, and came to tell us that we would have to descend the river. All our canoes were sent with him, and I remained with the Sieur de la Salle, who was very much fatigued, and as our cabin was composed only of flag mats, it took fire at night and would have burnt us, had I not promptly thrown off the mat which served as a door to our little quarters, and which was all in flames.

We rejoined our party the next day, at the portage where Father Gabriel had made several crosses on the trees, that we might recognize it. We found there a number of buffalo horns and the carcasses of those animals, and some canoes that the Indians had made, of Buffalo skins, to cross the river with their load of meat.

This place is situated on the edge of a great plain, at the extremity of which on the western side is a village of Miamis, Mascoutens and Oiatinon gathered together.

The river Seignelay which flows to the Islinois [Indians] rises in a plain in the midst of much boggy land, over which it is not easy to walk. This river is only a league and a half distant from that of the Miamis, and thus we transported all our equipage and our canoes by a road which we marked for the benefit of those who might come after us, after leaving at the portage of the Miami river as well as at the fort which we had built at its mouth, letters to serve as a guide to those who were to come and join us by the bark to the number of twenty-five.

The river Seignelay [Kankakee] is navigable for canoes to within a hundred paces of its source, and it increases to such an extent in a short time, that it is almost as broad, and deeper than the Marne. It takes its course through vast marshes, where it winds about so, though its current is pretty strong, that after sailing on it for a whole day, we sometimes found that we had not advanced more than two leagues in a straight line. As far as the eye could reach nothing was to be seen but marshes full of flags and alders. For more than forty leagues of the way, we could not have found a camping ground, except for some hummocks of frozen earth on which we slept and lit our fire. Our provisions ran out and we could find no game after passing these marshes, as we hoped to do, because there are only great open plains, where nothing grows except tall grass, which is dry at this season, and which the Miamis had burned while hunting buffalo, and with all the address we employed to kill some deer, our hunters took nothing; for more than sixty leagues journey, they killed only a lean stag, a small deer, some swans, and two wild geese for the subsistence of thirty-two men. If our canoe-men had found a chance, they would infallibly have all abandoned us, to strike inland and join the Indians whom we discerned by the flames of the prairies to which they had set fire in order to kill the buffalo more easily.

These animals are ordinarily in great numbers there, as is easy to judge by the bones, the horns and skulls that we saw on all sides. The Miamis hunt them at the end of autumn in the following manner:

When they see a herd, they gather in great numbers, and set fire to the grass everywhere around these animals, except some passage which they leave on purpose, and where they take post with their bows and arrows. The buffalo, seeking to escape the fire, are thus compelled to pass near these Indians, who sometimes kill as many as a hundred and twenty in a day, all of which they distribute according to the wants of the families; and these Indians all triumph over the massacre of so many animals, come to notify their women, who at once proceed to bring in the meat. Some of them at times take on their backs three hundred pounds weight, and also throw their children on top of their load which does not seem to burthen them more than a soldier's sword at his side.

These animals have very fine wool instead of hair, and the females have it longer than the males. Their horns are almost all black, much thicker than those of cattle in Europe, but not quite so long. Their head is of monstrous size; the neck is very short, but very thick, and sometimes six hands broad. They have a hump or slight elevation between the two shoulders. Their legs are very thick and short, covered with a very long wool. On the head and between the horns they have long, black hair, which falls over their eyes and gives them a fearful look. The meat of these animals is very succulent. They are very fat in autumn, because all the summer they are up to their necks in the grass. These vast countries are so full of prairies, that it seems this is the element and the country of the buffalo. There are at near intervals some woods where these animals retire to ruminate, and to get out of the heat of the sun. These wild cattle or bulls change country according to the season and the diversity of climate. When they approach the northern lands and begin to feel the beginning of winter, they pass to the southern lands. They follow one another on the way sometimes for a league. They all lie down in the same place, and their resting ground is often full of wild purslain, which we have sometimes eaten. The paths by which they have passed are beaten like our great roads in Europe, and no grass grows there. They cross rivers and streams. The wild cows go to the islands to prevent the wolves from eating their calves; and even when the calves can run, the wolves would not venture to approach them, as the cows would exterminate them. The Indians have this forecast not to drive these animals entirely from their countries, to pursue only those who are wounded by arrows, and the others that escape, they suffer to go at liberty without pursuing them further in order not to alarm them too much. And although these Indians of these vast continents are naturally given to destroy the animals, they have never been able to exterminate these wild cattle, for however much they hunt them these beasts multiply so that they return in still greater numbers the following year.

The Indian women spin on the distaff the wool of these cattle, out of which they make bags to carry the meat, boucanned and sometimes dried in the sun, which these women keep frequently for three or four months of the year, and although they have no salt, they dry it so well that the meat undergoes no corruption; four months after they have thus dressed this meat, one would say on eating it that the animals had just been killed, and we drank the broth with them instead of water which is the ordinary drink of all the nations of America, who have no intercourse with Europeans.

The ordinary skins of these wild cattle weigh from one hundred to a hundred and twenty pounds. The Indians cut off the back and the neck part which is the thickest part of the skin, and they take only the thinnest part of the belly, which they dress very neatly, with the brains of all kinds of animals, by means of which they render it as supple as our chamois skins dressed with oil. They paint it with different colors, trim it with white and red porcupine quills, and make robes of it to parade in their feasts. In winter they use them to cover themselves especially at night. Their robes which are full of curly wool have a very pleasing appearance.

When the Indians have killed any cows, the little calves follow the hunters, and go and lick their hands or fingers, [and] these Indians sometimes take them to their children and after they have played with them they knock them on the head to eat them. They preserve the hoofs of all these little animals, dry them and fasten them to rods, and in their dances they shake and rattle them, according to the various postures and motions of the singers and dancers. This machine somewhat resembles a tambour.

These little animals might easily be domesticated and used to plough the land.

These wild cattle subsist in all seasons of the year. When they are surprised by winter and cannot reach in time the southern land and the warm country, and the ground is all covered with snow, they have the tact to turn up and throw aside the snow, to crop the grass hidden beneath. They are heard lowing, but not as commonly as in Europe.

These wild cattle are much larger in body than ours in Europe, especially in the forepart. This great bulk, however, does not prevent their moving very fast, so that there are very few Indians who can run them down. These bulls often kill those who have wounded them. In the season you see herds of two and even four hundred.

Many other kinds of animals are found in these vast plains of Louisiana, stags, deer, beaver and otter are common there, geese, swans, turtles, poules d'inde, parrots, partridges, and many other birds swarm there, the fishery is very abundant, and the fertility of the soil is extraordinary. There are boundless prairies interspersed with forests of tall trees, where there are all sorts of building timber, and among the rest excellent oak, full like that in France and very different from that in Canada. The trees are of prodigious girth and height, and you could find the finest pieces in the world for ship building which can be carried on upon the spot, and wood could be brought as ballast in the ships to build all the vessels of France, which would be a great saving to the State and would give the trees in our nearly exhausted forests time to grow again.

Several kinds of fruit trees are also to be seen in the forests, and wild grape vines which produce clusters about a foot and a half long which ripen perfectly, and of which very good wine can be made. There are also to be seen fields covered with very good hemp, which grows there naturally to a height of six or seven feet. To conclude, by the experiments that we have made among the Islinois and the Isati, we are convinced that the soil is capable of producing all kinds of fruits, herbs and grain, and in greater abundance than the best lands in Europe. The air there is very temperate and healthy, the country is watered by countless lakes, rivers and streams, most of which are navigable. One is scarcely troubled at all by mosquitoes or other noxious creatures, and by cultivating the ground, people could subsist there from the second year, independent of provisions from Europe.

This vast continent will be able in a short time to supply all our West India islands with bread, wine and meat, and our French buccaneers and fillibusters will be able to kill wild cattle in greater abundance in Louisiana than in all the rest of the islands which they occupy.

There are mines of coal, slate, iron and the lumps of pure red copper, which are found in various places, indicate that there are mines and perhaps other metals and minerals, which will one day be discovered, inasmuch as a salt and alum spring has already been found among the Iroquois.

We continued our route on the river Seignelay during the rest of the month of December; and at last, after having sailed for a hundred and twenty or a hundred and thirty leagues from Lake Dauphin on the River Seignelay, we arrived at the village of the Isinois towards the close of the month of December, 1679. We killed on the river bank only a single buffalo, and some poules d'inde, because the Indians having set fire to the dry grass of all the prairies on our route, the deer had taken fright, and with all the skill adopted in hunting, we subsisted only by a pure Providence of God, who gives strength at one time that he does not at another, and by the greatest happiness in the world, when we had nothing any more to eat, we found an enormous buffalo mired on the bank of the river, that twelve of our men had difficulty in dragging to solid ground with a cable.

This Islinois village is situated at forty degrees of latitude [along the shallows below Ottawa, Ill.] in a somewhat marshy plain, and on the right [or north] bank of a river as broad as the Seine before Paris, which is divided by very beautiful islands. It contains four hundred and sixty cabins, made like long arbors and covered with double mats of flat flags, so well sewed, that they are never penetrated by the wind, snow or rain. Each cabin has four or five fires, and each fire has one or two families, who all live together in a good understanding.

As we had foreseen, we found the village empty, all the Indians having gone to pass the winter hunting in various places according to their custom. Their absence, nevertheless, put us in great embarrassment; provisions failed and we durst not take the Indian corn which the Islinois hide in trenches under ground to preserve it, and use on their return from the hunt for planting and subsistence till harvest. This stock is extremely precious in their eyes, and you could not give them greater offense than by touching it in their absence. Nevertheless, as there was no possibility of our risking a further descent without food, and the fire that had been set to the prairies had driven off all the animals, the Sieur de la Salle resolved to take twenty bushels of Indian corn, hoping that he would be able to appease the Islinois by some means.

The same day we re-embarked with this new supply, and for four days we descended the same river, which runs south by west.

On the first day of the year 1679 [1680], discovering one of our deserters, of whom I have heretofore spoken, and that he had returned to us, only to seduce our men, who, moreover, were disposed to abandon us, through the fear they had of suffering hunger during the winter, I made an exhortation after the mass, wishing a happy New Year to the Sieur de la Salle and all our party, and after the most touching words, I begged all our malcontents to arm themselves with patience, representing to them that God would provide for all our wants, and that if we lived in concert, He would raise up means to enable us to subsist. Father Gabriel, Father Zenobius and I embraced them with the most affectionate sentiments, encouraging them to continue so important a discovery.

Towards the end of the fourth day, while crossing a little lake [upper Peoria Lake], formed by the river, we observed smoke, which showed us that the Indians were cabined near there. In fact, on the fifth, about nine o'clock in the morning, we saw on both sides of the river a number of parrakeets [pirogues or wooden canoes] and about eighty cabins full of Indians, who did not perceive our canoes, until we doubled a point, behind which the Islinois were camped within half gun shot. We were in eight canoes, abreast, all our men arms in hand, and allowing ourselves to go with the current of the river.

We first gave the cry according to the custom of these nations, as though to ask whether they wished peace or war, because it was very important to show resolution at the outset. At first the old men, the women and children took flight across the woods by which the river is bordered, the warriors ran to arms, but with so much confusion, that before they recovered themselves, our canoes had touched land. The Sieur de la Stlle was the first to leap ashore.

The Indians might have been routed in the disorder they were in; but as this was not our design, we halted in order to give the Islinois time to regain confidence. One of their chiefs who was on the other side of the river and who had observed that we had refrained from firing on seven or eight Indians whom we might easily have killed, began a harangue to stop the young men who were preparing to discharge arrows across the river. Those who were encamped on the side where we had landed, and who had taken flight at first, having understood the situation, sent two of the chief men among them to present the calumet from the top of a hill; soon after those who were on the other side did the same thing and then we gave them to understand that we accepted the peace; and at the same time I proceeded in haste with Father Zenobius in the direction of the Indians who had taken flight, taking their children by the hand, who were all trembling with fear; we manifested much affection for them, entering with the old men and the mothers into the cabins, taking compassion on these souls, which are going to destruction, being deprived of the word of God and lacking missionaries. The joy of both was as great as their fear had been violent; that of some having been such that it was two days before they returned from the places to which they had gone to hide.

After the rejoicings, the dances and feasts to which they devoted the day, we assembled the chiefs of the villages, which were on both sides of the river; we made known by our interpreter that we, Recollects, had not come among them to gather beaver, but to give them a knowledge of the great Master of Life, and to instruct their children; that we had left our country, which was beyond the sea, to come and dwell among them, and to be of the number of their greatest friends.

We heard a great chorus of voices, Tapatoui Nicka, which means: "See what is good my brother; you have a mind well made to conceive this thought," and at the same time they rubbed our legs down to the sole of the feet near the fire with bear's oil and buffalo grease to relieve our fatigue.

They put the first three morsels of meat in our mouth with extraordinary marks of friendship.

Immediately after, the Sieur de la Salle made them a present of tobacco and some axes. He told them that he had convoked them to treat of an affair which he wished to explain to them, before he spoke to them of any other; that he knew how necessary corn was to them; that nevertheless, the want of provisions in which he found himself on arriving at their village, and the impossibility of finding any game on the prairies, had obliged him to take a certain quantity of Indian corn, which he had in his canoes, and which he had not yet touched; that if they were willing to leave it in his hands, he would give them in exchange axes and other things which they needed, and that if they could not spare it they were free to take it back; but that if they could not supply him the provisions necessary for his subsistence and that of his men, he would go to their neighbors the Osages, who would furnish him some on paying for it, and that in return he would leave with them the blacksmith whom he had brought to mend their axes and other instruments.

He spoke to them in this manner, because he was well aware that the Isilinois would not fail to be jealous of the advantages that the French might give their neighbors, and especially that they would derive from a blacksmith, of whom they were themselves excessively in need. They accordingly accepted with great demonstrations of joy the payment that he offered them for their Indian corn. They even gave more and earnestly begged us to settle among them.

We answered that we would do so willingly, but that as the Iroquois were subjects of the king and consequently our brethren, we could not make war on them; that for this reason we exhorted them to make peace with that nation, that we would aid them to do so, and that if in spite of our remonstrances, that haughty nation came to attack them, we would defend them provided they permitted us to build a fort, in which we could make head against the Iroquois with the few Frenchmen that we had; that we would even furnish them arms and ammunition, provided they used them only to repel their enemies, and did not employ [them] against the nations that lived under the protection of the king whom the Indians call the Great Chief who is beyond the great lake.

We then added that we also intended to bring over other Frenchmen who would protect them from the attacks of all their enemies and would furnish all that they needed; that we were hindered only by the length and difficulty of the way. That to surmount this obstacle, we had resolved to build a great wooden canoe to sail down to the sea, and bring them all kinds of merchandise by that shorter and more easy way. But as this enterprise required a great outlay, we wished to learn whether their river was navigable to the sea, and whether other Europeans dwelt near its mouth.

The Islinois replied that they accepted all our proposals, and that they would assist us as far as they could. Then they gave a description of the river Colbert or Meschasipi; they told us wonders of its width and beauty, and they assured us that the navigation was free and easy, and that there were no Europeans near its mouth; but what most convinced us that this river was navigable, is that they named four nations to us, of whom there is mention in the Relation of the Voyage of Ferdinand Soto, in Florida; these are the Tula, Casquin, Cicaca and Daminoia. They added that prisoners whom they had taken in war in the direction of the sea said that they had seen ships far out which made discharges that resembled thunder, but that they were not settled on the coast, because if they were there they [the Indians] would not neglect to go and trade with them, the sea being distant only twenty days in their canoes.

The day passed in this way to our mutual satisfaction, but things did not remain long in this state.

The next day one of the chiefs of the Miamis, named Monso, arrived accompanied by five or six others loaded with kettles, axes and knives, in order by these presents to prepare the mind of the Isinoiois to believe what he was to say to them. He secretly assembled the sachems and assured them that we intended to go and join their enemies, who live beyond the great river Colbert, that we would furnish them arms and ammunition and that after having assembled them we would join the Iroquois, and hem them in on all sides to exterminate them entirely; that we were friends of the Iroquois, that the French had a fort in the midst of the Iroquois country, that we would furnish them arms and powder, and that there was no other means of avoiding their ruin than by preventing our voyage, or at least delaying it, because a part of our men would soon abandon us, and that they should not believe anything we might tell them.

After having said many things of the kind, the Miami chief returned by night with as much secrecy as he came, lest we might discover all this mystery.

Nevertheless one of the Isinoiois chiefs named Omaouha, whom we had gained on arriving by a present of two axes and three knives, came to see us the next morning and secretly informed us of all that had passed. We thanked him, and to induce him to keep us informed of all that went on, we made him a new present of powder and lead, easily judging that this Miamis had been sent and instructed by other Frenchmen, jealous of our success, because this Monso did not know us, and had not even been within four hundred leagues of Fort Frontenac, and that nevertheless, he had spoken of our affairs with as much detail and circumstantiality as though he had known us all his life.

This affair gave us all the more uneasiness, because we knew that Indians are naturally suspicious, and because many bad impressions had already been made on our men to induce them to desert, as six of their comrades had already done at one stroke.

In the afternoon of the same day, Nicanape, brother of Chassagouasse, the most important of the Illinois chiefs, who was then absent, invited us all to a feast, and when all were seated in the cabin, Nicanape took the word, and made us an address very different from those which the sachems had made us at his arrival, saying that he had not invited us, so much to give us good cheer as to cure our mind of the disease which we had, wishing to descend the great river, which no one had ever yet done without perishing there; that its banks were inhabited by an infinite number of barbarous nations, who would overwhelm the French by their numbers, whatever arms and whatever valor they might possess; that this river was full of monsters, tritons, crocodiles and serpents, and even if the size of our canoe should protect us from this danger, there was another and inevitable one, that the lower part of the river was full of falls and precipices with a current above them so evident that men go down helplessly, and that all these precipices ended in a gulf where the river was lost under ground, without any one's knowing whither it went. He added to this so many circumstances and pronounced his address so seriously with so many marks of good will, that our men who were not at all accustomed to the manners of the Indians, and two of whom understood the language, were shaken by it.

We marked their apprehension in their faces, but as it is not the custom to interrupt Indians, and by doing so we would only have increased the suspicion of our men, we let him finish his speech in peace, and then we replied without any emotion, that we were very much obliged to him for the information he gave us, and that we should acquire all the more glory if we found difficulties to overcome; that we all served the great Master of the life of men, and him who was the greatest of all the chiefs who commanded beyond the sea; that we esteemed ourselves happy to die while bearing the name of both to the very end of the earth; but that we feared that all he had told us was only an invention of his friendship to prevent our leaving his nation, or rather that it was only an artifice of some evil spirit who had given them some distrust of our plans, although they were full of sincerity; that if the Islinois had any real friendship for us they should not dissemble the grounds of their uneasiness, from which we should endeavor to deliver them, that otherwise we should have reason to believe that the friendship they manifested for us on our arrival was only on their lips.

Nicanape remained unable to reply, and presenting us food changed his discourse.

After the meal our interpreter took up the word again and told him that we were not surprised that their neighbors became jealous of the advantages that they would receive from the trade which they were going to have with the French, nor that they should spread reports to our damage, but that he was astonished to see them so easy to give them credence, and that they concealed them from the French, who had so frankly revealed to them all their designs.

"We were not asleep, brother," he added, addressing Nicanape, "when Monso spoke to you in secret at night to the prejudice of the French, whom he depicted to you as spies of the Iroquois. The presents that he made you to convince you of his lies are still secreted in this cabin.

Why did he take flight immediately afterwards? Why did he not show himself by day if he had only truth to tell? Have you not seen that at our arrival we might have killed your nephews, and that in the confusion prevailing among them, we might have done alone what they wish to persuade you we will execute with the help of the Iroquois, after we are settled among you, and have formed a friendship with your nation?

"At this moment that I am addressing you, could not our French kill all of you, old men that you are, while your young men are off at the hunt? Do you not know that the Iroquois, whom you fear, have experienced the valor of the French and that consequently we should not need their help if we intended to make war on you?

"But to cure your mind entirely, run after this imposter, whom we will wait here to convict and confound. How does he know us since he has never seen us, and how can he know the plots which he says we have formed with the Iroquois, whom he knows as little as he does us? Look at our stores; they are only tools and goods that can but serve us to do you good, and which are not suited either for attacking or for retreating."

These words influenced them and induced them to dispatch runners after Monso to bring him back, but the heavy snow that fell by night before and which covered his tracks, prevented their overtaking him. Nevertheless, our Frenchmen, who had been alarmed already, were not relieved of their false fears. Six of them who were on guard, and among them two pit-sawyers, without whom we could not make a bark to go to sea, fled the next night, after having carried off whatever they thought likely to be necessary to them, and exposed themselves to a danger of perishing and dying of hunger much more certain than that which they sought to avoid.

The Sieur de la Salle having gone out of his cabin in the morning and finding no one on duty, he entered the cabins of his men, and found one where there was only a single man left, whom his comrades had not notified, because he was suspected by them. He called them all together and asked for information in regard to these deserters. Then he expressed his displeasure that they should have deserted against the King's orders, and all justice, and abandon him at the time when they were most necessary to him, after he had done everything for them. To counteract the bad impression that this desertion might produce in the mind of the Illinois he ordered them to say that their comrades had gone off by his order, and said that he was well able to pursue and punish them as an example, but that he did not wish to let the Indians know how little fidelity there was among the French.

He exhorted them to be more faithful to him than these runaways, and not to go to such extremes through fear of the dangers which Nicanape had falsely exaggerated to them; that he did not intend to take with him any but those who would wish to accompany him willingly, and that he would give them his word to leave the others at liberty in the spring to return to Canada, whither they might go without risk and by canoe, whereas they could not then undertake it, but with evident peril of their lives, and with the disgrace of having basely abandoned him, by a conspiracy which could not remain unpunished on their arrival in Canada.

He endeavored to reassure them in this way, but knowing their inconstancy, and dissembling the chagrin he felt at their lack of resolution, he resolved to remove them from the Indians, to preclude any new subornations, and in order to make them consent without murmuring, he told them that they were not in security among the Illinois; that moreover such a stay exposed them to the arms of the Iroquois, who perhaps might come before winter to attack the village, that the Isolinois were not capable of making any resistance to them, that apparently they would take flight at the first shock, and that the Iroquois would not be able to overtake them, because the Isolinois run much faster than they do; they would vent their rage on the French, whose small number would be incapable of making head against these savages; that there was only one remedy, and that was to fortify themselves in some post easy of defense; that he had found one of this kind near the village, where they would be proof against the insults of the Isolinois and the arms of the Iroquois, who would not be able to storm them there, and who for this reason would not undertake to attack them.

These reasons and some others of that kind which I made them, persuaded them, and brought all to work with a good grace in building a fort which was called Crevecoeur, situated four days' journey from the great village of the Isolinois, descending towards the river Colbert.

A great thaw having set in on the 15th of January and rendered the river free below the village, the Sieur de la Salle begged me to accompany him, and we proceeded with one of our canoes to the place which we were going to select to work at this little fort. [Hennepin and Membre's maps show it to be on the easterly side of the river.—H. W. B.] It was a little mound about two hundred paces distant from the bank of the river which in the season of the rains, extends to the foot of it; two broad, deep ravines protected two other sides and a part of the fourth, which we completely entrenched by a ditch which united the two ravines. Their exterior slope, which served as a counterscarp, was fortified, we made chevaux de frise and cut this eminence down steep on all sides, and the earth was supported as much as was necessary with strong pieces of timber, with thick planks, and for fear of any surprise we planted a stockade around, the timbers of which were twenty-five feet long and a foot thick.

The summit of the mound was left in its natural figure, which formed an irregular square, and we contented ourselves with putting on the edge a good parapet of earth capable of covering all our force, whose barracks were placed in two of the angles of this fort, in order that they might be always ready in case of attack.

Fathers Gabriel, Zenoble and I lodged in a cabin covered with boards, which we adjusted with the help of our workmen and in which we retired after work, our people for evening and morning prayer, and where, being unable any longer to say mass, the wine which we had made from the large grapes of the country having just failed us, we contented ourselves with singing Vespers on holidays and Sundays and preaching after morning prayers.

The forge was set up along the curtain which faced the wood. The Sieur de la Salle posted himself in the middle with the Sieur de Tonty; and wood was cut down to make charcoal for the blacksmith.

While they were engaged at this work, we were thinking constantly only of our exploration, and we saw that the building of a bark would be very difficult on account of the desertion of the pit-sawyers. It occurred to us one day, to tell our people that if there was a man of good will among them, who was willing to try and make sheathing planks there was hope of succeeding, with a little more labor and time, and that at the worst we should after all only spoil a few.

Immediately two of our men offered to work at it. The trial was made and they succeeded pretty well, although they had never before undertaken a similar piece of work. We began a bark of forty-two feet keel, and only twelve broad. We pushed on the work with so much care, that notwithstanding the building of Fort Crevecoeur, the sheathing was sawed, all the wood of the bark ready and curved, in the first of the month of March.

It is to be remarked that in the country of the Isolinois, the winter is not more severe than in Provence, but that of the years 1679 [and 1680], the snow lasted more than twenty days, which was an extraordinary surprise to the Indians, who had not yet experienced so severe a winter, so that the Sieur de la Salle and I saw ourselves exposed to new hardships, which will perhaps appear incredible to those who have no experience in great voyages and new discoveries.

Fort Crevecoeur was almost completed, all the wood had been prepared to complete the bark, but we had neither rigging nor sails, nor iron enough; we heard no tidings of the bark which we had left on Lake Dauphin nor of the men who had been sent to learn what had become of her. Meanwhile the Sieur de la Salle saw that summer was approaching, and that if he waited uselessly some months more, our enterprise would be retarded a year, and perhaps two or three, because being so far from Canada, he could not put his affairs in any order or cause the things he needed to be forwarded.

In this extremity we both adopted a resolution, as extraordinary as it was difficult to carry out, I to go with two men into unknown countries, where one is at every moment in a great danger for his life, and he to proceed on foot to Fort Frontenac, itself a distance of more than five hundred leagues.

We were then at the close of winter which had been, as we have said, as severe in America as in France, the ground was still covered with snow which was neither melted nor able to bear a man in snow shoes. It was necessary to load ourselves with the usual equipage on these occasions, that is to say, a blanket, a kettle, an axe, a gun, powder, and lead, dressed skins to make Indian shoes, which often last only a day, those which are worn in France being of no use in these western countries. Besides this he must resolve to push through bushes, to walk in marshes, and melting snow, sometimes waist high, and that for whole days, sometimes even with nothing to eat; because he, and three others who accompanied him, could not carry provisions, being compelled to depend for all their subsistence on what they might shoot, and expect to drink only the water they might find on the way.

To conclude, he was exposed every day and especially night to be surprised by four or five nations which made war on each other, with this difference, that these nations where he was to pass, all know the French, and that those where I was going had never seen Europeans. Nevertheless all these difficulties did not astonish him any more than they did me. Our only trouble was to find among our force some men robust enough to go with us, and to prevent the others, already greatly fluctuating, from all deserting after our departure.

Some days after we fortunately found means to disabuse our people of the false impressions which the Islinois had produced on them at the instigation of Monso, chief of the Miamis. Some Indians arrived at the village of the Islinois from these remote nations, and one of them assured us of the beauty of the great River Colbert or Meschasipi.

We were confirmed in it by the report of several Indians, and by a private Islinois, who told us in secret on our arrival that it was navigable. Nevertheless this account did not suffice to disabuse our people and completely reassure them. We wished to make the Islinois themselves avow it, although we had learned that they had resolved in council always to tell us the same thing. Soon after a favorable occasion presented itself.

A young Islinois warrior who had taken some prisoners in the direction of the south and who had come on ahead of his comrades, passed to our shipyard. They gave him some Indian corn to eat. As he was returning from the lower part of the River Colbert, of which we pretended to have some knowledge, this young man traced for us with coal, a pretty exact map, assuring us that he had been everywhere in his periagua; that there was not down to the sea, which the Indians call the great lake, either falls or rapids.

But that as this river became very broad, there were in some places sand banks and mud which barred a part of it. He also told us the name of the nations that lived on its bank, and of the rivers which it receives. I wrote them down and I will be able to give an account thereof in a second volume of our Discovery.

We thanked him by a small present, for having revealed to us the truth, which the chief men of his Islinois nation had disguised from us. He begged us not to tell them, and an axe was given him to close his mouth, after the fashion of the Indians when they wish to enjoin secrecy.

The next morning after our public prayers, we went to the village where we found the Islinois assembled in the cabin of one of the most important who was giving a bear feast, which is a meat that they esteem highly.

They made place for us among them on a fine mat of flags, which they spread for us. We told them through one of their men, who knew the language, that we wished to make known to them, that He who has made all, whom we call the Great Master of Life, takes a particular care of the French, that He had done us the favor to instruct us as to the condition of the great river, called by us Colbert, as to which we had difficulty in ascertaining the truth, since they had rendered it impossible for us to navigate, and then we informed them what we had learned the day before.

These savages thought that we had learned all these things by some extraordinary way; and after having closed the mouth with their hand, which is a way that they often employ to express their surprise, they told us that it was only the desire which they had to retain our chief with the Greygowns or Bare Feet [as all the Indians of America call our Religious of Saint Francis] to remain with them, had obliged them to conceal the truth. They confirmed all that we had learned from the young warrior, and have since always persisted in the same opinion.

This affair greatly diminished the fears of our Frenchmen, and they were entirely delivered from them by the arrival of several Osages, Ciccaca and Akansa, who had come from the southward in order to see the French and to buy axes.

They all bore witness that the river was navigable to the sea, and that as the coming of the French was made known, all the nations of the lower part of the River Colbert would come to dance the Calumet of Peace to us, in order to maintain a good understanding, and trade with the French nation.

The Miamis came at the same time to dance the calumet to the Illinois, and made an alliance with them against the Iroquois, their common enemy. The Sieur de la Salle made some presents to unite these two nations more firmly together.

Seeing that we were three Recollect missionaries with the few Frenchmen whom we had at Fort Crevecoeur, and having no more wine to say mass, Father Gabriel, who had need of relief at his advanced age, declared that he would willingly remain alone at the fort with our Frenchmen.

Father Zenoble who had desired to have the great mission of the Islinois, composed of about seven or eight thousand souls, began to weary of it, finding it difficult to adapt himself to the importunate manners of the Indians, with whom he dwelt. We spoke about it to the Sieur de la Salle, who made a present of three axes to the father's host, by name Oumahouha [Omaha], that is to say, the Wolf, who was the chief of a family or tribe, in order that he might take care to maintain the Father, whom this chief called his son, and who lodged him and considered him as one of his children.

This Father who was only half a league from the fort, came to explain to us the subject of his troubles, telling us, that he was not yet accustomed to the ideas of the Indians, that nevertheless he already knew a part of their language. I offered to take his mission, provided he would go in my place to the remote nations of whom we had as yet no knowledge, as that which the Indians had given us was only superficial. This set the father thinking, and he preferred to remain with the Islinois, of whom he had some knowledge, rather than expose himself to go among unknown nations.

The Sieur de la Salle left in Fort Crevecoeur the Sieur de Tonty as commandant, with some soldiers and the carpenters who were employed building the bark intended for the attempt to descend to the sea by the River Colbert, in order to be, by this means, protected from the arrows of the Indians in this vessel. He left him powder and lead, a blacksmith, guns and other arms to defend themselves, in case they were attacked by the Iroquois.

He gave him instructions to remain in his fort, and before returning to Fort Frontenac, to go and get a reinforcement, cables and rigging for the last bark, which he left built up to the ribband. He begged me to consent to take the pains to go and explore in advance the route which he would have to take to the River Colbert [and to the Sioux on the Upper Mississippi.—H. W. B.], on his return from Canada, but as I had an abscess in the mouth, which suppurated continually, and which had continued for a year and a half, I manifested to him my repugnance, and told him that I needed to return to Canada to have it treated. He replied that if I refused this voyage, that he would write to my superiors, that I would be the cause of the want of success of our new missions.

The Reverend Father Gabriel de la Ribourde, who had been my Father Master in the Novitiate, begged me to proceed, saying that if I died of this infirmity, God would be one day glorified by my apostolic labors. "It is true, my son," said this venerable old man to me, who had whitened more than forty years in the austerity of penance, "that you will have many monsters to overcome, and precipices to pass in this enterprise, which demands the strength of the most robust. You do not know a word of the language of these nations, whom you are going to try and gain to God, but courage, you will gain as many victories as combats."

Considering that this Father had at his age volunteered to come and aid me in my second year of our new discovery, in the view that he had to announce Jesus Christ to the unknown nations, and that this aged man was the only male child and heir of his father's house, who was a gentleman of Burgundy, I offered to undertake this voyage to endeavor to go and form an acquaintance with the nations among whom I hoped soon to settle in order to preach the faith. The Sieur de la Salle told me that I gratified him.

He gave me a peace calumet and a canoe with two men, one of whom was called the Picard du Gay, who is now in Paris, and the other Michael Ako. He entrusted this latter with some goods intended to make presents, which were worth a thousand or twelve hundred livres, and he gave me ten knives, twelve awls, a small roll of tobacco, to give the Indians, about two pounds of black and white beads, and a small package of needles, assuring me that he would have given me more if he had been able. In fact he is very liberal to his friends.

Having received the blessing of the Reverend Father Gabriel and leave from the Sieur de la Salle, and after having embraced all our men who came to escort us to our place of embarking, Father Gabriel finishing his adieus by these words: "Viriliter age et confortetur cor tuum." We set out from Fort Crevecoeur the 29th of February, 1680, and toward evening, while descending the river Seignelay, we met on our way several parties of Islinois returning to their village in their periaguas [pirogues or wooden canoes] or gondolas, loaded with meat.

They would have obliged us to return, our two boatmen were strongly influenced, but as they would have had to pass by Fort Crevecoeur, where our Frenchmen would have stopped them, we pursued our way the next day, and my two men afterward confessed the design which they had entertained.

The river Seignelay [Illinois] on which we were sailing, is as deep and broad as the Seine at Paris, and in two or three places widens out to a quarter of a league. It is skirted by hills, whose sides are covered with fine large trees. Some of these hills are half a league apart, leaving between them a marshy strip, often inundated, especially in the autumn and spring, but producing, nevertheless, very large trees.

On ascending these hills, you discover prairies further than the eye can reach, studded, at intervals, with groves of tall trees, apparently planted there intentionally. The current of the river is not perceptible, except in time of great rains; it is at all times navigable for large barks about a hundred leagues, from its mouth to the Islinois village, whence its course almost always runs south by west.

On the 7th of March we found, about two leagues from its mouth, a nation called Tamaroa, or Maroa, composed of two hundred families. They would have taken us to their village lying west of the river Colbert [Mississippi], six or seven leagues below the mouth of the river Seignelay, but our two canoemen, in hopes of still greater gain, preferred to pass on [as they were required by La Salle to do.—H. W. B.], according to the advice I then gave them.

These last Indians seeing that we carried iron and arms to their enemies, and unable to overtake us in their periaguas, which are wooden canoes, much heavier than our [birch] bark one, which went much faster than their boats, despatched some of their young men after us by land, to pierce us with their arrows at some narrow part of the river, but in vain; for soon after discovering the fire made by these warriors at their ambuscade, we promptly crossed the river, gained the other side and encamped in an island, leaving our canoe loaded and our little dog to wake us, so as to embark more expeditiously should the Indians attempt to surprise us by swimming across.

Soon after leaving these Indians, we came to the mouth of the river Seignelay, fifty leagues distant from Fort Crevecoeur, and about a hundred leagues from the great Islinois village. It lies between 36 degrees and 37 degrees north latitude, and consequently one hundred and twenty or thirty leagues from the Gulf of Mexico.

In the angle formed on the south by this river [at Grafton], at its mouth, is a flat precipitous rock, about forty feet high, very well suited for building a fort. On the northern side, opposite the rock, and on the west side beyond the river, are fields of black earth, the end of which you can not see, all ready for cultivation, which would be very advantageous for the existence of a colony.

The ice which floated down from the north kept us in this place till the 12th of March, whence we continued our route, traversing the river and sounding on all sides to see whether it was navigable. There are, indeed, three islets in the middle, near the mouth of the river Seignelay, which stop the floating wood and trees from the north, and form several large sand bars, yet the channels are deep enough, and there is sufficient water for barks,—large flat-boats can pass there at all times.

The river Colbert runs south-southwest, and comes from the north and northwest; it runs between two chains of mountains, very small here, which wind with the river, and in some places are pretty far from the banks, so that between the mountains and the river, there are large prairies, where you often see herds of wild cattle browsing. In other places these eminences leave semi-circular spots covered with grass or wood. Beyond these mountains you discover vast plains, but the more we approach the northern side ascending, the earth did not appear to us so fertile, nor the woods so beautiful as in the Illinois country.

This great river is almost everywhere a short league in width, and in some places, two leagues; it is divided by a number of islands covered with trees, interlaced with so many vines as to be almost impassable. It receives no considerable river on the western side except that of the Oton-tenta, and another, which comes from the west north-west, seven or eight leagues from the Falls of St. Anthony of Padua.

On the eastern side you meet first an inconsiderable river, and then further on another, called by the Indians Onisconsin, or Misconsin [Wisconsin], which comes from the east and east north-east. Sixty leagues up you leave it, and make a portage of half a league to reach the Bay of the Puans by another river which, near its source, meanders most curiously. It is almost as broad as the river Seignelay, or Islinois, and empties into the river Colbert, a hundred leagues above the river Seignelay.

Twenty-four leagues above, you come to the Black river called by the Nadouessious, or Islati, and the Chabadeba, or Chabaoudeba, it seems inconsiderable. Thirty leagues higher up you find the Lake of Tears, Lake Pepin, which we so named because the Indians who had taken us, wishing to kill us, some of them wept the whole night to induce others to consent to our death. This lake, which is formed by the river Colbert, is seven leagues long, and about four wide; there is no considerable current in the middle that we could perceive, but only at its entrance and exit. Half a league below the Lake of Tears, on the south side, is Buffalo river, full of turtles. It is so called by the Indians on account of the number of Buffalo found there. We followed it for ten or twelve leagues; it empties with rapidity into the river Colbert, but as you ascend it, it is always gentle and free from rapids. It is skirted by mountains far enough in some places to form prairies. The mouth is wooded on both sides and is full as wide as that of the Seignelay.

Forty leagues above is a river [the St. Croix], full of rapids, by which, striking northwest, you can proceed to Lake Conde [Superior], as far as Nimissakouat river, which empties into that lake. This first river is called Tomb river because the Isati left there the body of one of their warriors killed by a rattlesnake, on whom, according to their custom, I put a blanket. This act of humanity gained me much importance by the gratitude displayed by the men of the deceased's tribe, in a great banquet which they gave me in their country, and to which more than a hundred Indians were invited.

Continuing to ascend this river ten or twelve leagues more, the navigation is interrupted by a cataract which I called the Falls of St. Anthony of Padua, in gratitude for the favors done me by the Almighty through the intercession of that great saint, whom we had chosen patron and protector of all our enterprises.

This cataract is forty or fifty feet high, divided in the middle of its fall by a rocky island of pyramidal form. The high mountains which skirt the river Colbert last only as far as the river Onisconsin, about one hundred and twenty leagues. At this place it begins to flow from the west and northwest without our having been able to learn from the Indians, who have ascended it very far, the spot where this river rises.

They merely told us that twenty or thirty leagues below, there is a second fall, at the foot of which are some villages of the prairie people, called Thinthonha, who live there a part of the year.

Eight leagues above St. Anthony of Padua falls, on the right you find the river of the Issati or Nadoussion with a very narrow mouth, which you can ascend to the north for about seventy leagues to Lake Buade [Mille lake], or of the Issati where it rises. We gave this river [Rum river] the name of St. Francis. This last lake spreads out into great marshes, producing wild rice, like many other places, down to the extremity of the Bay of the Puans. This kind of grain grows in marshy places without anyone sowing it; it resembles oats, but tastes better, and the stalks are longer as well as the ear. The Indians gather it in due season. The women tie several ears together with white wood bark to prevent its being all devoured by the flocks of duck and teal found there. The Indians lay in stock for part of the year, and to eat out of the hunting season.

Lake Buade, or Lake of the Issati, is situated about seventy leagues west of Lake Conde; it is impossible to go from one to the other by land on account of the marshy and quaggy nature of the ground; you might go, though with difficulty on the snow in snowshoes; by water there are many portages, and it is a hundred and fifty leagues, on account of the many turns to be made.

From Lake Conde, to go conveniently in canoe, you must pass by Tomb river, where we found only the skeleton of the Indian whom I mentioned above, the bears having eaten the flesh, and pulled up poles which the deceased's relatives had planted in form of a monument. One of our boatmen found a war calumet beside the grave, and an earthen pot upset, in which the Indians had left fat buffalo meat, to assist the departed, as they say, in making his journey to the land of souls.

In the neighborhood of Lake Buade are many other lakes, whence issue several rivers, on the banks of which live the Issati, Nadouessans, Tinthonha [which means prairie-men], Ouadebathon, River People, Chongaskethon, Dog, or Wolf tribe [for chonga among these nations means dog or wolf], and other tribes, all of which we comprise under the name of Nadoession. These Indians number eight or nine thousand warriors, very brave, great runners, and very good bowmen. It was by a part of these tribes that I and our two canoeemen were taken in the following way:

We scrupulously said our morning and evening prayers every day on embarking, and the Angelus at noon, adding some paraphrases on the Response of St. Bonaventure, Cardinal, in honor of St. Anthony of Padua. In this way we begged of God to meet these Indians by day, for when they discover people at night they kill them as enemies, to rob those whom they murder secretly of some axes or knives which they value more than we do gold and silver; they even kill their own allies, when they can conceal their death, so as afterward to boast of having killed men, and thus pass for soldiers.

We had considered the river Colbert with great pleasure, and without hindrance, to know whether it was navigable up and down; we were loaded with seven or eight large turkeys, which multiply of themselves in these parts. We wanted neither buffalo nor deer, nor beaver, nor fish, nor bear meat, for we killed those animals as they swam across the river.

Our prayers were heard, when, on the 11th of April, 1680, at two o'clock in the afternoon, we suddenly perceived thirty-three bark canoes, manned by a hundred and twenty Indians, coming down with extraordinary speed to make war on the Miamis, Isinois and Maroha. These Indians surrounded us, and while at a distance, discharged some arrows at us, but as they approached our canoe, the old men seeing us with the calumet of peace in our hands, prevented the young men from killing us.

These brutal men, leaping from their canoes, some on land, others into the water with frightful cries and yells, approached us, and as we made no resistance, being only three against so great a number, one of them wrenched our calumet from our hands, while our canoe and theirs were made fast to the shore. We first presented them a piece of Petun or French tobacco, better for smoking than theirs, and the eldest among them uttered these words, "Miamiha, Miamiha."

As we did not understand their language, we took a little stick and by signs which we made on the sand, showed them that their enemies, the Miamis, whom they sought, had fled across the river Colbert to join the Isinois; when they saw themselves discovered and unable to surprise their enemies, three or four old men, laying their hands on my head, wept in a lugubrious tone, and I, with a wretched handkerchief I had left, wiped away their tears.

These savages would not smoke our peace-calumet. They made us cross the river with great cries, which all shouted together with tears in their eyes; they made us paddle before them, and we heard yells capable of striking the most resolute with terror. After landing our canoe and our goods, some part of which they had already stolen, we made a fire to boil our kettle; we gave them two large wild turkeys that we killed.

These savages having called their assembly to deliberate on what they were to do with us, the two head chiefs of the party approaching, showed us, by signs, that the warriors wished to tomahawk us.

This compelled me to go to the war chiefs with one of my men, leaving the other by our property, and throw into their midst six axes, fifteen knives, and six fathom of our black tobacco, then bowing down my head, I showed them, with an axe that they might tomahawk us, if they thought proper.

This present appeased several individuals among them, who gave us some beaver to eat, putting the three first morsels in our mouth according to the custom of the country, and blowing on the meat, which was too hot, before putting their bark dish before us, to let us eat as we liked. We spent the night in anxiety because, before retiring at night, they had returned us our peace-calumet.

Our two canoemen were, however, resolved to sell their lives dearly, and to resist if attacked; they kept their arms and swords ready. As for my part, I determined to allow myself to be killed without any resistance, as I was going to announce to them a God who had been falsely accused, unjustly condemned, and cruelly crucified, without showing the least aversion to those who put Him to death. In our uncertainty we watched one after the other, so as not to be surprised asleep.

In the morning, April 12th, one of their captains named Narrhetoba, with his face and bare body smeared with paint, asked me for our peace-calumet, filled it with tobacco of his country, made all his band smoke first, and then all the others who plotted our ruin. He then gave us to understand that we must go with them to their country, and they all turned back with us; having thus broken off their voyage.

I was not sorry in this conjuncture to continue our discoveries with these people. But the greatest trouble I had was, that I found it difficult to say my office before these savages, many of whom seeing me move my lips said, in a fierce tone, Ouackanche; and as we did not know a word of their language, we believed that they were angry at it.

Michael Ako, all out of countenance, told me, that if I continued to say my breviary we should all three be killed and the Picard [a nickname for Anthony Auguel] begged me at least to conceal myself for my devotions, so as not to provoke them further. I followed the latter's advice, but the more I concealed myself, the more I had the Indians at my heels, for when I entered the wood, they thought I was going to hide some goods under ground, so I knew not on what side to turn to pray, for they never let me out of sight.

This obliged me to beg pardon of my two canoemen, assuring them that I ought not dispense with saying my office, that if we were massacred for that, I should be the innocent cause of their death, as well as of my own. By the word Ouakanche, these savages meant that the book I was reading was a spirit; but by their gesture they nevertheless showed a kind of aversion, so that to accustom them to it, I chanted the Litany of the Blessed Virgin in the canoe with my book open. They thought that the breviary was a spirit which taught me to sing for their diversion, for these people are naturally fond of singing.

The outrages done us by these Indians during our whole route were incredible, for seeing that our canoe was much larger and more heavily laden than theirs [for they have only a quiver full of arrows, a bow and a wretched dressed skin, to serve two as a blanket during the night, which was still pretty cold at that season, always going north], and that we could not go faster than they, they put some warriors with us to help us row to oblige us to follow them.

These Indians sometimes make thirty or forty leagues by water, when at war and pressed for time, or anxious to surprise some enemy. Those who had taken us were of different villages and of different opinions as to us; we cabined every night by the young chief who had asked for our peace calumet, and put ourselves under his protection; but jealousy arose among these Indians, so that the chief of the party named Aquipaguetin, one of whose sons had been killed by the Miamis, seeing that he could not avenge his death on that nation which he sought, turned all his rage on us.

He wept through almost every night for him he had lost in war, to oblige those who had come out to avenge him, to kill us and seize all we had, so as to be able to pursue his enemies; but those who liked European goods were much disposed to preserve us, so as to attract other Frenchmen there and get iron, which is extremely precious in their eyes; but of which they knew the great utility only when they saw one of our French canoemen kill three or four wild geese or turkeys at a single gun shot, while they can scarcely kill even one with an arrow.

In consequence, as we afterward learned, that the words Manza Ouackange, mean "iron that has understanding," and so these nations called a gun which breaks a man's bones, while their arrows only glance through the flesh they pierce, rarely breaking the bones of those whom they strike, and consequently producing wounds more easily cured than those made by our European guns, which often cripple those whom they wound.

EXPLANATORY NOTE BY THE EDITOR.

Hennepin's captors, in the fall of 1680, took him and his comrades down the Mississippi towards the Wisconsin, on a buffalo hunt. Here they were rescued by Daniel Greysolon Du Lhut, or Duluth, a veteran trader of the Lake Superior region. Coming by way of the River St. Croix he heard of these captives, and continued down the Mississippi and obtained their release. Hennepin, with Du Gay or Antoine Auguel, took the route of Joliet and Marquette by way of the Wisconsin, and down Green Bay to Mackinac, where they remained until spring. The next year they continued on to France, where Hennepin published his "La Louisiane" in 1683, from whence the foregoing pages were taken. He never returned to America.

Michel Accau remained, and in 1695, was married at the Peoria Mission to an Indian girl.

H. W. B.

LA SALLE'S VOYAGE DOWN THE MISSISSIPPI—"THE PROCES VERBAL"—TAKING POSSESSION OF ALL THE COUNTRY
DRAINED BY THAT RIVER FOR THE KING OF FRANCE—LA SALLE'S WILL, ETC.

"PROCES VERBAL."

1682—"OF THE TAKING POSSESSION OF LOUISIANA, AT THE MOUTH OF THE MISSISSIPPI, BY THE SIEUR DE LA SALLE,
ON THE 9TH OF APRIL, 1682.

J AQUES DE LA MÉTAIRIE, Notary of Fort Frontenac in New France, commissioned to exercise the said function of notary during the voyage to Louisiana, in North America by M. de la Salle, Governor of Fort Frontenac for the King, and commandant of the said discovery by the commission of his Majesty given at St. Germain, on the 12th day of May, 1678.

"To all those to whom these presents shall come, greeting: Know, that having been requested by the said Sieur de la Salle to deliver to him an act, signed by us and by the witnesses therein named, of possession by him taken of the country of Louisiana, near the three mouths of the River Colbert, in the Gulf of Mexico, on the 9th of April, 1682.

"In the name of the most high, mighty, invincible, and victorious* Prince, Louis the Great, by the Grace of God,

* This curious and important historical document has never been printed. The translation here given is made from the original, contained in the archives of the Marine Department at Paris. The proper names remain precisely as they are found in the manuscript, although the orthography of several of them is different from that which was afterwards adopted.—Note by Mr. Sparks on its publication at Boston in 1841. Falconer. It appears corrected to correspond with the original manuscript in Falconer's Discovery of the Mississippi, and also in French's Hist. Col. of Louisiana, Part I.—H. W. B.

Jean Baptiste Talon

Intendant

of

New France

COMPTON VIDEO

King of France and of Navarre, Fourteenth of that name, and of his heirs, and the successor of his crown, we, the aforesaid notary, have delivered the said act to the said Sieur de la Salle, the tenor whereof follows:

"On the 27th of December, 1681, M. de la Salle departed on foot to join M. de Tonty, who had preceded him with his followers and all his equipage 40 leagues into the Miamis country, where the ice on the River Chekagon* in the country of the Mascoutens, had arrested his progress, and where, when the ice became stronger, they used sledges to drag the baggage, the canoes, and a wounded Frenchman, through the whole length of this river, and on the Illinois, a distance of 70 leagues.

"At length, all the French being together, on the 25th of January, 1682, we came to Pimiteoui [Upper Peoria Lake]. From that place, the river being frozen only in some parts, we continued our route to the River Colbert, 60 leagues, or thereabouts, from Pimiteoui, and 90 leagues, or thereabouts, from the village of Illinois. We reached the banks of the River Colbert on the 6th of February, and remained there until the 13th, waiting for the savages, whose progress had been impeded by the ice. On the 13th, all having assembled, we renewed our voyage, being 22 French, carrying arms, accompanied by the Reverend Father Zenobe Membre, one of the Recollet Missionaries, and followed by 18 New England savages, and several women, Ilgonquines, Otchipoises, and Huronnes.

"On the 14th, we arrived at the village of Maroa, consisting of a hundred cabins, without inhabitants. Proceeding about a hundred leagues down the River Colbert, we went ashore to hunt on the 26th of February. A

* Later and now called the Desplanes. In earlier reference the present so named Chicago river was regarded as an inlet of the lake. And as late as 1812 the Desplanes from the Chicago portage to the Illinois was known as the river Chicago. See Edwards' History of Illinois, P. 98.—H. W. B.

Frenchman was lost in the woods, and it was reported to M. de la Salle, that a large number of savages had been seen in the vicinity. Thinking that they might have seized the Frenchman, and in order to observe these savages, he marched through the woods during two days, but without finding them, because they had all been frightened by the guns which they had heard, and had fled.

“Returning to camp, he sent in every direction French and savages on the search, with orders, if they fell in with savages, to take them alive without injury, that he might gain from them intelligence of this Frenchman. Gabriel Barbie, with two savages, having met five of the Chikacha nation, captured two of them. They were received with all possible kindness, and, after he had explained to them that he was anxious about a Frenchman who had been lost, and that he only detained them that he might rescue him from their hands, if he was really among them, and afterwards make with them an advantageous peace [the French doing good to everybody], they assured him that they had not seen the man whom we sought, but that peace would be received with the greatest satisfaction. Presents were then given to them, and, as they had signified that one of their villages was not more than half a day’s journey distant, M. de la Salle set out the next day to go thither; but, after travelling till night, and having remarked that they often contradicted themselves in their discourse, he declined going further, without more provisions. Having pressed them to tell the truth, they confessed that it was yet four days’ journey to their villages; and, perceiving that M. de la Salle was angry at having been deceived, they proposed that one of them should remain with him, while the other carried the news to the village, whence the elders would come and join them four days’ journey below that place. The said Sieur de la Salle returned to the camp with one of these Chikachas; and the Frenchman, whom we sought, having been found, he continued his voyage, and passed the river of the Chepontias, and the village of the Metsigmeas. The fog, which was very thick, prevented his finding the passage which led to the rendezvous proposed by the Chikachas.

On the 12th of March, we arrived at the Kapaha village of Akansa. Having established a peace there, and taken possession, we passed, on the 15th, another of their villages, situate on the border of the river, and also two others, farther off in the depth of the forest, and arrived at that of Imaha, the largest village in this nation, where peace was confirmed, and where the chief acknowledged that the village belonged to his Majesty. Two Akansas embarked with M. de la Salle to conduct him to the Talusas, their allies, about 50 leagues distant, who inhabit eight villages upon the borders of a little lake. On the 19th, we passed the village of Tourika, Jason, and Kouera; but, as they did not border on the river, and were hostile to the Akansas and Taensas, we did not stop there.

“On the 20th, we arrived at the Taensas, by whom we were exceedingly well received, and supplied with a large quantity of provisions. M. de Tonty passed a night at one of their villages, where there were about 700 men carrying arms, assembled in the place. Here again a peace was concluded. A peace was also made with the Koroas, whose chief came there from the principal village of the Koroas, two leagues distant from that of the Natches. The two chiefs accompanied M. de la Salle to the banks of the river. Here the Koroa chief embarked with him, to conduct him to his village, where peace was again concluded with this nation, which, besides the five other villages of which it is composed, is allied to nearly 40 others. On the 31st, we passed the village of the Oumas without knowing it, on account of the fog, and its distance from the river.

“On the 3rd of April, at about 10 o'clock in the morning, we saw among the canes 13 or 14 canoes. M. de la Salle landed, with several of his people. Footprints were seen, and also savages, a little lower down, who were fishing, and who fled precipitately as soon as they discovered us. Others of our party then went ashore on the borders of a marsh formed by the inundation of the river. M. de la Salle sent two Frenchmen, and then two savages, to reconnoitre, who reported that there was a village not far off, but that the whole of this marsh, covered with canes, must be crossed to reach it; that they had been assailed with a shower of arrows by the inhabitants of the town, who had not dared to engage with them in the marsh, but who had then withdrawn, although neither the French nor the savages with them had fired, on account of the orders they had received not to act unless in pressing danger. Presently we heard a drum beat in the village, and the cries and howlings with which these barbarians are accustomed to make attacks. We waited three or four hours, and, as we could not encamp in this marsh, and seeing no one, and no longer hearing anything, we embarked.

“An hour afterwards, we came to the village of Maheouala, lately destroyed, and containing dead bodies and marks of blood. Two leagues below this place we encamped. We continued our voyage till the 6th, when we discovered three channels by which the River Colbert discharges itself into the sea. We landed on the bank of the most western channel, about three leagues from its mouth. On the 7th, M. de la Salle went to reconnoitre the shores of the neighboring sea, and M. de Tonty likewise examined the great middle channel. They found these two outlets beautiful, large and deep. On the 8th, we reascended the river, a little above its confluence with the sea, to find a dry place, beyond the reach of inundations. The elevation of the North Pole was here about 27 degrees. Here we prepared a column and a cross, and to the said column were affixed the arms of France, with this inscription:

LOUIS LE GRAND, ROI DE FRANCE ET DE NAVARRE, REGNE;
LE NEUVIEME, AVRIL, 1682.

“The whole party, under arms, chanted the Te Deum, the Exaudi, the Domine salvum fac Regem; and then, after a salute of firearms and cries of Vive le Roi, the column was erected by M. de la Salle, who, standing near it, said, with a loud voice, in French: “In the name of the most high, mighty, invincible, and victorious Prince, Louis the Great, by the Grace of God, King of France and of Navarre, Fourteenth of that name, this ninth day of April, one thousand six hundred and eighty-two, I, in virtue of the commission of his Majesty which I hold in my hand, and which may be seen by all whom it may concern, have taken, and do now take, in the name of his Majesty and of his successors to the crown, possession of this country of Louisiana, the seas, harbours, ports, bays, adjacent straits; and all the nations, people, provinces, cities, towns, villages, mines, minerals, fisheries, streams, and rivers, comprised in the extent of the said Louisiana, from the mouth of the great river St. Louis on the eastern side, otherwise called Ohio, Alighin, Sipore, or Chikachas, and this with the consent of the Chaouanons, Chikachas, and other people dwelling therein, with whom we have made alliance; as also along the River Colbert, or Mississippi, and rivers which discharge themselves therein, from its source beyond the country of the Kious or Nadouessious, and this with their consent, and with the consent of the Motantees, Illinois, Mesigameas, Natches, Koroas, which are the most considerable nations dwelling therein, with whom also we have made alliance, either by ourselves or by others in our behalf; as far as its mouth at the sea, or Gulf of Mexico, about the 27th degree of the elevation of the North Pole, and also to the mouth of River of Palms; upon the assurance which we have received from all these nations, that we are the first Europeans who have descended or ascended the said River Colbert; hereby protesting against all those who may in future undertake to invade any or all of these countries, people, or lands, above described, to the prejudice of the right of his Majesty, acquired by the consent of the nations herein named. Of which, and of all that can be needed, I hereby take to witness those who hear me, and demand an act of the Notary, as required by law.

“To which the whole assembly responded with shouts of Vive le Roi, and with salutes of firearms. Moreover, the said Sieur de la Salle caused to be buried at the foot of the tree, to which the cross was attached, a leaden plate, on one side of which were engraved the arms of France, and the following Latin inscription:*

LVDOVICVS MAGNVS REGAT. NONO APRILIS CIO IOC LXXXII.
ROBERTVS CAVELIER, CVM DOMINO DE TONTY, LEGATO, R.
P. ZENOBIO MEMBRE, RECOLLECTO, ET VIGINTI GALLIS, PRIMVS HOC FLVMEN, INDE AB ILINEORVM PAGO, ENAVI-GAVIT, EJVSQVE OSTIVM FECIT PERVIVM, NONO APRILIS
ANNI CIO IOC LXXXII.

“After which the Sieur de la Salle said, that his Majesty, as eldest son of the Church, would annex no country to his crown, without making it his chief care to establish the Christian religion therein, and that its symbol must

*Note.—The following is a translation of the Latin inscription on the leaden plate referred to: Louis the Great reigns. Robert Cavaller, with Lord Tonti as Lieutenant, R. P. Zenobe, Membre Recollect, and twenty Frenchmen, first navigated this stream from the country of the Illinois, and also passed through its mouth on the 9th day of April, 1682.—H. W. B.

now be planted; which was accordingly done at once by erecting a cross, before which the Vexilla and the Domine saluum fac Regem were sung. Whereupon the ceremony was concluded with cries of Vive le Roi.

"Of all and every of the above, the said Sieur de la Salle having required of us an instrument, we have delivered to him the same, signed by us, and by the undersigned witnesses, this ninth day of April, one thousand six hundred and eighty-two.

"LA METAIRIE, Notary.

"DE LA SALLE.

"P. ZENOBE, Recollet Missionary.

"HENRY DE TONTY.

"FRANCOIS DE BOISRONDET.

"JEAN BOURDON,* }

"SIEUR D'AUTRY,* }

"JAQUES CAUCHOIS.

"PIERRE YOU.

"GILLES MEUCRET.

"JEAN MICHEL, Surgeon.

"JEAN MAS.

"JEAN DULIGNON.

"NICOLAS DE LA SALLE."

Note. The above is reprinted from Mr. Sparks's "Life of La Salle," published at Boston, Massachusetts, in 1844. The original document, in French, has not been published.
—Falconer.

* The names Jean Bourdon and Sieur d'Autray appear above as two separate persons. In fact they are only one. Sieur de Autray was the title of nobility conferred on Jean Bourdon for being one of La Salle's party in this descent of the Mississippi.—H. W. B.

WILL OF THE SIEUR DE LA SALLE.

“Robert Cavelier, Esquire, Sieur de la Salle, Seigneur and Governor of the Fort Frontenac in New France, considering the great dangers and continual perils in which the voyages I undertake engage me, and wishing to acknowledge, as much as I am able, the great obligations which I owe to M. Francois Plet, my cousin, for the signal services which he has rendered to me in my most pressing necessities, and because it is through his assistance that I have preserved to this time Fort Frontenac against the efforts which were made to deprive me of it, I have given, granted, and transferred, and give, grant, and transfer, by these presents, to the said M. Plet, in case of my death, the seigniority and property of the ground and limits of the said Fort Frontenac and its depending lands, and all my rights in the country of the Miamis, Illinois, and others to the south, together with the establishment which is in the country of the Miamis, in the condition which it shall be at the time of my death, that of Niagara, and all the others which I may have founded there, together with all barges, boats, great boats, moveables, and immoveables, rights, privileges, rents, lands, buildings, and other things belonging to me which shall be found there; willing that these presents be, and serve for my testament and declaration in the manner in which I ought to make it, such being my last will as above written by my hand, and signed by my hand, after having read it, and again read it, [lu et relu].

“Made at Montreal, the 11th of August, 1681.

[Signed]

“CAVELIER DE LA SALLE.”

“MEMOIR OF THE SIEUR DE LA SALLE REPORTING TO MONSIEUR DE SEIGNELAY THE DISCOVERIES MADE BY HIM UNDER THE ORDER OF HIS MAJESTY.*

MONSIEUR COLBERT was of opinion, with regard to the various propositions which were made in 1678, that it was important for the glory and service of the King to discover a port for his vessels in the Gulf of Mexico.

The Sieur de la Salle offered to undertake the discovery, at his own expense, if it should please his Majesty to grant to him the Seignôry of the government of the forts which he should erect on his route, together with certain privileges as an indemnification for the great outlay which the expedition would impose on him. Such grant was made to him by letters patent of the 12th of May, 1678.

In order to execute this commission, he abandoned all his own pursuits which did not relate to it. He did not omit anything necessary for success, notwithstanding dangerous sickness, considerable losses, and other misfortunes which he suffered, which would have discouraged any other person not possessed of the same zeal with himself, and the same industry in the performance of the undertaking. He has made five voyages under extraordinary hardships, extending over more than 5,000 leagues. most commonly on foot, through snow and water, almost without rest, during five years. He has traversed more than 600 leagues of unknown country, among many barbarous and cannibal nations, [antropophages], [anthropagi, H. W. B.], against whom he was obliged to fight almost daily, although he was accompanied by only 36 men, having no other consolation before him than a hope of bringing to an end an enterprise which he believed would be agreeable to his Majesty.

* This document, though without date, as is apparent from references to it in other manuscripts, was submitted by La Salle while at Paris and prior to the 23d of March, 1684. Seignelay, son of Colbert, and followed him as minister of the marine and colonies.—H. W. B.

After having happily executed this design, he hopes Monseigneur will be pleased to continue him in the title [propriete] and government of the fort which he has had erected in the country of his discovery, where he has placed several French settlers—and has brought together many savage nations, amounting to more than 18,000 in number, who have built houses there and sown much ground—to commence a powerful colony.

This is the only fruit of an expenditure of 150,000 ecus—the only means of satisfying his creditors who advanced to him the aid which he required after very considerable losses.

He believes that he has sufficiently established the truth of his discovery by the official instrument signed by all his companions, which was placed last year in the hands of Monseigneur Colbert, by the Count de Frontenac,* as also by a report drawn up by the Reverend Father Zenoble, Missionary, who accompanied him during this voyage, and who is at this time Guardian of Bapaume; by the testimony of three persons who accompanied him, and whom he has brought with him to France, and who are now in Paris; [Note. Jean Bourdon, or the Sieur d'Autrays, Gabriel Barbier—who descended the middle mouth channel of the Mississippi—and Nicholas de la Salle. H. W. B.] and by the testimony of many other persons who came this year from Canada, and who have seen one Vital, sent by M. de la Barre to collect information respecting him, on the spot, and who has confirmed the truth of the discovery.

* See this Process Verbal, of the existence of which I was not aware when I printed this passage in the Journal of the Royal Geographical Society. The document was first printed by Mr. Jared Sparks, of Boston, and I have reprinted it with these memoirs. The above note is by Mr. Thos. Falconer in his work on the Discovery of the Mississippi.—H. W. B.

All these proofs are sufficient to contradict whatever may have been written to the contrary, by persons who have no knowledge of the country where the discovery was made—never having been there. But he hopes to remove all these prejudices, by carrying into execution the design which he entertains, under the favor of Monseigneur, of returning to the country of his discovery by the mouth of the river in the Gulf of Mexico, since he must have lost his sense, if, without being certain of the means of arriving where he proposes, he exposed not only his own fortune and that of his friends to manifest destruction, but his own honor and reputation to the unavoidable disgrace of having imposed on the confidence of his Majesty and of his ministers. Of this there is less likelihood, because he has no interest to disguise the truth, since, if Monseigneur does not think it convenient to undertake any enterprise in that direction he will not ask anything more from his Majesty until his return from the Gulf of Mexico confirms the truth of what he has alleged. With reference to the assertion, that his voyage would produce no profit to France, he replies, that if he proposed it as a thing to be done, and on that account sought for assistance to undertake the enterprise, or reward after having succeeded in it, its usefulness would deserve consideration; but being here only in order to render an account of the orders he received, he does not think himself to be responsible for anything but their execution, it not being his duty to examine the intentions of Monseigneur Colbert. Having, however, observed great advantages which both France and Canada may derive from his discovery, he believes that he owes this detail to the glory of the King, the welfare of the kingdom—to the honour of the Ministry of Monseigneur, and to the memory of him who employed him upon this expedition. He does this the more willingly, as his requests will not expose him to a suspicion of self-interest; and as the influence which he has acquired over the people of that continent places him in a position to execute what he proposes, the things which he states will find greater credit in the minds of those who shall investigate them.

Firstly, the service of God may be established there by the preaching of the Gospel to numerous docile and settled [sedentaires] nations, who will be found more willing to receive it than those of other parts of America, upon account of their greater civilization. They have already temples and a form of worship.

Secondly, we can effect there for the glory of our King very important conquests, both by land and by sea; or if peace should oblige us to delay the execution of them, we might, without giving any cause of complaint, make preparations to render us certain of success whenever it shall please the King to command it.

The provinces which may be seized are very rich in silver mines—they adjoin the River Colbert [the Mississippi]—they are far removed from succour—they are open everywhere on the side on which we should attack them, and are defended only by a small number of persons, so sunk in effeminacy and indolence as to be incapable of enduring the fatigue of wars of this description.

The Sieur de la Salle binds himself to have this enterprise ripe for success within one year after his arrival on the spot, and asks only for this purpose one vessel, some arms and munitions, the transport, maintenance, and pay of 200 men during one year. Afterwards he will maintain them from the produce of the country and supply their other wants through the credit and confidence which he has obtained among those nations, and the experience which he has had of those regions. He will give a more detailed account of this proposal when it shall please Monseigneur to direct him.

Thirdly, the river is navigable for more than a hundred leagues for ships, and for barks for more than 500 leagues to the north, and for more than 800 from east to west. Its three mouths are as many harbours, capable of receiving every description of ships; where those of his Majesty will always find a secure retreat, and all that may be necessary to refit, and re-victual—which would be a great economy to his Majesty, who would no longer find it necessary to send the things needed from France at a great expense, the country producing the greater part of them. We could even build there as many ships as we should desire, the materials for building and rigging them being in abundance, with the exception of iron, which may perhaps be discovered.

In the first place we should obtain there everything which has enriched New England and Virginia, and which constitute the foundation of their commerce and of their great wealth—timber of every kind—salted meat, tallow, corn, sugar, tobacco, honey, wax, resin, and other gums; immense pasturages, hemp, and other articles with which more than 200 vessels are every year freighted in New England to carry elsewhere.

The newly-discovered country has, besides its other advantages, that of the soil, which, being only partly covered with wood, forms a campaign of great fertility and extent, scarcely requiring any clearing. The mildness of the climate is favorable to the rearing of a large number of cattle, which cause great expense where the winter is severe. There is also a prodigious number [plus un nombre prodigieux] of buffaloes, stags, hinds, roes, bears, otters, lynxes. Hides and furs are to be had there almost for nothing [a vil prix], the savages not yet knowing the value of our commodities. There are cotton, cochineal, nuts, turnsole,—entire forests of mulberry trees—salt, slate, coal, vines, apple trees; so that it would be easy to make wine, cyder, oil of nuts, of turn sols, and of olives also, if olive trees were planted there, silk and dye-woods. It will not be necessary to import from Europe, horses, oxen, swine, fowls, or turkeys, which are to be found in different parts of the country, nor to import provisions for the colonists, who would quickly find subsistence.

Whilst other colonies are open and exposed to the descents of foreigners by as many points as their coasts are washed by the sea, whereby they are placed under a necessity of having many persons to watch these points of access, one single post, established towards the lower part of the river, will be sufficient to protect a territory extending more than 800 leagues from north to south, and still farther from east to west, because its banks are only accessible from the sea through the mouth of the river, the remainder of the coast being impenetrable inland for more than 20 leagues, in consequence of woods, bogs, reeds, and marshes [terres tremblantes], through which it is impossible to march; and this may be the reason why the exploration of that river has been neglected by the Spaniards, if they had any knowledge of it. This country is equally well defended in the interior against the irruptions of neighboring Europeans, by great chains of mountains stretching from east to west, from which branches of the river take their source.

It is true that the country is more open towards the southwest, where it borders on Mexico, where the very navigable river the Seignelay, [Note. Red River, so called for a time, in honor of Jean Baptiste Colbert, Marquis de Seignelay, son of Colbert the elder and who succeeded his father in 1683 as Minister of the French Marine and Colonies. H. W. B.] which is one of the branches of the Colbert, [the Mississippi] is only separated by a forest of three or four days' journey in depth. But besides that the Spaniards there are feeble and far removed from the assistance of Mexico, and from that which they could expect by sea, this place is protected from their insults by a great number of warlike savages, who close this passage to them, and who, constantly engaged with them in cruel wars, would certainly inflict greater evil when sustained by some French, whose more mild and more humane mode of government will prove a great means for the preservation of the peace made between them and the Sieur de la Salle.

To maintain this establishment, which is the only one required in order to obtain all the advantages mentioned, 200 men only are needed, who would also construct the fortifications and buildings, and effect the clearings necessary for the sustenance of the colony; after which there would be no further expenditure. The goodness of the country will induce the settlers [habitans] to remain there willingly. The ease in which they will live will make them attend to the cultivation of the soil, and to the production of articles of commerce, and will remove all desire to imitate the inhabitants of New France, who are obliged to seek subsistence in the woods under great fatigues, in hunting for peltries which are their principal resource. These vagrant courses, common in New France, will be easily prevented in the new country, because, as its rivers are all navigable, there will be a great facility for the savages to come to our settlements and for us to go to them in boats which can ascend all the branches of the river.

If foreigners anticipate us, they will deprive France of all the advantages to be expected from the success of the enterprise. They will complete the ruin of New France, which they already hem in through Virginia, Pennsylvania, New England, and the Hudson's Bay. They will not fail to ascend the river as high as possible, and to establish colonies in the places nearest to the savages who now bring their furs to Montreal—they will make constant inroads into the countries of the latter, which could not be repressed by ordinances of his Majesty. They have already made several attempts to discover this passage, and they will not neglect it now that the whole world knows that it is discovered, since the Dutch have published it in their newspapers upwards of a year ago. Nothing more is required than to maintain the possession taken by the Sieur de la Salle, in order to deprive them of such a desire, and to place ourselves in a position to undertake enterprises against them glorious to the arms of his Majesty, who will probably derive the greatest benefits from the duties he will levy there, as in other colonies.

Even if this affair should prove hurtful to New France, it will contribute to its security, and render our commerce in furs more considerable.

There will be nothing to fear from the Iroquois when the nations of the south, strengthened through their intercourse with the French, shall stop their conquests, and prevent their being powerful, by carrying off a great number of their women and children, which they can easily do from the inferiority of the weapons of their enemies. As respects commerce, that post* will probably increase our traffic still more than has been done by the establishment of Fort Frontenac, which was built with success for that purpose, for if the Illinois and their allies were to catch the beavers, which the Iroquois now kill in their neighborhood in order to carry to the English, the latter, not being any longer able to get them from their own colonies, would be obliged to buy them from us, to the great benefit of those who have the privilege of this traffic. These were the views which the Sieur de la Salle had in placing the settlement where it is. [Note. At and near what is now known as Starved Rock on the Illinois river a few miles below Ottawa. H. W. B.]

* Ft. St. Louis of Illinois.—H. W. B.

The colony has already felt its effects, as all our allies, who had fled after the departure of M. de Frontenac, have returned to their ancient dwellings, in consequence of the confidence caused by the fort, near which they have defeated a party of Iroquois, and have built four other forts to protect themselves from hostile incursions. The Governor, M. de la Barre, and the Intendant, M. de Meulles, have told the Sieur de la Salle that they would write to Monseigneur to inform him of the importance of that fort in order to keep the Iroquois in check, and that M. de Lagny* had proposed its establishment in 1678. Monseigneur Colbert permitted Sieur de la Salle to build it, and granted it to him as a property. In order to prove to Monseigneur the sincerity of his intentions still more, and that he had no other motive in selecting this site than the protection of the men he has left there, and whom he did not think right to place in such small number, within the reach of the Spaniards, and without cannon and munition, or to leave in so distant a country, where in case of sickness they could expect no assistance, nor to return home from thence without danger—he offers again to descend the river a hundred leagues lower down, and nearer the sea, and to establish there another fort, demolishing the first, in the expectation, however, that Monseigneur would consider the expenses incurred in its establishment.

It may be said, firstly, that this colony might injure the commerce of Quebec, and cause the desertion of its inhabitants; but the answer is, that by descending lower down, no beavers will be found. Thus the first difficulty will be removed, which again would not have any foundation, even if Fort St. Louis were to remain. The Illinois will only kill the beaver, which, after their departure, would fall to the share of the Iroquois only, as no other nation dares to approach those districts. There is also no likelihood that deserters would choose a long and difficult route, at the end of which they would be still subject to be apprehended and punished, whilst they have another much shorter and easier one to New England, where they are quite secure, and which many take every year.

* Intendant-General of Commerce and Foreign Affairs of France.—H. W. B.

A second objection would be, that the goodness of the country would attract so many people as to diminish the population of France, as it is said Mexico and Peru have depopulated Spain; but, besides that, France is more peopled than Spain has ever been, and that the expulsion of 1,800,000 Moors, added to the great wars she has had to sustain, is the real cause of its diminished population. It is certain that the number of the few Spaniards in those kingdoms, who are not above 40,000, is not a number of emigrants sufficient to make any perceptible change in France, which already counts more than 100,000 settlers in foreign countries. It would be even desirable that instead of peopling other foreign kingdoms, the riches of the country newly discovered should attract them to it. Moreover, this objection has already been answered, when it was said that the country can be defended by one or two forts, for the protection of which only from 400 to 500 men are required, a number comprising only one-half of the crew of a large vessel.

Whatever has been imagined respecting the mud and breakers which are supposed to stop the mouth of the river, is easily disproved by the experience of those who have been there, and who found the entrances fine, deep, and capable of admitting the largest vessels. It would appear that the land or levees de terre are covered in many parts with wood growing along the channel of the river very far into the sea; and where the sea is deep they would not be suspected, because even the creeks of the sea are tolerably deep at that distance, and besides, there is every appearance that the current of the river has formed these kind of dikes, by showing on both sides the mud with which the winds fill the neighboring creeks, because those causeways are to the right and left of the river, forming for it a bed, as it were, by their separation. Nor can it be believed that these levees will ever change their position, since they consist of a hard soil, covered with pretty large trees following regularly the banks of the river, which form the bed of it for more than six leagues into the sea.

In the memoir respecting New Biscay, the difficulty has been dealt with respecting the inconstancy of the savages. They know too well how important it is to them to live on good terms with us, to fail in their fidelity, in which they have never been known to fail in New France. Such an event is still less to be apprehended from those who are obedient and submissive to their caziques, whose good-will it is sufficient to gain, in order to keep the rest in obedience.

LETTERS PATENT.

GRANTED BY THE KING OF FRANCE TO THE SIEUR DE LA SALLE, ON THE 12TH OF MAY, 1678.

TRANSLATION.

L OUIS, by the grace of God, King of France and of Navarre. To our dear and well-loved Robert Cavelier, Sieur de la Salle, greeting:

We have received with favor the very humble petition, which has been presented to us in your name, to permit you to endeavor to discover the western part of New France; and we have consented to this proposal the more willingly, because there is nothing we have more at heart than the discovery of this country, through which it is probable a road may be found to penetrate to Mexico [dans laquel il y a apparence que l'on trouvera un chemin pour penetrer jusqu'au Mexique]; and because your diligence in clearing the lands which we granted to you by the decree of our council of the 13th of May, 1675, and, by Letters Patent of the same date, to form habitations upon the said lands, and to put Fort Frontenac in a good state of defence, the seigniorship and government whereof we likewise granted to you, affords us every reason to hope that you will succeed to our satisfaction, and to the advantage of our subjects of the said country.

For these reasons, and others thereunto moving us, we have permitted, and do hereby permit you, by these presents, signed by our hand, to endeavor to discover the western part of New France, and, for the execution of this enterprise, to construct forts wherever you shall deem it necessary; which it is our will that you shall hold on the same terms and conditions as Fort Frontenac, agreeably and conformably to our said Letters Patent of the 13th of March, 1675, which we have confirmed, as far as is needful, and hereby confirm by these presents. And it is our pleasure that they be executed according to their form and tenor.

To accomplish this, and everything above mentioned, we give you full powers; on condition, however, that you shall finish this enterprise within five years, in default of which these presents shall be void and of none effect; that you carry on no trade whatever with the savages called Outaouacs, and others who bring their beaver skins and other peltries to Montreal; and that the whole shall be done at your expense, and that of your company, to which we have granted the privilege of the trade in buffalo skins. And we command the Sieur de Frontenac, our Governor and Lieutenant-General, and the Sieur Duchense, Intendant, and the other officers who compose the supreme council of the said country, to affix their signatures to these presents; for such is our pleasure. Given at St. Germain en Laye, this 12th day of May, 1678, and of our reign the thirty-fifth.

[Signed]

LOUIS.

And lower down, By the King, COLBERT.

And sealed with the great seal with yellow wax.

The act of the Governor, attached to these presents, is dated the 5th of November, 1678.*

* I have a MS. copy of the original in French, and have corrected the translation which was published by Mr. Sparks. This note is by Falconer in his work on the Discovery of the Mississippi, published in 1844.—H. W. B.

1678-1691—HENRY DE TONTY'S MEMOIR OF 1693.

HIS EARLY MILITARY LIFE—JOINS LA SALLE—IS HIS CONFIDENT, TRUSTED AID AND A NARRATOR OF HIS PROJECTS IN NEW FRANCE.

“MEMOIR SENT IN 1693, ON THE DISCOVERY OF THE MISSISSIPPI AND THE NEIGHBORING NATIONS BY M. DE LA SALLE, FROM THE YEAR 1678 TO THE TIME OF HIS DEATH, AND BY THE SIEUR DE TONTY TO THE YEAR 1691.”*

MEMOIR, ETC.

AFTER having been eight years in the French service, by land and by sea, and having had a hand shot off in Sicily by a grenade, I resolved to return to France to solicit employment. At that time the late M. Cavelier de la Salle came to Court, a man of great intelligence and merit who sought to obtain leave to discover the Gulf of Mexico by crossing the southern countries of North America. Having obtained of the King the permission he desired through the favor of the late M. Colbert and M. de Seignelai, the late Monseigneur the Prince Conty, who was acquainted with him and who honoured me with his favor, directed me to him to be allowed to accompany him in his long journeys, which he very willingly assented to.

We sailed from Rochelle on the 14th of July, 1678, and arrived at Quebec on the 15th of September following. We recruited there for some days, and after having taken leave of M. de Frontenac, ascended the St. Lawrence as far as Fort Frontenac [Kingston], 120 leagues from Quebec on the banks of the Lake Frontenac [Lake Ontario], which is about 300 leagues round. After staying there four days, we embarked in a boat [named “The Little Brigantine”] of 40 to cross the lake, and on Christmas day we were opposite a village called Isonnoutouan to which M. de la Salle sent some canoes to procure Indian corn for our subsistence. From thence we sailed towards Niagara, intending to look for a place above the Falls where a boat might be built. The winds were so contrary that we could not approach it nearer than nine leagues, which obliged us to go by land. We found there some cabins of the Iroquois, who received us well. We slept there, and the next day we went three leagues further up to look for a good place to build a boat, and there encamped.

* This document was addressed to Count de Pontchertrain, Minister of the Marine and Colonies, and Abbe Renaudot, a particular friend of M. de la Salle, in 1693. A translation of it appears in Falconer.—H. W. B.

The boat we came in was lost through the obstinacy of the pilot, whom M. de la Salle had ordered to bring it ashore. The crew and the things in it were saved. M. de la Salle determined to return to Fort Frontenac over the ice, and I remained in command at Niagara with a Father Recollet and 30 men. The boat was completed in the spring. M. de la Salle joined us with two other boats up the rapids, which I was not able to ascend on account of the weakness of my crew. He directed me to proceed and wait for him at the extremity of Lake Erie, at a place called Detroit, 120 leagues from Niagara, to join some Frenchmen whom he had sent off the last autumn. I embarked in a canoe of bark, and when we were near Detroit the boat [built above Niagara and named the "Griffin"] came up. We got into it, and continued our voyage as far as Michilimakinac, where we arrived at the end of August, having crossed two lakes larger than that of Frontenac [Ontario].

We remained there some days to rest ourselves, and as M. de la Salle intended to go to the Illinois, he sent me to the Falls of St. Mary, which is situated where lake Superior discharges itself into Lake Huron, to look for some men who had deserted, and he in the meantime sailed for the Lake Illinois. Having arrived at Poutouatamis, an Illinois village, the calumet was sung, during which ceremony presents are given and received. There is a post placed in the midst of the assembly, where those who wish to make known their great deeds in war, striking the post, declaim on the deeds they have done. This ceremony takes place in presence of those with whom they wish to make friendship, the calumet being the symbol of peace. M. de la Salle sent his boat back to Niagara to fetch the things he wanted, and, embarking in a canoe, continued his voyage to the Miamis River, and there commenced building a house.

In the meantime I came up with the deserters, and brought them back to within 30 leagues of the Miamis River, where I was obliged to leave my men, in order to hunt, our provisions failing us. I then went on to join M. de la Salle. When I arrived he told me he wished that all the men had come with me in order that he might proceed to the Illinois. I therefore retraced my way to find them, but the violence of the wind forced me to land, and our canoe was upset by the violence of the waves. It was, however, saved, but everything that was in it was lost, and for want of provisions we lived for three days on acorns. I sent word of what had happened to M. de la Salle and he directed me to join him. I went back in my little canoe, and as soon as I arrived we ascended 25 leagues, as far as the portage, where the men whom I had left behind joined us. We made the portage which extends about two leagues and came to the source of the Illinois River. We embarked there and descending the river for 100 leagues arrived at a village of the savages. They were absent hunting and as we had no provisions we opened some caches of Indian corn.

During this journey some of our Frenchmen were so fatigued that they determined to leave us, but the night they intended to go was so cold that their plan was broken up. We continued our route, in order to join the savages and found them 30 leagues above [below] the village. When they saw us they thought we were Iroquois, and put themselves on the defensive and made their women run into the woods; but when they recognized us the women were called back with their children and the calumet was danced to M. de la Salle and me, in order to mark their desire to live in peace with us. We gave them some merchandise for the corn which he had taken in their village. This was on the 3d of January, 1679 [1680].

As it was necessary to fortify ourselves during the winter we made a fort which was called Crevecoeur. Part of our people deserted and they had even put poison into our kettle. M. de la Salle was poisoned, but he was saved by some antidote a friend had given to him in France. The desertion of these men gave us less annoyance than the effect which it had on the minds of the savages. The enemies of M. de la Salle had spread a report among the Illinois that we were friends of the Iroquois, who are their greatest enemies. The effect this produced will be seen hereafter.

M. de la Salle commenced building a boat to descend the river. He sent a Father Recollect with the Sieur Deau [Michel Accan] to discover the nation of the Sioux, 400 leagues from the Illinois on the Mississippi river southwards [of Peoria Lake], a river that runs not less than 800 leagues to the sea without rapids. He determined to go himself by land to Fort Frontenac because he had heard nothing of the boat which he had sent to Niagara. He gave me the command of this place and left us on the 22d of March with five men. On his road he met with two men, whom he had sent in the autumn to Michilimakinac to obtain news of his boat. They assured him that it had not come down, and he therefore determined to continue his journey. The two men were sent to me with orders to go to the old village to visit a high rock [Starved rock on the Illinois River. H. W. B.] and to build a strong fort upon it.

Whilst I was proceeding thither all my men deserted and took away everything that was most valuable. They left me with two Recollects and three men, newly arrived from France, stripped of everything and at the mercy of the savages. All that I could do was to send an authentic account of the affair to M. de la Salle. He laid wait for them on Lake Frontenac, took some of them and killed others, after which he returned to the Illinois. As for his boat, it was never heard of.

During the time this happened, the Illinois were greatly alarmed at seeing a party of 600 Iroquois. It was then near the month of September. The desertion of our men and the journey of M. de la Salle to Fort Frontenac made the [Illinois] savages suspect that we intended to betray them. They severely reproached me on the arrival of their enemies. As I was so recently come from France and was not then acquainted with their manners, I was embarrassed at this event and determined to go to the enemy with necklaces and to tell them that I was surprised they should come to make war with a nation dependent on the government of New France, and which M. de la Salle, whom they esteemed, governed. An Illinois accompanied me, and we separated ourselves from the body of the Illinois, who, to the number of 400 only, were fighting with the enemy. When I was within gun-shot the Iroquois shot at us, seized me, took the necklace from my hand, and one of them plunged a knife into my breast, wounding a rib near the heart. However, having recognized me, they carried me into the midst of the camp and asked me what I came for. I gave them to understand that the Illinois were under the protection of the King of France and of the Governor of the country and that I was surprised that they wished to break with the French, and not to continue at peace. All this time skirmishing was going on on both sides, and a warrior came to give notice that their left wing was giving way, and that they had recognized some Frenchmen among the Illinois, who shot at them. On this they were greatly irritated against me and held a council on what they should do with me. There was a man behind me with a knife in his hand, who every now and then lifted up my hair. They were divided in opinion.

Tegantouki, chief of the Isontoutouan, desired to have me burnt. Agoasto, chief of the Onnoutagues, wished to have me set at liberty, as a friend of M. de la Salle, and he carried his point. They agreed that, in order to deceive the Illinois, they should give me a necklace of porcelain beads to prove that they also were children of the Governor, and ought to unite and make a good peace. They sent me to deliver this message to the Illinois. I had much difficulty in reaching them on account of the blood I had lost, both from my wound and from my mouth. On my way I met the Fathers Gabriel de la Ribourde and Zenoble Membre, who were coming to look after me. They expressed great joy that these barbarians had not put me to death. We went together to the Illinois, to whom I reported the sentiments of the Iroquois, adding, however, that they must not altogether trust them. They retired within their village, but seeing the Iroquois present themselves every day in battle array they went to rejoin their wives and children, three leagues off. When they went I was left with the two Recollets and three Frenchmen. The Iroquois made a fort in their village and left us in a cabin at some distance from their fort.

Two days later, the Illinois appearing on the neighboring hills, the Iroquois thought that we had some in their fort. They pressed me to return to the Illinois and induce them to make a treaty of peace. They gave me one of their own nation as a hostage, and I went with Father Zenoble. The Iroquois remained with the Illinois, and one of the latter came with me. When we got to the fort, instead of mending matters, he spoilt them entirely by owning that they had in all only 400 men and that the rest of their young men were gone to war, and that if the Iroquois really wished for peace they were ready to give them the beaver skins and some slaves which they had. The Iroquois called me to them and loaded me with reproaches; they told me that I was a liar to have said that the Illinois had 1,200 warriors, besides the allies who had given them assistance. Where were the 60 Frenchmen whom I had told them had been left at the village? I had much difficulty in getting out of the scrape.

The same evening they sent back the Illinois to tell his nation to come the next day to within half a league of the fort and that they would there conclude the peace, which in fact they did, at noon. The Iroquois gave them presents of necklaces and merchandise. The first necklace signified that the Governor of New France was angry at their having come to molest their brothers; the second was addressed to M. de la Salle with the same meaning, and the third, accompanied with merchandise, bound them as by oath to a strict alliance that hereafter they should live as brothers. They then separated and the Illinois believed, after these presents, in the sincerity of the peace, which induced them to come several times into the fort of Iroquois, where some Illinois chiefs having asked me what I thought, I told them they had everthing to fear, that their enemies had no good faith, that I knew that they were making canoes of elm bark and that consequently it was intended to pursue them, and that they should take advantage of any delay to retire to some distant nation for that they would most assuredly be betrayed.

The eighth day after their arrival, on the 10th of September [18th of September] the Iroquois called me and the Father Zenoble to council, and having made me sit down, they placed six packets of beaver skins before us and addressing me they said that the two first packets were to inform M. de Frontenac that they would not eat his children and that he should not be angry at what they had done; the third, a plaster for my wound; the fourth, some oil to rub on my own and Father Zenoble's limbs, on account of the long journey we had taken; the fifth, that the sun was bright; the sixth, that we should profit by it and depart the next day for the French settlements. I asked them when they would go away themselves. Murmurs arose, and some of them said that they would eat some of the Illinois before they went away; upon which I kicked away their presents, saying that I would have none of them, since they desired to eat the children of the Governor. An Abenakis who was with them, who spoke French, told me that I irritated them, and the chiefs rising drove me from the council.

We went to our cabin, where we passed the night on our guard, resolved to kill some of them before they should kill us, for we thought that we should not live out the night. However, at daybreak they directed us to depart, which we did. After five hours' sailing we landed to dry our peltries, which were wet, while we repaired our canoe. The Father Gabriel told me he was going aside to pray. I advised him not to go away, because we were surrounded by enemies. He went about 1,000 paces off and was taken by 40 savages, of a nation called Kikapous, who carried him away and broke his head. Finding that he did not return, I went to look for him with one of the men. Having discovered his trail, I found it cut by several others, which joined and ended at last in one. I brought back this sad news to the Father Zenoble, who was greatly grieved at it. Towards evening we made a great fire, hoping that perhaps he might return; and we went over to the other side of the river where we kept a good look out. Towards midnight we saw a man at a distance and then many others.

The next day we crossed over the river to look for our crew and after waiting till noon we embarked and reached the Lake Illinois by short journeys, always hoping to meet with the good father. After having sailed on the lake as far as La Touissant we were wrecked, 20 leagues from the village of Poutouatamis. Our provisions failing us, I left a man to take care of our things and went off by land, but as I had a fever constantly on me, and my legs were swollen, we did not arrive at this village till St. Martin's day [November 11]. During this journey we lived on wild garlick, which we were obliged to grub up from under the snow. When we arrived we found no savages; they were gone to their winter quarters. We were obliged to go to the places they had left, where we obtained hardly as much as two handfuls of Indian corn a day and some frozen gourds, which we piled up in a cabin at the water's side.

Whilst we were gleaning, a Frenchman whom we had left at the cache came to the cabin where we had left our little store of provisions. He thought we had put them there for him, and therefore did not spare them. We were very much surprised, as we were going off to Michilimakinac, to find him in the cabin where he had arrived three days before. We had much pleasure in seeing him again, but little to see our provisions partly consumed. We did not delay to embark, and after two hours' sail, the wind in the offing obliged us to land, when I saw a fresh trail and directed that it should be followed. It led to the Poutouatamis village, who had made a portage to the bay of the Puans. The next day, weak as we were, we carried our canoe and all our things into this bay, to which there was a league of portage. We embarked in Sturgeon Creek, and turned to the right at hazard, not knowing where to go. After sailing for a league we found a number of cabins, which led us to expect soon to find the savages.

Five leagues from this place we were stopped by the wind for eight days, which compelled us to consume the few provisions we had collected together, and at last we were without anything. We held council, and despairing of being able to come up with the savages, every one asked to return to the village, where at least there was wood, so that we might die warm. The wind lulling, we set off, and on entering Sturgeon's Creek we saw a fire made by savages who had just gone away. We thought they were gone to their village and determined to go there, but the creek having frozen in the night, we could not proceed in our canoe. We made shoes of the late Father Gabriel's cloak, having no leather. We were to have started in the morning, but one of my men being very ill from having eaten some parre-fleche [rock moss], in the evening, delayed us. As I was urging our starting, two Ottawas savages, came up, who led us to where the Poutouatamis were. We found some Frenchmen with them, who kindly received us. I spent the winter with them, and the Father Zenoble left us to pass the winter with the Jesuits at the end of the bay.

I left this place in the spring for Michilimakinac, hardly recovered from the effects of which we had suffered from hunger and cold during 34 days. We arrived at Michilimakinac about the fete Dieu in October. M. de la Salle arrived with M. Forest some days afterwards, on his way to seek us at the Illinois. He was very glad to see us again, and notwithstanding the many past reverses, made new preparations to continue the discovery which he had undertaken. I therefore embarked with him for Fort Frontenac, to fetch things that we should want for the expedition. The Father Zenoble accompanied us. When we came to Lake Frontenac, M.

de la Salle went forward, and I waited for his boat at the village of Tezagon. When it arrived there I embarked for Illinois. At the Miamis River I assembled some Frenchmen and savages for the voyage of discovery, and M. de la Salle joined us in October.

We went in canoes to the River Chicagou, where there is a portage which joins that of the Illinois. The rivers being frozen we made sledges and dragged our baggage 30 leagues below the village of Illinois, where, finding the navigation open, we arrived at the end of January at the great River Mississippi. The distance from Chicagou was estimated at 140 leagues. We descended the river and found, six leagues below, on the right, a great river, which comes from the west, on which there are numerous nations. We slept at its mouth. The next day we went on to the village of Tamarous, six leagues off on the left. There was no one there, all the people being at their winter quarters in the woods. We made marks to inform the savages that we had passed, and continued our route as far as the River Ouabache, which is 80 leagues from that of the Illinois. It comes from the east and is more than 500 leagues in length. It is by this river that the Iroquois advance to make war against the nations of the south. Continuing our voyage about 60 leagues, we came to a place which was named Fort Prudhomme, because one of our men lost himself there when out hunting and was nine days without food. As they were looking for him they fell in with two Chikasas savages, whose village was three days' journey inland. They have 2,000 warriors, the greatest number of whom have flat heads, which is considered a beauty among them, the women taking pains to flatten the heads of their children, by means of a cushion which they put on the forehead and bind with a band, which they also fasten to the cradle, and thus make their heads take this form. When they grow up their faces are as big as a large soup plate. All the nations on the sea-coast have the same custom.

M. de la Salle sent back one of them with presents to his village, so that, if they had taken Prudhomme they might send him back, but we found him on the tenth day, and as the Chikasas did not return, we continued our route as far as the village of Cappa, 50 leagues off. We arrived there in foggy weather, and as we heard the sound of the tambour we crossed over to the other side of the river, where in less than half an hour we made a fort. The savages having been informed that we were coming down the river, came in their canoes to look for us. We made them land, and sent two Frenchmen as hostages to their village, the chief visited us with the calumet, and we went to the savages. They regaled us with the best they had, and after having danced the calumet to M. de la Salle, they conducted us to their village of Toyengan, eight leagues from Cappa. They received us there in the same manner, and from thence they went with us to Toriman, two leagues further on, where we met with the same reception.

It must be here remarked that these villages, the first of which is Osotony, are six leagues to the right descending the river, and are commonly called Akan-cas [Arkansas]. The three first villages are situated on the great river [Mississippi]. M. de la Salle erected the arms of the king there; they have cabins made with the bark of cedar; they have no other worship than the adoration of all sorts of animals. Their country is very beautiful, having abundance of peach, plum and apple trees, and vines flourish there; buffaloes, deer, stags, bears, turkeys, are very numerous. They have even domestic fowls. They have very little snow during the winter, and the ice is not thicker than a dollar. They gave us guides to conduct us to their allies, the Taencas, six leagues distant.

The first day we began to see and to kill alligators, which are numerous, and from 15 to 20 feet long. When we arrived opposite to the village of the Taencas, M. de la Salle desired me to go to it and inform the chief of his arrival. I went with our guides, and we had to carry a bark canoe for ten arpens, and to launch it on a small lake in which their village was placed. I was surprised to find cabins made of mud and covered with cane mats. The cabin of the chief was 40 feet square, the wall 10 feet high, a foot thick, and the roof, which was of a dome shape, about 15 feet high. I was not less surprised when, on entering, I saw the chief seated on a camp bed, with three of his wives at his side, surrounded by more than 60 old men, clothed in large white cloaks, which are made by the women out of the bark of the mulberry tree, and are tolerably well worked. The women were clothed in the same manner, and every time the chief spoke to them, before answering him, they howled and cried out several times—"O-o-o-o-o!" to show their respect for him, for their chiefs are held in as much consideration as our kings.

No one drinks out of the chief's cup, nor eats out of his plate, and no one passes before him; when he walks they clean the path before him. When he dies they sacrifice his youngest wife, his house-steward [maitre d'hotel], and a hundred men, to accompany him into the other world. They have a form of worship, and adore the sun. There is a temple opposite the house of the chief, and similar to it, except that three eagles are placed on this temple who look towards the rising sun. The temple is surrounded with strong mud walls, in which are fixed spikes on which they place the heads of their enemies whom they sacrifice to the sun. At the door of the temple is a block of wood, on which is a great shell [vignot], and plaited round with the hair of their enemies in a plait as thick as an arm and about 20 fathoms [toises] long. The inside of the temple is naked; there is an altar in the middle, and at the foot of the altar three logs of wood are placed on end, and a fire is kept up day and night by two old priests [jongleurs], who are the directors [maîtres] of their worship. These old men showed me a small cabinet within the wall, made of mats of cane. Desiring to see what was inside, the old men prevented me, giving me to understand that their God was there. But I have since learnt that it is the place where they keep their treasure, such as fine pearls which they fish up in the neighborhood, and European merchandise.

At the last quarter of the moon all the cabins make an offering of a dish of the best food they have, which is placed at the door of the temple. The old men take care to carry it away and to make a good feast of it with their families. Every spring they make a clearing, which they name "the field of the spirit," when all the men work to the sound of the tambour. In the autumn the Indian corn is harvested with much ceremony and stored in magazines until the moon of June in the following year, when all the village assemble, and invite their neighbors to eat it. They do not leave the ground until they have eaten it all, making great rejoicings the whole time. This is all I learnt of this nation. The three villages below have the same customs.

Let us return to the chief. When I was in his cabin he told me with a smiling countenance the pleasure he felt at the arrival of the French. I saw that one of his wives wore a pearl necklace. I presented her with ten yards of blue grass beads in exchange for it. She made some difficulty, but the chief having told her to let me have it, she did so. I carried it to M. de la Salle, giving him an account of all that I had seen and told him that the chief intended to visit him the next day—which he did. He would not have done this for savages but the hope of obtaining some merchandise induced him to act thus. He came the next day with wooden canoes to the sound of the tambour and the music of the women. The savages of the river use no other boats than these. M. de la Salle received him with much politeness, and gave him some presents; they gave us, in return, plenty of provisions and some of their robes. The chiefs returned well satisfied. We stayed during the day, which was the 22nd of March. An observation gave 31 degrees of latitude.

We left on the 22nd, and slept in an island ten leagues off. The next day we saw a canoe, and M. de la Salle ordered me to chase it, which I did, and as I was just on the point of taking it, more than 100 men appeared on the banks of the river to defend their people. M. de la Salle shouted out to me to come back, which I did. We went on and encamped opposite them. Afterwards, M. de la Salle expressing a wish to meet them peacefully, I offered to carry to them the calumet, and embarking, went to them. At first they joined their hands, as a sign that they wished to be friends; I, who had but one hand, told our men to do the same thing.

I made the chief men among them cross over to M. de la Salle, who accompanied them to their village, three leagues inland, and passed the night there with some of his men. The next day he returned with the chief of the village where he had slept, who was a brother of the great chief of the Natches; he conducted us to his brother's village, situated on the hill side near the river, at six leagues distance. We were very well received there. This nation counts more than 300 warriors. Here the men cultivate the ground, hunt and fish, as well as the Taencas, and their manners are the same. We departed thence on Good Friday, and after a voyage of 20 leagues, encamped at the mouth of a large river, which runs from the west. We continued our journey, and crossed a great canal, which went towards the sea on the right.

Thirty leagues further on we saw some fishermen on the bank of the river, and sent to reconnoitre them. It was the village of the Quinipissas, who let fly their arrows upon our men, who retired in consequence. As M. de la Salle would not fight against any nation, he made us embark. Twelve leagues from this village, on the left, is that of the Tangibaos. Scarcely eight days before, this village had been totally destroyed. Dead bodies were lying one on another and the cabins were burnt. We proceeded on our course, and after sailing forty leagues, arrived at the sea on the 7th of April.

M. de la Salle sent canoes to inspect the channels, some of them went to the channel on the right hand, some to the left, and M. de la Salle chose the centre. In the evening each made his report, that is to say, that the channels were very fine, wide, and deep. We encamped on the right bank, we erected the arms of the King, and returned several times to inspect the channels. The same report was made. This river is 800 leagues long, without rapids, 400 from the country of the Scioux, and 400 from the mouth of the Illinois river to the sea. The banks are almost uninhabitable, on account of the spring floods. The woods are all those of a boggy district, the country one of canes and briars and of trees torn up by the roots; but a league or two from the river, the most beautiful country in the world, prairies, woods of mulberry trees, vines and fruits that we were not acquainted with. The savages gather the Indian corn twice in the year. In the lower part of the river, which might be settled, the river makes a bend N. and S., and in many places every now and then is joined by streams on the right and left.

The river is only navigable [for large vessels?] as far as the village of the Natches, for above that place the river winds too much; but this does not prevent the navigation of the river from the confluence of the Ouabache and the Mississippi as far as the sea. There are but few beavers, but to make amends, there is a large number of buffaloes, bears, large wolves—stags and hinds in abundance—and some lead mines, which yield two-thirds of ore to one of refuse. As these savages are stationary [sedentaires], and have some habits of subordination, they might be obliged to make silk in order to procure necessities for themselves; bringing to them from France the eggs of silkworms, for the forests are full of mulberry trees. This would be a valuable trade.

TONTY'S MEMOIR—CONTINUED.

As for the country of Illinois, the river runs 100 leagues from the Fort St. Louis, to where it falls into the Mississippi. Thus it may be said to contain some of the finest lands ever seen. The climate is the same as that of Paris, though in the 40th degree of latitude. The savages there are active and brave, but extremely lazy, except in war, when they think nothing of seeking their enemies at a distance of 500 or 600 leagues from their own country. This constantly occurs in the country of the Iroquois, whom, at my instigation, they continually harass. Not a year passes in which they do not take a number of prisoners and scalps. A few pieces of pure copper, whose origin we have not sought, are found in the river of the Illinois country. Polygamy prevails in this nation, and is one of the great hindrances to the introduction of Christianity, as well as the fact of their having no form of worship of their own. The nations lower down would be more easily converted, because they adore the sun, which is their divinity. This is all that I am able to relate of those parts.

Let us return to the sea coast, where, provisions failing, we were obliged to leave it sooner than we wished, in order to obtain provisions in the neighboring villages. We did not know how to get anything from the village of the Quinipissas, who had so ill received us as we went down the river. We lived on potatoes until six leagues from their village, when we saw smoke. M. de la Salle went to reconnoitre at night. Our people reported that they had seen some women. We went on at daybreak and taking four of the women, encamped on the opposite bank. One of the women was sent with merchandise to prove that we had no evil design and wished for their alliance and for provisions. She made her report. Some of them came immediately and invited us to encamp on the other bank, which we did. We sent back the three other women, keeping, however, constant guard. They brought us some provisions in the evening, and the next morning, at daybreak, the scoundrels attacked us.

We vigorously repulsed them, and by 10 o'clock burnt their canoes, and, but for the fear of our ammunition failing, we should have attacked their village. We left in the evening in order to reach Natches where we had left a quantity of grain on passing down. When we arrived there the chief came out to meet us. M. de la Salle made them a present of the scalps we had taken from the Quinipissas. They had already heard the news, for they had resolved to betray and kill us. We went up to their village and as we saw no women there, we had no doubt of their having some evil design. In a moment we were surrounded by 1,500 men. They brought us something to eat, and we ate with our guns in our hands. As they were afraid of firearms, they did not dare to attack us. The chief begged M. de la Salle to go away, as his young men had not much sense, which we very willingly did—the game not being equal, we having only 50 men, French and savages. We then went on to the Taencas, and then to the Arkansas, where we were well received.

From thence we came to Fort Prudhomme, where M. de la Salle fell dangerously ill which obliged him to send me forward, on the 6th of May, to arrange his affairs at Missilimakinac. In passing near the Ouabache, I found four Iroquois, who told us that there were 100 men of their nation coming on after them. This gave us some alarm. There is no pleasure in meeting warriors on one's road, especially when they have been unsuccessful. I left them and at about 20 leagues from Tamaraas we saw smoke. I ordered our people to prepare their arms, and we resolved to advance, expecting to meet the Iroquois. When we were near the smoke, we saw some canoes, which made us think that they could only be Illinois or Tamaraas. They were in fact the latter. As soon as they saw us, they came out of the wood in great numbers to attack us, taking us for Iroquois.

I presented the calumet to them—they put down their arms and conducted us to their village without doing us any harm. The chiefs held a council, and, taking us for Iroquois, resolved to burn us; and, but for some Illinois among us, we should have fared ill. They let us proceed. We arrived about the end of June, 1683 [1682], at the River Chicaou, and, by the middle of July, at Michilimakinac. M. de la Salle, having recovered, joined us in September. Resolving to go to France, he ordered me to collect together the French who were on the River Miamis to construct the Fort of St. Louis in the Illinois. I left with this design, and when I arrived at the place, M. de la Salle, having changed his mind, joined me. They set to work at the fort, and it was finished in March, 1683.

During the winter I gave all the nations notice of what we had done to defend them from the Iroquois, through whom they had lost 700 people in previous years. They approved of our good intentions, and established themselves, to the number of 300 cabins, near the Fort Illinois, as well Miamis as Chawanons.

M. de la Salle departed for France in the month of September, leaving me to command the fort. He met on his way the Chevalier de Bogis, whom M. de la Barre had sent with letters, ordering M. de la Salle to Quebec, who had no trouble in making the journey, as he was met with on the road. M. de la Salle wrote to me to receive M. de Bogis well, which I did. The winter passed, and on the 20th of March, 1684, being informed that the Iroquois were about to attack us, we prepared to receive them, and dispatched a canoe to M. de la Durantaye, Governor of Missilimakinac, for assistance, in case the enemy should hold out against us a long time. The savages appeared on the 21st, and we repulsed them with loss. After six days' siege they retired with some slaves which they had made in the neighborhood, who afterwards escaped and came back to the fort.

M. de la Durantaye, with Father Daloy, a Jesuit, arrived at the Fort with about 60 Frenchmen, whom they brought to our assistance, and to inform me of the orders of M. de la Barre, to leave the place. They stated that M. de Bogis was in possession of a place belonging to M. de la Foret, who had accompanied M. de la Salle to France, and had returned by order of M. de la Salle with a lettre de cachet. M. de la Barre was directed to deliver up to M. de la Foret the lands belonging to the Sieur de la Salle, and which were occupied by others to his prejudice. He brought me news that M. de la Salle was sailing by way of the islands to find the mouth of the Mississippi, and had at court obtained a company for me.

He sent me orders to command at Fort St. Louis, as Captain of Foot, and Governor [and "Governor in the Province of Illinois" as he elsewhere says]. We took measures together, and formed a company of 20 men to maintain the fort. M. de la Foret went away in the autumn, for Fort Frontenac, and I began my journey to Illinois. Being stopped by the ice, I was obliged to halt at Montreal, where I passed the winter. When M. de la Foret arrived there in the spring, we took new measures—he returned to Frontenac, and I went on to the Illinois, where I arrived in June [1685]. M. le Chevalier de Bogis retired from his command according to the orders that I brought him from M. de la Barre.

The Miamis having seriously defeated the Illinois, it cost us 1,000 dollars to reconcile these two nations, which I did not accomplish without great trouble. In the autumn I embarked for Missilimakinac, in order to obtain news of M. de la Salle. I heard there that Monseigneur de Denonville had succeeded M. de la Barre; and by a letter which he did me the honor to write to me, he expressed his wish to see me, that we might take measures for a war against the Iroquois, and informed me that M. de la Salle was engaged in seeking the mouth of the Mississippi in the Gulf of Mexico. Upon hearing this I resolved to go in search of him with a number of Canadians, and as soon as I should have found him, to return back to execute the orders of M. de Denonville.

I embarked, therefore, for the Illinois, on St. Andrew's Day [30th of October, 1685]; but being stopped by the ice, I was obliged to leave my canoe and to proceed on by land. After going 120 leagues I arrived at the Fort of Chicaou, where M. de la Durantaye commanded; and from thence I came to Fort St. Louis, where I arrived in the middle of January, 1685 [1686]. I departed thence on the 16th of February, with 30 Frenchmen and five Illinois and Chawanons [Shawnees] for the sea, which I reached in Holy Week.

After having passed the above-named nations, I was very well received. I sent out two canoes, one towards the coast of Mexico, and the other towards Carolina, to see if they could discover anything. They each sailed about 30 leagues, but proceeded no farther for want of fresh water. They reported that where they had been the land began to rise. They brought me a porpoise and some oysters. As it would take us five months to reach the French settlements, I proposed to my men, that if they would trust to me to follow the coast as far as Manatte, that by this means we should arrive shortly at Montreal, that we should not lose our time, because we might discover some fine country and might even take some booty on our way. Part of my men were willing to adopt my plan; but as the rest were opposed to it, I decided to return the way I came.

The tide does not rise more than two feet perpendicularly on the sea coast, and on the land is very low at the entrance of the river. We encamped in the place where M. de la Salle had erected the arms of the King. As they had been thrown down by the floods, I took them five leagues farther up, and placed them in a higher situation. I put a silver ecu in the hollow of a tree to serve as a mark of time and place. We left this place on Easter Monday. When we came opposite the Quinipissus Village, the chiefs brought me the calumet and declared the sorrow they felt at the treachery they had perpetrated against me on our first voyage. I made an alliance with them.

Forty leagues higher up, on the right, we discovered a village inland, with the inhabitants of which we also made an alliance. These are the Oumas, the bravest savages of the river. When we were at Arkansas, ten of the Frenchmen who accompanied me asked for a settlement on the River Arkansas on a seignory that M. de la Salle had given me on our first voyage. I granted the request to some of them. They remained there to build a house surrounded with stakes. The rest accompanied me to Illinois, in order to get what they wanted. I arrived there on St. John's Day [24th of June]. I made two chiefs of the Illinois embark with me in my canoe, to go and receive the orders of M. de Denonville, and we arrived at Montreal by the end of July.

I left that place at the beginning of October to return to the Illinois. I came there on the 10th of October, and I directly sent some Frenchmen to our savage allies to declare war against the Iroquois, inviting them to assemble at the Fort of Bonhomme, which they did in the month of April, 1686 [1687]. The Sieur de la Foret was already gone in a canoe with 30 Frenchmen, and he was to wait for me at Detroit till the end of May. I gave our savages a dog feast [festin de chien]; and after having declared to them the will of the King and of the Governor, I left with 16 Frenchmen and a guide of the Miami nation.

We encamped half a league from the Fort, to wait for the savages who might wish to follow us. I left 20 Frenchmen at the Fort and the Sieur de Bellefontaine to command there during my absence. Fifty Chaganons, four Loups, and seven Miamis came to join me at night; and the next day more than 300 Illinois came, but they went back again, with the exception of 149. This did not prevent my continuing my route; and after 200 leagues of journey by land, we came, on the 19th of May, to Fort Detroit. We made some canoes of elm, and I sent one of them to Fort St. Joseph on the high ground above Detroit, 30 leagues from where we were, to give Sieur Dulud, the Commander of this fort, information of my arrival. The Sieur Beauvais de Tilly joined me, and afterwards the Sieur de la Foret, then the Sieurs de la Durantaye and Dulud. I made the French and the savages coast along the bay.

After Le Sieur Durantaye had saluted us, we returned the salute. They had with them 30 English, whom they had taken on the Lake Huron, at the place at which they had reached it. We made canoes on our journey, and coasted along Lake Erie to Niagara, where we made a fort below the portage to wait there for news. On our way we took 30 more Englishmen, who were going to Missilimakinac, commanded by Major Gregory, who was bringing back some Huron and Outawas slaves, taken by the Iroquois. Had it not been for these two moves of good luck our affairs would have turned out badly, as we were at war with the Iroquois. The English, from the great quantity of brandy which they had with them, would have gained over our allies, and thus we should have had all the savages and the English upon us at once.

I sent the Sieur de la Foret forward to inform M. de Denonville of everything. He was at the Fort of Frontenac, and he joined us at Fort Les Sables. The large boat arrived, and brought us provisions. M. le Monseigneur sent us word by it that he expected to arrive by the 10th of July at the Marsh, which is seven leagues from Sonnontouans.

The Poutouatamis, Hurons, and Ottawas joined us there, and built some canoes. There was an Iroquois slave among them whom I proposed to have put to death for the insolent manner in which he spoke of the French. They paid no attention to my proposal. Five leagues on our march he ran away and gave information of our approach, and of the marks which our savages bore to recognize each other, which did us great harm in the ambuscade, as will be seen.

On the 10th we arrived at the Marsh of Fort Les Sables and the army from below arrived at the same time. I received orders to take possession of a certain position, which I did with my company and savages. We then set about building a fort. On the 11th I went with 50 men to reconnoitre the road, three miles from Camp. On the 12th the Fort was finished, and we set off for the village. On the 13th, half a league from the prairie [deserts], we found an ambuscade, and my company, who were the advance guard, forced it. We lost seven men of whom my lieutenant was one, and two of my own people. We were occupied for seven days in cutting down the corn of the four villages. We returned to Fort Les Sables, and left it to build a fort at Niagara.

From thence I returned to Fort St. Louis with my cousin, the Sieur Dulud, who returned to his post with 18 soldiers and some savages. Having made half the portage, which is two leagues in length, some Hurons who followed us, perceived some Iroquois, and ran to give us warning. There were only 40 of us, and as we thought the enemy strong, we agreed to fall back with our ammunition towards the fort and get a reinforcement. We marched all night, and as the Sieur Dulud could not leave his detachment, he begged me to go to the Marquis, while he lay in ambush in a very good position. I embarked, and when I came to the Fort, the Marquis was unwilling to give me any men, the more so as the militia was gone away and he had only some infantry remaining to escort him; however, he sent Captain Valiennes and 50 men to support us, who stayed at the portage whilst we crossed it. We embarked, and when clear of the land we perceived the Iroquois on the banks of the lake. We passed over, and I left the Sieur Dulud at his post at Detroit. I went on in company with the Reverend Father Crevier as far as Missilimakinac, and afterwards to Fort St. Louis in 1687.

There I found M. Cavelier, a priest, his nephew, and the Father Anastatius, a Recollet, and two men. They concealed from me the assassination of M. de la Salle; and upon their assuring me that he was on the Gulf of Mexico in good health, I received them as if they had been M. de la Salle himself, and lent them more than 700 francs [281]. M. Cavelier departed in the spring, 1687 [1688], to give an account of his voyage at court.

M. de la Foret came here in the autumn, and went away in the following spring. On the 7th of April, one named Coutoure brought to me two Akansas, who danced the calumet. They informed me of the death of M. de la Salle, with all the circumstances which they had heard from the lips of M. Cavelier, who had fortunately discovered the house I had built at Arkansas, where the said Coutoure stayed with three Frenchmen. He told me that the fear of not obtaining from me what he desired had made him conceal the death of his brother, but that he had told them of it.

M. Cavelier told me that the Cadadoquis had proposed to accompany him if he would go and fight against the Spaniards. He had objected, on account of there being only 14 Frenchmen. They replied that their nation was numerous, that they only wanted a few musqueteers, and that the Spaniards had much money, which they [the French] should take; and as for themselves, they only wished to keep the women and children as slaves. Coutoure told me that a young man whom M. Cavelier had left at Arkansas had assured him that this was very true. I would not undertake anything without the consent of the Governor of Canada. I sent the said Coutoure to the French remaining in Nicondiche, to get all the information he could. He set off, and at 100 leagues from the Fort was wrecked, and having lost everything, returned.

In the interval M. de Denonville directed me to let the savages do as they liked, and to do nothing against the Iroquois. He at the same time informed me that war was declared against Spain. Upon this I came to the resolution of going to Naodiche, to execute what M. Cavelier had ventured to undertake, and to bring back M. de la Salle's men, who were on the sea coast not knowing of the misfortune that had befallen him. I set off on the 3d of October, and joined my cousin, who was gone on before, and who was to accompany me, as he expected that M. de la Foret would come and take the command in my absence; but as he did not come I sent my cousin back to command the Fort.

I bought a boat larger than my own. We embarked five Frenchmen, one Chaganon, and two slaves. We arrived on the 17th at an Illinois village at the mouth of their river. They had just come from fighting the Osages, and had lost 13 men, but brought back 130 prisoners. We reached the village of the Kappas on the 16th of January, where we were received with demonstrations of joy, and for four days there was nothing but dancing, feasting, and masquerading after their manner. They danced the calumet for me, which confirmed the last alliance.

On the 20th of January we came to Tongenga, and they wished to entertain us as the Kappas had done; but being in haste I deferred it until another time. I did the same with the Torremans, on my arrival on the 22d. Leaving my crew I set off the next day for Assotoue, where my commercial house is. These savages had not yet seen me, as they lived on a branch of the river coming from the west. They did their best, giving me two women of the Cadadoquis nation, to whom I was going. I returned to Torremans on the 26th, and bought there two boats. We went away on the 27th. On the 29th, finding one of our men asleep when on duty as sentinel, I reprimanded him, and he left me. I sent two of my people to Coroa, to spare myself the fatigue of dragging on with our crew six leagues inland. The Frenchman, with whom I had quarrelled, made with them a third.

We slept opposite the rivers of the Taencas, which run from Arkansas. They came there on the 2nd, this being the place of meeting. My Chaganon went out hunting on the other side of the river, where he was attacked by three Chacoumas. He killed one of them, and was slightly wounded by an arrow on the left breast. On the 4th the rest of the party arrived. On the 5th, being opposite Taencas, the men whom I had sent to Coroa not having brought any news of the two Frenchmen whom I was anxious about, I sent them to Natches. They found that this nation had killed the two men. They retired as well as they could, making the savages believe that we were numerous. They arrived on the 8th of February. We set off on the 12th with 12 Taencas, and after a voyage of 12 leagues to the N. W. we left our boat and made twenty leagues portage, and on the 17th of February, 1690, came to Nachitoches. They made us stay at the place which is in the midst of the three villages called Nachitoches, Ouasita and Capiche. The chiefs of the three nations assembled, and before they began to speak, the 30 Taencas who were with me got up, and leaving their arms went to the temple, to show how sincerely they wished to make a solid peace. After having taken their God to witness they asked for friendship. I made them some presents in the name of the Taencas. They remained some days in the village to traffic with salt, which these nations got from a salt lake in the neighborhood. After their departure they gave me guides to Yataches; and after ascending the river, always towards the N. W., about 30 leagues, we found 15 cabins of Natches, who received us pretty well. We arrived on the 16th of March at Yataches, about 40 leagues from thence. The three villages of Yataches, Nadas, and Choye are together. As they knew of our arrival they came three leagues to meet us with refreshments, and on joining us, we went together to their villages. The chief made many feasts for us. I gave presents to them, and asked for guides to the Cadadoquis.

They were very unwilling to give us any, as they had murdered three ambassadors about four days before, who came to their nation to make peace. However, by dint of entreaties, and assuring them that no harm would happen to their people, they granted me five men, and we got to Cadadoquis on the 28th. At the place where we were encamped we discovered the trail of men and horses. The next day some horsemen came to reconnoitre us, and after speaking to the wife of the chief whom I brought back with me, carried back the news. The next day a woman, who governed this nation, came to visit me with the principal persons of the village. She wept over me, demanding revenge for the death of her husband, and of the husband of the woman whom I was bringing back, both of whom had been killed by the Osages. To take advantage of everything I promised that their dead should be avenged. We went together to their temple, and after the priests had invoked their God for a quarter of an hour they conducted me to the cabin of their chief. Before entering they washed my face with water, which is a ceremony among them.

During the time I was there I learnt from them that 80 leagues off were the seven Frenchmen whom M. Cavelier had left. I hoped to finish my troubles by rejoining them, but the Frenchmen who accompanied me, tired of the voyage, would go no further. They were unmanageable persons over whom I could exercise no authority in this distant country. I was obliged to give way. All that I could do was to engage one of them, with a savage, to accompany me to the village of Naovediche, where I hoped to find the seven Frenchmen. I told those who abandoned me, that to prevent the savages knowing this, it was best to say that I had sent them away to carry back the news of my arrival, so that the savages should not suspect our disunion.

The Chadadoquis are united with two other villages called Natchitoches and Nasoui, situated on the Red River. All the nations of this tribe speak the same language. Their cabins are covered with straw, and they are not united in villages, but their huts are distant one from the other. Their fields are beautiful. They fish and hunt. There is plenty of game, but few cattle [bœufs]. They wage cruel war with each other—hence their villages are but thinly populated. I never found that they did any work except making very fine bows, which they make a traffic with distant nations. The Cadadoquis possess about 30 horses, which they call "cavali" [Sp. caballo, a horse]. The men and women are tattooed in the face, and all over the body. They called this river the Red River, because, in fact it deposits a sand which makes the water as red as blood. I am not acquainted with their manners, having only seen them in passing.

I left this place on the 6th of April, directing our route southwards, with a Frenchman, a Chaganon, a little slave of mine, and five of their savages, whom they gave me as guides to Naouadiche. When I went away, I left in the hands of the wife of the chief a small box, in which I had put some ammunition. On our road we found some Naouadiches savages hunting, who assured me that the Frenchmen were staying with them. This gave me great pleasure, hoping to succeed in my object of finding them. On the 19th the Frenchman with me lost himself. I sent the savages who were with me to look for him. He came back on the 21st, and told me that, having lost our trail, he was near drowning himself in crossing a little river on a piece of timber. His bag slipped off, and thus all our powder was lost, which very much annoyed me as we were reduced to 60 pounds of ammunition.

On the 23d we slept half a league from the village and the chiefs came to visit us at night. I asked them about the Frenchmen. They told me that they had accompanied their chiefs to fight against the Spaniards seven days' journey off; that the Spaniards had surrounded them with their cavalry, and that their chiefs having spoken in their favor the Spaniards had given them horses and arms. Some of the others told me that the Quanouatins had killed three of them, and that the four others were gone in search of iron arrow heads; I did not doubt but they had murdered them. I told them that they had killed the Frenchmen. Directly all the women began to cry, and thus I saw that what I had said was true. I would not, therefore, accept the calumet. I told the chief I wanted four horses for my return, and having given him seven hatchets and a string of large glass beads, I received the next day four Spanish horses, two of which were marked on the haunche with an R. and a crown [couronne fermee], and another with an N. Horses are very common among them. There is not a cabin which has not four or five.

As this nation is sometimes at peace and sometimes at war with the neighboring Spaniards, they take advantage of a war to carry off the horses. We harassed ours as well as we could, and departed on the 29th, greatly vexed that we could not continue our route as far as M. de la Salle's camp. We were unable to obtain guides from this nation to take us there, though not more than 80 leagues off, besides being without ammunition, owing to the accident which I related before.

It was at the distance of three days' journey from hence that M. de la Salle was murdered. I will say a few words of what I have heard of this misfortune. M. de la Salle having landed beyond the Mississippi, on the side of Mexico, about 80 leagues from the mouth of the river, and losing his vessels on the coast, saved a part of the cargo, and began to march along the seashore, in search of the Mississippi. Meeting with many obstacles on account of the bad roads, he resolved to go to Illinois by land, and loaded several horses with his baggage. The Father Anastatius, M. Cavelier, a priest, his brother; M. Cavelier, his nephew; M. Moranget, a relative; M. M. Duhault and Lanctot, and several Frenchmen accompanied him, with a Chaganon savage.

When three days' journey from the Naoudiche, and short of provisions, he sent Moranget, his servant, and the Chaganon, to hunt in a small wood with orders to return in the evening. When they had killed some buffaloes, they stopped to dry the meat. M. de la Salle was uneasy, and asked the Frenchmen who among them would go and look for them. Duhault and Lanctot had for a long time determined to kill M. de la Salle, because, during the journey along the seacoast, he had compelled the brother of Lanctot, who was unable to keep up, to return to camp; and who, when returning alone, was massacred by the savages. Lanctot vowed to God that he would never forgive his brother's death. As in long journeys there are always discontented persons, he easily found partisans. He offered, therefore, with them, to search for M. Moranget, in order to have an opportunity to execute their design.

Having found the men, he told them that M. de la Salle was uneasy about them; but the others showing that they could not set off till the next day, it was agreed to sleep there. After supper they arranged the order of the watch. It was to begin with M. de Moranget; after him was to follow the servant of M. de la Salle, and then the Chaganon. After they had kept their watch and were asleep, they were massacred, as persons attached to M. de la Salle. At daybreak they heard the reports of pistols, which were fired as signals by M. de la Salle, who was coming with the Father Recollect in search of them. The wretches laid in wait for him, placing M. Duhault's servant in front. When M. de la Salle came near, he asked where M. Moranget was. The servant, keeping on his hat, answered that he was behind. As M. de la Salle advanced to remind him of his duty, he received three balls in his head, and fell down dead. The Father Recollet was frightened, and, thinking that he also was to be killed, threw himself on his knees, and begged for a quarter of an hour to prepare his soul. They replied that they were willing to save his life.

They went on together to where M. Cavelier was, and, as they advanced, shouted, "Down with your arms." M. de Cavelier, on hearing the noise, came forward, and when told of the death of his brother, threw himself on his knees, making the same request that had been made by the Father Recollet. They granted him his life. He asked to go and bury the body of his brother, which was refused. Such was the end of one of the greatest men of the age. He was a man of wonderful ability, and capable of undertaking any discovery. His death much grieved the three Naoudiches whom M. de la Salle had found hunting, and who had accompanied him to the village. After the murderers had committed this crime, they seized all the baggage of the deceased, and continued their journey to the village of Naoudiches, where they found two Frenchmen who had deserted from M. de la Salle two years before, and had taken up their abode with these savages.

After staying some days in this village, the savages proposed to them to go to war against the Quanoouatinos, to which the Frenchmen agreed, lest the savages should ill-treat them. As they were ready to set off, an English buccaneer, whom M. de la Salle had always liked, begged of the murderers that, as they were going to war with the savages, they would give him and his comrades some shirts. They flatly refused, which offended him, and he could not help expressing this to his comrades. They agreed together to make a second demand, and if refused, to revenge the death of M. de la Salle. This they did some days afterwards. The Englishman, taking two pistols in his belt, accompanied by a Frenchman with his gun, went deliberately to the cabin of the murderers, whom they found were out shooting with bows and arrows.

Lanctot met them and wished them good day, and asked how they were. They answered, "Pretty well, and it was not necessary to ask how they did, as they were always eating turkeys and good venison." Then the Englishman asked for some ammunition and shirts, as they were provided with everything. They replied that M. de la Salle was their debtor, and that what they had taken was theirs. "You will not, then?" said the Englishman. "No," replied they. On which the Englishman said to one of them, "You are a wretch; you murdered my master," and firing his pistol killed him on the spot. Duhault tried to get into his cabin, but the Frenchman shot him also with a pistol, in the loins, which threw him on the ground. M. Cavelier and Father Anastatius ran to his assistance. Duhault had hardly time to confess himself, for the father had but just given him absolution when he was finished by another pistol shot at the request of the savages, who could not endure that he should live after having killed their chief. The Englishman took possession of everything. He gave a share to Mr. Cavelier, who having found my abode in Arkansas, went from thence to Illinois. The Englishman remained at Naoudiches.

We reached Cadadoquis on the 10th of May. We stayed there to rest our horses, and went away on the 17th, with a guide who was to take us to the village of Coroas. After four days' journey he left us, in consequence of an accident which happened in crossing a marsh. As we were leading our horses by the bridle, he fancied he was pursued by an alligator, and tried to climb a tree. In his hurry he entangled the halter of my horse, which was drowned. This induced him to leave us without saying anything, lest we should punish him for the loss of the horse. We were thus left in great difficulty respecting the road which we were to take.

I forgot to say that the savages who have horses use them both for war and for hunting. They make pointed saddles, wooden stirrups, and body-coverings of several skins, one over the other, as a protection from arrows. They arm the breast of their horses with the same material, a proof that they are not very far from the Spaniards. When our guide was gone I told the Chaganon to take the lead; all he said in answer was, that that was my business; and as I was unable to influence him, I was obliged to act as guide. I directed our course to the south-east, and after about 40 leagues' march, crossing seven rivers, we found the River Coroas. We made a raft to explore the other side of the river, but found there no dry land. We resolved to abandon our horses, as it was impossible to take them on, upon account of the great inundation. In the evening, as we were preparing to depart, we saw some savages. We called to them in vain—they ran away, and we were unable to come up with them. Two of their dogs came to us, which with two of our own, we embarked the next day on our raft, and left our horses. We crossed 50 leagues of flooded country. The water, where it was least deep, reached half way up the legs; and in all this tract we found only one little island of dry land, where we killed a bear and dried its flesh. It would be difficult to give an idea of the trouble we had to get out of this miserable country, where it rained night and day. We were obliged to sleep on the trunks of two great trees, placed together, and to make our fires on the trees, to eat our dogs, and to carry our baggage across large tracts covered with reeds; in short, I never suffered so much in my life as in this journey to the Mississippi, which we reached on the 11th of July.

Finding where we were, and that we were only 30 leagues from Coroas, we resolved to go there, although we had never set foot in that village. We arrived there on the evening of the 14th. We had not eaten for three days, as we could find no animal, on account of the great flood. I found two of the Frenchmen who had abandoned me, at this village. The savages received me very well, and sympathized with us in the sufferings we had undergone. During three days they did not cease feasting us, sending men out hunting every day, and not sparing their turkeys. I left them on the 20th, and reached Arkansas on the 31st, where I caught the fever, which obliged me to stay there till the 11th of August, when I left. The fever lasted until we got to the Illinois in September.

I cannot describe the beauty of all the countries I have mentioned. If I had had a better knowledge of them, I should be better able to say what special advantages might be derived from them. As for the Mississippi, it could produce every year 20,000 ecu's worth of peltries, an abundance of lead, and wood for ship-building. A silk trade might be established there, and a port for the protection of vessels and the maintenance of a communication with the Gulf of Mexico. Pearls might be found there. If wheat will not grow at the lower part of the river, the upper country would furnish it; and the islands might be supplied with everything they need, such as planks, vegetables, grain, and salt beef. If I had not been hurried in making this narrative, I should have stated many circumstances which would have gratified the reader, but the loss of my notes during my travels is the reason why this relation is not such as I could have wished.

HENRY DE TONTY.

THE AUBRY MANUSCRIPT.

EXPLANATORY NOTES.

THE original document herewith translated was obtained by the Editor, from Paris, France. It was written from Fort Chartres, of the Illinois, late in 1758, by Charles Phillipe Aubry, an officer in the French service in Louisiana and Illinois. He built Fort Massiac in 1757, which he called Fort Ascension, but which in the following year was named Fort Massiac in honor of M. de Massiac, Minister of the French Marine and Colonies at the time. Besides this he led the sortie of September 14, 1758, at Fort Du Quesne against the British and colonial forces in the fight known as "Grant's defeat." Here he utterly routed James Grant, major of the 62d or Highland regiment. Grant, seriously hurt, was taken prisoner, while his killed and wounded, mostly Highlanders, were nearly 300 in number.

The next year he conducted 300 soldiers and militia from the Illinois, and some 600 Indians collected on his way, toward Niagara. He had with him 200,000 pounds of flour and other provisions. His route with all these was in bateaux and canoes down the Mississippi, up the Wabash to the Miamis portage, near the présent Ft. Wayne, Indiana, where the low stage of water and the necessity of hastening forced him to leave his supplies, thence down the Maumee and south shore of Lake Erie. Soon after, in his effort to raise the siege of Fort Niagara, he was captured by Sir William Johnson. Released the next year, 1760, he returned to New Orleans where as major he commanded four companies of French.

He was the successor of M. d'Abadie d'St. Germaine, since February 4, 1765, as governor of so much of the Louisiana that still remained to France after the treaty of peace with Great Britain. And in March of the next year he turned the colony over to the Spanish Governor Don Antonio Ulloa. By courtesy he was retained in the office until the arrival of the military forces of Spain, and when Ulloa was dismissed, Aubry continued on, until finally relieved in 1769 by Don Alexander O'Reilly, the latter Spanish governor. Soon after Aubry left Louisiana for France, and when near Bordeaux his vessel went down in a storm and he, with all others aboard except four survivors, were lost at sea.*

The Aubry manuscript, now for the first time translated and printed, is as yet the only known document that officially tells why and when Fort Massiac was built. It will require a great change in our notions as to the history of that military structure. It is as follows:

ACCOUNT OF THE SERVICES OF MR. AUBRY.

CAPTAIN OF INFANTRY IN THE ARMY OF THE KING IN LOUISIANA.

MR. AUBRY entered the service of the King in the Lyonnaise regiment in 1740. [The Marquis of Beaupreau was then colonel]. He then served for eight campaigns. He made himself loved and esteemed by all the officers of the regiment, and he proved on several occasions that his zeal for the service of the King was accompanied by the necessary qualities to enable him to acquit himself with distinction. At the time of the last peace he was one of the rising first lieutenants of the company and was included among those discharged. Count d'Argenson, in accordance with the favorable testimony which was given him of Mr. Aubry, gave him the brevet of Captain in the King's army in Louisiana. He left France under orders to conduct one hundred and thirty recruits to New Orleans.

* The above sketch of Aubry is collated from Gayerre's "Historic Louisiana." "Annals of the West," by Albach, edition of 1858. Craig's "Olden Time," Pittsburgh 1848, M. Ponchot's "Memoir upon the Late War in North America between the French and English, 1755-1760;" translated by Franklin B. Hough, and the correspondence of other French officials in Manuscripts at Paris.—H. W. B.

After a most perilous voyage he arrived safe in Louisiana with all the soldiers who had been entrusted to his command.

The manner in which he conducted himself in the colony merited for him the esteem and friendship of Mr. de Vandreul, who was then governor. Mr. de Ruerlord, who succeeded Mr. de Vandreuil, honored Mr. Aubry with the same sentiments. The important operations with which he entrusted him during the last years were a proof of the confidence which he reposed in the conduct and valor of this officer.

In the course of the year 1756, Mr. de Ruerlord confided to Mr. Aubry the command of a large expedition which was to go from New Orleans to Illinois. Mr. Aubry departed the 20th of July, 1756, with one hundred and fifty men and a dozen boats. He arrived at his destination the 20th of November after having experienced in this journey of five hundred leagues all the fatigues and perils which it is possible to imagine.

Mr. Aubry remained in Illinois from the 28th of November, 1756, till the 1st of May, 1757.

Mr. de Macarty, commander for the King, then received certain news that the English, who had large settlements up the Keraquis [Cherokee, it being the present Tennessee] river, were preparing to come down to enter the Belle [Ohio] Riviere, and from there into the Mississippi, with the design of corrupting the fidelity of the savages and afterwards taking possession of all the points which we occupied on the upper Mississippi.

To oppose these projects, the success of which could only be fatal to the colony of Louisiana, Mr. de Macarty [commandant of the Illinois] ordered Mr. Aubry to depart speedily with one hundred and fifty Frenchmen, one hundred savages and three pieces of cannon to establish a fort on the Belle Riviere as near as possible to the Keraquis river.

In consequence of these orders Mr. Aubry departed the 10th of May, 1757, and after having travelled over a large extent of country without meeting a single Englishman* he built a fort conformably to the instructions of Mr. de Macarty, in a place which, by its position and elevation put the French in a position to oppose the attacks of the enemy more easily.

This fort was constructed with so much diligence that on the 20th of June [1757] it was completed, the doors closed and the cannon placed on the bastions. The fort was named the Fort of the Ascension, on account of its being on that day that the first stake was driven.

As soon as this was finished, Mr. Aubry having left there a captain, a lieutenant, an ensign and a garrison sufficient to defend it, departed with forty Frenchmen and as many savages to go along the Keraquis [early known as Cherokee river, and now as the Tennessee river] river to reconnoitre, [or discover the English].

He had penetrated about 120 leagues into the country which was more than any French detachment had dared to do. The savages who had accompanied Mr. Aubry had abandoned him, and he had travelled over sixty leagues with the forty Frenchmen, only.

He received from an English prisoner [an American colonist] whom he had taken during the journey, news of designs of the English, and as he was not imprudent enough to further entangle himself and forty men in a country where the enemy had collected forces far superior to his, he took his departure and returned to the Fort of the Ascension.

* He went overland the old route from Fort Chartres to Kaskaskia, and thence on to the Ohio by a route later known as the old Fort Massac road.—H. W. B.

Having found all in good order there, he started on July 22d, to return to Illinois to give an account to Mr. de Macarty of the operations of his campaign.

He arrived at the post of Illinois the 6th of August, from whence he again departed the 1st of September to return to the Fort of the Ascension. Above two months afterward he was attacked by a large detachment of Keraquis [very ferocious savages] but he had the advantage of repulsing them and putting them totally to flight.

All had been very quiet since the dispersion of the Keraquis when Mr. Aubry received from Mr. de Macarty new orders which obliged him to leave the Fort of the Ascension. He was charged with the command of a large convoy laden with provisions for Fort Du Quesne, a dependant of Canada, five hundred leagues distant from Illinois, and one thousand leagues from New Orleans.

Mr. Aubry returned to the Illinois post whence he could not depart till March 10, 1758, owing to the fact that the seventeen large boats, of which his fleet was composed, could not be ready and laden before that time.

He arrived with all his escort at Fort Du Quesne after having encountered innumerable fatigues and perils. He was at this post when he heard that a detachment of nine hundred Englishmen was approaching the fort to molest it.

Mr. Aubry went out with four hundred Frenchmen, and attacked the enemy with so much impetuosity that they were completely routed and left three hundred men on the field; two hundred were taken prisoners and the rest were cut in pieces by the savages, who had not dared to appear during the combat, but who pursued the fugitives when the victory was decided.

This signal advantage of the 28th of April, 1759, of which the Gazette of France has made mention [gave a respite during which we] razed Fort Duquesne to the ground before the arrival of an army of ten thousand English, bringing artillery.* Mr. Aubry returned to the post of Illinois where he is at present.

* By General John Forbes.

100

100

5253

Gen. George Rogers Clark.

GENERAL GEORGE ROGERS CLARK'S CONQUEST OF THE ILLINOIS.

BY THE EDITOR.

THE fuller story of George Rogers Clark's campaigns of 1778-9 and 1780, whereby he gained for the Colony of Virginia a domain later known as "The Territory of the United States northwest of the River Ohio," and now as the States of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin, is made up from several sources.

Among these are his letter to George Mason of Virginia, the diary or journal of Major Joseph Bowman, the letters of instruction from Patrick Henry, Governor of the Commonwealth of Virginia, to Colonel Clark, the one for the public eye, while the other, which contained the real purpose of the venture, was strictly "private."*

A lengthy "Memoir" written later by Clark "at the request," as alleged, "of Thomas Jefferson and James Madison."† Then there are the Laws, Resolutions and State papers of Virginia, the Acts, etc., of the Continental Congress, the American Archives, the early acts and prints of Pennsylvania in this connection.

* These documents, with an introductory by the late Hon. Henry Pirtle, of Louisville, were published by Robert Clarke & Co., of Cincinnati, 1869.

† It appears entire for the first time in the late work of William Hayden English, President of the Indiana Historical Society, and published by the Bowen-Merrill Company, Indianapolis, 1896.

Besides these sources there is other correspondence between Governors Henry and Jefferson, and Clark, together with his letters to or from his officers or friends, which were captured by the enemy.*

These papers are a headlight, thrown, not only on Clark's Illinois campaign, but in their stronger glare on the real cause of the Indian forays on our borders that led Clark on, to plan and make the venture. That depository gives the other or British side of the story. It officially shows that the people of Detroit, or others subject to that trades post, from their provincial Governor down to the lowest mixture of French or other white and Indian blood, with few exceptions, held a bitter and active hatred toward their neighboring colonies.

At this time the chief commerce of the northwest was with the Indians, and traders in the interest of Detroit were a busy factor among the savages of the Rivers Ohio, Maumee, Wabash, St. Joseph of Lake Michigan, and in the Illinois.

Besides this the mother country held the gateways at Mackinac and Sault Ste. Marie by which her subjects enjoyed the traffic and swayed the savages of the entire easterly side of the upper Mississippi. They, too, were as jealous of their monopoly as the traders of the Illinois, Maumee or Wabash, and as ready to use any means at hand to repel all danger of its loss.

This was the source of the Indian raids and rapine on our borders. In this cruel work the trades interest was backed by Upper Canada, and Canada was inspired by the then governing power of Great Britain. The latter was nearer his arm and unguarded. And here he chose first to strike.

* Copies of these last are in "The Canadian Archives." Our neighboring Dominion has collected a rare deposit of original matter relating to all parts of North America, that was first explored, or settled either by the French, or those who spoke our common English tongue.

To call his campaign which followed a "conquest of the Illinois," is, in a sense, apt to mislead one. In the outset and earlier stage it was carried on, not to acquire more territory but to stop the Indian ravages on the settlers of a country, especially Kentucky, of which we were already possessed. True, though unforeseen at the time, the gain of the great northwest was the final outcome.

Another error is, that popular opinion lays those ravages of the Indians wholly to them. They were more the cruel instruments of the British power; and Lieut. Governor Hamilton at Detroit had much trouble to hold them to their bloody work. Those of Northern Ohio, the Maumee, Wabash, St. Joseph and Illinois grew indifferent to a contest in which they had nothing to gain, while it invited the burning of their villages and the lives of their own women and children.

To arrest this defection, so Haldimand writes to Sackville, that the continued service of "the Indians must be secured at any expense;" and refers to "the necessity of providing supplies for the Indians for the next campaign," &c.*

Again, the borderfolk, their ways beyond the pale of a fixed social life, and for this reason self dependent, their Block house stations for security or defense against prowling savages, or the incursions of larger war parties, need to be kept in mind. These features are well treated by the late Judge John B. Dillon in his "Historical Notes of the Northwest," etc., published some sixty years ago.

To illustrate, in the foreshadow of the revolutionary war, we find that Lord George Sackville, the British colonial secretary, writes Sir Guy Carleton, Governor at Quebec, that "it was His Majesty's resolution that the most vigorous efforts should be made, and every means employed that Providence has put into His Majesty's hands for crushing the rebellion and restoring the constitution. It is [therefore] the King's command that you direct Lieut. Governor Hamilton of [Detroit] to assemble as many of the Indians of his district as he conveniently can, and placing a proper person at their head to conduct their [war] parties and restrain them from committing violence on the well-affected, inoffensive inhabitants; employ them in making a diversion and exciting alarm on the frontiers of Virginia and Pennsylvania." etc.*

* Haldimand to Sackville, July 25, 1777. Same to Same, Sept. 20, 1777. Canadian Archives.

Detroit and its dependent traders were all too eager to obey. And in advices of their work which reached Lord Sackville on the other side of the Atlantic, tell, as my Lord says, "of Hamilton's success [over Gen. Clark at Vincennes] in the Illinois country." That "the Indians were scouring the Ohio and Wabash country." That "the rebels of Virginia and Pennsylvania had deserted their posts," etc.†

Why skirmish longer on the edges of a crisis, thought Clark, when he might end it with a knock down blow at the Illinois and Detroit?

These last, with those set out above by the editor here, are so many high lights to bring out in sharper relief the grand conception of General Clark in his bold attack on Kaskaskia and his daring march across Illinois and capture of Lieut. Governor Hamilton at Post Vincennes.

The Editor produces here much of Judge Dillon's work that relates to Clark's campaigns, and has added or worked into it matter that is drawn from other sources. The identity of the one from the other is shown in the accompanying foot notes or wording in the text.

* Sackville to Carleton, March 26, 1776. Letter in Canadian Archives. Sackville served until after the revolutionary war, and was against all plans to end it sooner.—H. W. B.

† Sackville's letter of July 8, 1779, to General Fred Haldimand. Canadian Archives. Haldimand succeeded Sir Guy Carleton as Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Quebec in 1778.—H. W. B.

So much said, and we proceed with Clark's Campaigns in the Illinois, as follows:

In the course of the years 1775 and 1776, by means of the operations of Land Companies, and the perseverance of individual adventurers, several hundred settlers were added to the white population of the country lying between the Alleghany mountains and the river Ohio. In the meantime the English colonies in North America, acting wisely and justly in this instance, renounced their allegiance to Great Britain. and declared that they were "and of right ought to be, free and independent States."

By the authority of the Continental Congress, commissioners were appointed to reside at Fort Pitt for the purpose of making treaties with the Indians in that region,* and messengers were sent with pacific overtures from the new government to the southern and the northwestern tribes. To defeat the object of this policy, the British commandants and the loyal British traders in the country northwest of the Ohio, encouraged and supported by a considerable number of French auxiliaries, incited the Indians to assail the frontiers of the confederated States.

From the speeches of two distinguished Delaware chiefs, Buckongahelas and White Eyes,† an inference may be drawn concerning the nature of the appeals which, about this time, were made to the Indians. Buckongahelas, who was the friend of the king of Great Britain, spoke to the Indians thus: "Friends! Listen to what I say to you! You see a great and powerful nation divided! You see the father fighting against the son, and the son against the father! The father has called on his Indian children, to assist him in punishing his children, the Americans, who have become refractory. I took time to consider what I should do; whether or not I should receive the hatchet of my father to assist him. At first I looked upon it as a family quarrel, in which I was not interested. However, at length, it appeared to me that the father was in the right; and his children deserved to be punished a little. That this must be the case, I concluded from the many cruel acts his offspring had committed from time to time on his Indian children, in encroaching on their land, stealing their property, shooting at, and murdering, without cause, men, women, and children. Yes! even murdering those, who at all times had been friendly to them, and were placed for protection under the roof of their father's house—the father himself standing sentry at the door at the time.* Friends! often has the father been obliged to settle, and make amends for the wrongs and mischiefs done to us by his refractory children; yet these do not grow better. No; they remain the same; and will continue to be so, as long as we have any land left us. Look back at the murders committed by the Long-knives on many of our relations, who lived peaceable neighbors to them on the Ohio. Did they not kill them without the least provocation? Are they, do you think, better now than they were then?"

* General George Rogers Clark, Arthur Lee, and Col. Richard Butler.
—H. W. B.

† "Bu-kon-ge-he-la," or "Puck-on-che-luh," meaning "one who does all he undertakes," and "Wi-co-cal-ind," or Captain "White Eyes."—H. W. B.

Note by the Editor: [Bu-kon-ge-he-la was a great war chief of the Delawares, and until the final defeat of the Northwestern Indians, August 20, 1794, at the battle of "The Fallen Timbers," near the present South Toledo, Ohio, had been an active and cruel foe to the United States. In that fight the British did not come from their Fort Miamis near by as they had agreed, to aid the savages. After this treachery Buckongahelas would have nothing to do with, or even take a present from the British who had all along egged the Indians on.

* Alluding to the murder of the Conestoga Indians.—See Gordon's His., p. 405. Note by Dillon.

He had a high regard for General Clark but was not in accord with his nation, and though present at, he took no part in the treaty of Fort McIntosh, now Beaver, in western Pennsylvania. Here he did not notice the other commissioners, Lee and Butler. He went proudly by them, took General Clark by the hand and said, "I thank the Great Spirit for having this day brought together two such great warriors as you and me." His word on his death-bed in 1805, to his tribe, was for "them to rely on the friendship of the United States and never listen to the British who had been the cause of all their misfortunes." H. W. B.]

At this period a Delaware chief, whose Indian name was Koguethagechton, but who was called by the Americans, Captain White Eyes, lived in the valley of the river Muskingum. In the course of his efforts to explain the causes which produced the Revolutionary war, and to establish relations of friendship between his tribe and the United States, he sometimes addressed the Delawares in substance, as follows:

"Suppose a father had a little son whom he loved and indulged while young, but growing up to be a youth, began to think of having some help from him; and making up a small pack, bade him carry it for him. The boy cheerfully takes the pack, following his father with it. The father, finding the boy willing and obedient, continues in his way; and as the boy grows stronger, so the father makes the pack in proportion larger; yet as long as the boy is able to carry the pack, he does so without grumbling. At length, however, the boy having arrived at manhood,—while the father is making up the pack for him,—in comes a person of an evil disposition, and learning who was the carrier of the pack, advises father to make it heavier, for surely the son is able to carry a large pack. The father listening rather to the bad adviser, than consulting his own judgment and the feelings of tenderness, follows the advice of the hard-hearted adviser, and makes up a heavy load for his son to carry.

“The son, now grown up, examining the weight of the load he is to carry, addresses the parent in these words: “Dear father, this pack is too heavy for me to carry; do pray lighten it; I am willing to do what I can; but I am unable to carry this load.” The father’s heart having by this time become hardened, and the bad adviser calling to him, “whip him, if he disobeys and refuses to carry the pack,” now in a peremptory tone, orders his son to take up the pack and carry it off, or he will whip him, and already takes up a stick to beat him.

“So!” says the son, “am I to be served thus, for not doing what I am unable to do! Well, if entreaties avail nothing with you, father—and it is to be decided by blows whether or not I am able to carry a pack so heavy—then I have no other choice left me, but that of resisting your unreasonable demand, by my strength; and so, striking each other, we may see who is strongest.” [Heckewelder]. The speeches which were delivered by Buckongahelas and others, in favor of the King of Great Britain, were prepared by officers in the British Indian department; and the reported speech of Captain White Eyes, in favor of the American colonies, was prepared by a committee of the Continental Congress, adopted by that body on the 13th of July, 1775, and delivered to an assemblage of Indians at Pittsburgh, in the fall of the same year.*

* Vide,—Amr. Archives, 4th series, vol. 2, pp. 1880-1881. Note by Dillon.

Captain White Eyes and his followers were always friendly to the Americans. The Reverend John Heckewelder, a Moravian Missionary, long among the Leni-lenape or Delaware Indians, gives the aboriginal name of White Eyes as "Ko-gue-tha-gecht-on." This good and learned man [Heckewelder] was of German descent, and his alphabet and spelling when rendering Indian or geographical names does not have the same sound or power as when used by our tongue.* However be this, there is no doubt at all as to the identity of Captain White Eyes in both instances.

The Missionary and this chief for many years were bosom friends and comrades of the forest. Heckewelder made a journey through the wilds from the Mission on the Muskingum to Pittsburgh when the "tribes" on the British side during the Revolutionary war spread murder and devastation over our unprotected frontier. White Eyes would not allow him to go without an escort and went "himself at his [Heckewelder's] side." Seeing some suspicious signs on the way White Eyes, riding in front, asked the Missionary "if he felt afraid?" "No, while you are with me I have no fears." White Eyes replied, "You are right, for until I am laid at your feet no one shall hurt you." "And not even then," added young Captain Wingenund, who was riding at the rear; "before this happens I must be also overcome and laid by the side of our friend Koguethugechton."—H. W. B.

At the treaty of Fort McIntosh, referred to, it was agreed in a separate article that "Captain White Eyes" and his followers who took up the hatchet for the United States and their families, should be received into the Delaware

* He says so himself. The name of White Eyes given in the text as "Wi-co-ca-lins," is as it was spelled at the treaty of Fort McIntosh, where Joseph Nicholas, using the King's English, was the interpreter. The name as written by Heckewelder may more nearly present the aboriginal sound, did we but know how he would have pronounced it.—H. W. B.

Nation in the same situation and rank as before the war, and enjoy their portions of the lands given [by such treaty] to the Delaware nation as fully as if they had not taken part with America, etc.—H. W. B.

Besides the peace commissioners named, the Continental Congress appointed and sent to Pittsburgh, Colonel George Morgan, of Princeton, New Jersey, as agent to the Western Indians. This kindly and benevolent man so won upon them that the Delawares conferred on him the name of "Tam-a-nend" in honor and remembrance of their ancient chief, and as the greatest mark of respect which they could show the agent, who they said, "had the same honesty, address, wisdom, affability and meekness as their honored chief, and therefore ought to be named after him."*

During the war for independence his admirers dubbed him by the name of "St. Tammany" the "Patron Saint of America." Lodges of votaries were formed at Philadelphia and elsewhere, of which many eminent patriots were members. They had their "council wigwams," their presiding officers were "Sagamos," their treasurer was "Keeper of the wampum belt," their meetings were "the kindling of the council fire." Trigg'd out in Indian costume they had their annual parades and dances. The society under the name of Tammany, was wholly non-political, and it and its truly American festivals survived for several years the war of the revolution.

On its ruins, adopting its name and ceremonial forms, it remained for the spoilsmen of New York to build "a machine" that looks as if it would wreck any other government than our own. Some of its leaders fled the country, and others of them, seemingly above the reach of the law, have lavished their booty abroad.

* Heckewelder.—H. W. B.

The society in its earlier purity might well be reviewed by those who would keep what the heroic Fathers of our liberty strove so hard to gain. H. W. B.*

Soon after the Declaration of American Independence, the British Lieutenant Governor at Detroit, [Sir Henry Hamilton] sent messages and proclamations to the Indian villages and the French trading posts in the country northwest of the river Ohio, for the purpose of inciting the inhabitants of that region to wage a sanguinary war against the settlers on the western frontiers of the United States. The British Lieutenant Governor gave standing rewards for scalps, but he seldom offered rewards for prisoners. The Continental Congress adopted a less sanguinary policy, and offered rewards for prisoners, but none for scalps.†

In the month of May, 1777, on the appearance of a proclamation issued by the Commandant Edward Abbott, [Lieutenant Governor] a number of the inhabitants of Post Vincennes took the oath of fidelity to the government of Great Britain. The form of this oath, as it was prescribed by an act of the British Parliament, was as follows:

"I, A. B., do sincerely promise and swear that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to his majesty, King George, and him defend to the utmost of my power, against all traitorous conspiracies, and attempts whatsoever, which shall be made against his person, crown and dignity; and I will do my utmost endeavors to disclose and make known to his majesty, his heirs and successors, all treasons and traitorous conspiracies and attempts, which I shall know to be against him or any of them; and all this I do swear, without any equivocation, mental evasion, or secret reservation; and renouncing all pardons and dispensations from any power or person whomsoever, to the contrary. So help me God.”*

* The above historical data on our continental Indian affairs is scrapped and woven in by the editor here, from the Acts of Congress, and Commonwealths of Virginia and Pennsylvania; the volumes of Loskiel, Heckewelder and Zelsberger of the Moravian Mission, who personally knew whereof they wrote; the treaties between the United States and the several Indian Tribes, from 1778 to 1837, the memoirs of President William H. Harrison, earlier governor of the Indiana Territory, who personally knew both Gen. Clark and Bu-con-ge-he-la, and the current newspapers of the day as to the modern "Tammany."

† Proceedings of Council of Virginia, June 18, 1779. Secret Jour. Congress, 1, 46. By Dillon.

In the summer of 1777, small war parties from the north-western tribes, roused by the effects of the British policy, jealous of the loss of their favorite hunting grounds, and enraged at the massacre of a distinguished Shawnee chief, [Corn-stock, or corn stalk] began to assail the settlements and forts which had been established by the whites on the southeastern borders of the river Ohio.

In the western parts of Pennsylvania, Virginia and Kentucky, at this era, a fort was not only a place of defence; it was the residence of a small number of families belonging to the same neighborhood; and it consisted of cabins, block-houses, and stockades. “A range of cabins commonly formed one side at least of the fort. Divisions, or partitions of logs, separated the cabins from each other. The walls on the outside were ten or twelve feet high; the slope of the roof being turned wholly inward. A very few of these cabins had puncheon floors; the greater part were earthen. The block-houses were built at the angles of the fort. They projected about two feet beyond the outer walls of the cabins and stockades. Their upper stories were about eighteen inches every way larger in dimension than the under one—leaving an opening at the commencement of the second story to prevent the enemy from making a lodgment under their walls.

“In some forts, instead of block-houses the angles of the fort were furnished with bastions. A large folding gate, made of thick slabs, nearest the spring, closed the fort. The stockades, bastions, cabins, and block-house walls, were furnished with port holes at proper heights and distances. The whole of the outside was made completely bullet-proof." In many instances these forts were made without the aid of a single nail or spike of iron, because such things were not to be had. In some places, less exposed, a single block-house, with a cabin or two, constituted the whole fort.*

* Dillon.

From 1777 to 1784, the rude fortifications of the western settlers were seldom attacked boldly by strong Indian war parties. A credible actor† among the adventurous class of men who first settled in Kentucky, thus described the Indian mode of making war:

"The Indians in besieging a place are seldom seen in force upon any quarter, but dispersed, and acting individually, or in small parties. They conceal themselves in the bushes or weeds, or behind trees or stumps of trees; or waylay the path, or fields, or other places where their enemies resort; and when one or more can be taken down, in their opinion, they fire the gun, or let fly the arrow, aimed at the mark. If necessary they retreat; if they dare, they advance upon their killed or crippled adversary; and take his scalp, or make him prisoner, if possible.

"They aim to cut off the garrison supplies, by killing the cattle; and they watch the watering places, for those who go for that article of primary necessity; that they may by these means reduce the place to their possession, or destroy its inhabitants in detail. In the night they will place themselves near the fort gate ready to sacrifice the first person who shall appear in the morning. In the day, if there be any cover—such as grass, a bush, a large clod of earth, or a stone as big as a bushel—they will avail themselves of it to approach the fort, by slipping forward on their bellies, within gunshot; and then, whoever appears first, gets the fire; while the assailant makes his retreat behind the smoke from the gun.

* Dillon quoting Doddridge, 117.

† Col. J. Floyd.—Butler's History of Kentucky, 33. By Dillon.

“At other times they approach the walls or palisades with the utmost audacity, and attempt to fire them or to beat down the gate. They often make feints to draw out the garrison on one side of the fort, and if practicable enter it by surprise on the other. And when their stock of provision is exhausted, this being an individual affair, they supply themselves by hunting; and again frequently return to the siege, if by any means they hope to get a scalp.

“Such was the enemy who infested Kentucky, and with whom the early adventurers had to contend. In the combat they were brave; in defeat they were dextrous; in victory they were cruel. Neither sex, nor age, nor the prisoner were exempted from their tomahawk or scalping knife. They saw their perpetual enemy taking possession of their hunting ground; to them the source of amusement, of supply, and of traffic, and they were determined to dispute it to the utmost of their means.

“In the most difficult times the Indians were obliged to retire into the woods; sometimes in pursuit of game; sometimes as to a place of safety; and generally by night, they withdrew to encamp at a distance. In these intervals the white men would plough their corn, or gather their crop, or get up their cattle, or hunt the deer, the bear, and buffalo, for their own food.”*

In the summer of the year 1778, Colonel George Rogers Clark, a native of Albemarle county in Virginia, led a memorable expedition against the ancient French settlements about Kaskaskia and Post Vincennes. With respect to the magnitude of its design, the valor and perseverance with which it was carried on, and the momentous results which were produced by it, this expedition stands without a parallel in the annals of the valley of the Mississippi. The particulars* of the most interesting events that occurred in the progress of this remarkable enterprise, are here related in the plain style of [Clark] the commander of the expedition.

* From Dillon.—H. W. B.

"It was at this period,"[1775], says Clark, in his memoir, "that I first had thoughts of paying some attention to the interests of this country.† The proprietors, Henderson and Company, took great pains to ingratiate themselves in the favor of the people; but, too soon for their interest, they began to raise on their lands, which caused many to complain. A few gentlemen made some attempts to persuade the people to pay no attention to them. I, [Clark] plainly saw that they would work their own ruin; as the greatest security they had for the country would be that of making it the interest of the people to support their claim. * * * I left the country in the fall of 1775, and returned in the spring following. While in Virginia I found there were various opinions respecting Henderson and Company's claim. Many thought it was good; others doubted whether or not Virginia could, with propriety, have any pretensions to the country. This was what I wanted to know.

"I immediately fixed on my plans; namely, that of assembling the people; getting them to elect deputies; and sending them to treat with the Assembly of Virginia, respecting the condition of the country. If valuable conditions were procured, we could declare ourselves citizens of the state;

* Extracted from the MS. "Memoirs of Gen. George Rogers Clark, written by himself at the united desire of Presidents Jefferson and Madison." Dillon. At the time, 1843, when Dillon published, all of Clark's writings were in manuscript.—H. W. B.

† Kentucky. Dillon.

otherwise we might establish an Independent Government ; and, by giving away a great part of the lands, and disposing of the remainder we would not only gain great numbers of inhabitants, but in a good measure protect them.

“To carry this scheme into effect I appointed a general meeting at Harrodstown, on the 6th of June 1776, and stated that something would be proposed to the people that very much concerned their interest. The reason I had for not publishing what I wished to be done, before the day, was that the people should not get into parties on the subject; and as every one would wish to know what was to be done , there would be a more general meeting. But, unfortunately, it was late in the evening of that day before I could get to the place. The people had been in some confusion; but at last concluded that the whole design was to send delegates to the Assembly of Virginia, with a petition praying the Assembly to accept them as such; to establish a new country, etc.

“The polls were opened, and before I had arrived, they had far advanced in the election, and had entered with such spirit into it, that I could not get them to change the principle, that of Delegates with petitions, to that of Deputies under the authority of the people. In short, I did not take much pains. Mr. Gabriel Jones and myself were elected; the papers were prepared; and in a few days we set out for Williamsburgh, in the hope of arriving before the Assembly, then sitting, should rise. * * *

“We proceeded on our journey as far as Botetourt county, and there learned that we were too late; for the Assembly had already risen. We were now at a loss, for some time, to determine what to do; but concluded that we would wait until the fall session. In the meantime I should go to Williamsburgh, and attempt to procure some powder for the Kentuckians, and watch their interests. We parted. Mr. Jones returned to Holston, to join the forces that were

Negative by H. W. Beckwith

Powder magazine at Williamsburg, Va., from which Clark was supplied with powder on his first visit.

1000

raising in order to repel the Cherokee Indians, [as they had lately commenced hostilities,] and I myself proceeded to the Governor of Virginia.

"Mr. Henry, the Governor, lay sick at his seat in Hanover, where I waited on him, and produced my vouchers. He appeared much disposed to favor the Kentuckians, and wrote by me to the council, on the subject. I attended them. My application was for five hundred pounds of powder, to be conveyed to Kentucky, as an immediate supply. After various questions and consultations, the council agreed to furnish the supply; but as we were a detached people, and not yet united to the state of Virginia, and uncertain, until the sitting of the Assembly, whether we should be, they would only lend us the ammunition as friends in distress; but that I must become answerable for it, in case the Assembly should not receive us as citizens of the state.

"I informed them that it was out of my power to pay the expense of carriage and guards necessary for those supplies—that the British officers on our frontiers were making use of every effort to engage the Indians in the war—that the people might be destroyed for the want of this small supply—and that I was in hopes they would consider these matters, and favor us by sending the ammunition at public expense.

"They replied that they were really disposed to do everything for us in their power, consistent with their office—which I believed. After making use of many arguments to convince me that even what they proposed was a stretch of power, they informed me that "they could venture no farther." An order was issued to the keeper of the magazine to deliver me the ammunition.

"I had for twelve months past reflected so much on the various situations of things, respecting ourselves and the continent at large, that my resolution was formed before I left the Council Chamber. I resolved to return the order I had received, and immediately repair to Kentucky, knowing that the people would readily fall into my first plan; as what had passed had almost reduced it to a certainty of success. I wrote to the Council, and enclosed the order, informing them that I had weighed the matter, and found that it was out of my power to convey those stores at my own expense, such a distance through an enemy's country—that I was sorry to find we should have to seek protection elsewhere, which I did not doubt of getting—that if a country was not worth protecting, it was not worth claiming, etc.

“What passed on the reception of this letter, I cannot tell. It was, I suppose, nothing more than what might be expected by a set of gentlemen zealous in the welfare of their country, and fully apprised of what they might expect to take place in Kentucky. I was sent for. Being a little prejudiced in favor of my mother country, I was willing to meet half way. Orders were immediately issued, dated Aug. 23, 1776, for conveying those stores to Pittsburgh, and there to await further orders from me.

“Things being amicably settled, I wrote to Kentucky, giving information of what I had done; and recommended them to send to Pittsburgh, and convey the ammunition by water to their own country. This they never received. I waited until the fall session, when I was joined by my colleague, Mr. Jones. We laid our papers before the Assembly. They resolved that we could not take our seats as members; but that our business should be attended to.

“Colonel Henderson, one of the purchasers of the Cherokees, being present, retarded our business. Colonel Arthur Campbell, one of the members, being also opposed to our having a new county, wished us annexed to the county on the frontiers of which we lay, and which he represented. This caused it to be late in the session before we got a complete establishment of a county by the name of Kentucky. * * *

“The commandants of the different towns of the Illinois and Wabash, I knew were busily engaged in exciting the Indians. Their reduction became my first object; expecting, probably, that it might open a field for further action. I sent two young men* to those places [in the summer of 1777] as spies, with proper instructions for their conduct, to prevent suspicion. Neither did they, nor any one in Kentucky ever know my design until it was ripe for execution. They returned to Harrodstown with all the information I could reasonably have expected.

[These young hunters were also with the company of thirty men, who, under the command of Captain James Harrod, brought the gunpowder which Clark procured, to be sent by the authorities from Williamsburgh to Pittsburgh, and thence conveyed by Captain Harrod's party through the forest to Harrodstown.—H. W. B.]

“I found from them that they had but little expectation of a visit from us; but that things were kept in good order, the militia trained, etc., that they might, in case of a visit be prepared—that the greatest pains were taken to influence the minds of the French inhabitants against the Americans, notwithstanding they could discover traces of affection in some of the inhabitants—that the Indians in that quarter were engaged in the war, &c.

“When I left Kentucky, October 1st, 1777, I plainly saw that every eye was turned towards me, as if expecting some stroke in their favor. Some doubted my return, expecting I would join the army in Virginia. I left them with reluctance, promising them that I would certainly return to their assistance, which I had predetermined. On my arrival at Williamsburgh, I remained a considerable time, settling the accounts of the Kentucky militia, and making remarks of every thing I saw or heard, that could lead me to the knowledge of the disposition of those in power.

* Benjamin Linn and Samuel Moore.

“Burgoyne’s army having been captured, and things seeming to wear a pleasing aspect, on the 10th of December I communicated my design to Governor Henry. At first he seemed to be fond of it; but, to detach a party at so great a distance, [although the service performed might be of great utility], appeared daring and hazardous, as nothing but secrecy could give success to the enterprise.

“To lay the matter before the Assembly, then sitting, would be dangerous, as it would soon be known throughout the frontiers; and probably the first prisoner taken by the Indians would give the alarm, which would end in the certain destruction of the party. He had several private councils, composed of select gentlemen. After making every inquiry into my proposed plans of operation [and particularly that of a retreat, in case of misfortune, across the Mississippi into the Spanish territory], the expedition was resolved upon; and as an encouragement to those who would engage in said service, an instrument of writing was signed, wherein those gentlemen promised to use their influence to procure from the Assembly three hundred acres of land for each, in case of success.

“The Governor and council so warmly engaged in the success of this enterprise, that I had very little trouble in getting matters adjusted; and on the 2d day of January, 1778, received my instructions, and 1,200 pounds [sterling] for the use of the expedition, with an order on Pittsburgh for boats, ammunition, &c. Finding from the Governor’s conversation in general to me, on the subject, that he did not wish an implicit attention to his instructions should prevent my executing any thing that would manifestly tend

Negative by H. W. Beckwith

Old Court House at Williamsburg, Va., built of brick imported from England.

70 vml
AUBONIAO

to the good of the public, on the 4th I set forward, clothed with all the authority that I wished. I advanced to Major William Smith, 150 pounds to recruit men on Holston, and to meet me in Kentucky. Captain Leonard Helm, of Fauquier, and Captain Joseph Bowman, of Frederick, were to raise each a company, and on the [1st] of February arrive at Red Stone Old Fort."*

The instructions referred to by Clark, above, were two in number. One was open, or public. It ordered Clark to proceed without loss of time to raise seven companies of men, officered in the usual manner, to act as militia under Clark's orders. They were to proceed to Kentucky, and there obey such orders and directions as Clark might give them. The ostensible purpose was to take measures against the forays of the Indians upon the settlers of Kentucky. The other order was secret, but in fact contained the real purposes of Clarks' campaign. It is as follows:

GOVERNOR HENRY'S SECRET INSTRUCTIONS TO GEN. CLARK.†
Virginia Sct. In Council, Williamsburg, Jan. 2, 1778.

Lieut.-Colonel George Rogers Clark:

You are to proceed with all convenient speed to raise seven companies of soldiers to consist of fifty men each, officered in the usual manner and armed most properly for the Enterprize, and with this force attack the British post at Kaskasky.

* Now Brownsville, on the river Monongahela. Dillon.

† The fac-simile of the above letter, reduced in size, appears for the first time in the very valuable volumes of the late distinguished congressman, William Hayden English, of Indiana, published by the Bowen-Merrill Company in 1896. The original private letter of instruction of Governor Henry to Colonel Clark, from which the fac-simile above referred to was made, came into the hands of the Indiana Historical Society many years ago, and has not hitherto been rendered for publication. Its printed text, and also Gov. Henry's open letter of instructions to Gen. Clark, also appear in Butler's History of Kentucky, and in Robert Clarke & Co.'s Ohio Historical Valley series, already noted.—H. W. B.

It is conjectured that there are many pieces of Cannon and military Stores to considerable amount at that place, the taking and preservation of which would be a valuable acquisition to the State. If you are so fortunate therefore as to succeed in your expedition, you will take every possible measure to secure the artillery and stores and whatever may advantage the State.

For the transportation of the troops, provisions, &c., down the Ohio, you are to apply to the Commanding officer at Fort Pitt for Boats, and during the whole transaction you are to take especial Care to keep the true Destination of your Forces secret. Its success depends upon this. Orders are therefore given to Capt. Smith to secure the two men from Kaskasky. Similar conduct will be proper in similar cases. It is earnestly desired that you show humanity to such British subjects and other persons as fall in your hand. If the white inhabitants of that post and the neighborhood will give undoubted evidence of their attachment to this State [for it is certain they live within its limits] by taking the test prescribed by law, and by every other way and means in their power; let them be treated as fellow citizens, and their persons and property duly secured; assistance and protection against all enemies whatever shall be afforded them, and the Commonwealth of Virginia is pledged to accomplish it. But if these people will not accede to these reasonable demands, they must feel the miseries of war under the direction of that Humanity that has hitherto distinguished Americans, and which it is expected you will ever consider as the Rule of your Conduct and from which you are in no instance to depart.

The corps you are to command are to receive the pay and allowance of militia and to act under the Laws and Regulations of the State now in force as Militia. The inhabitants at this Post will be informed by you that in case they accede to the offers of becoming Citizens of this Commonwealth, a proper garrison will be maintained among them and every attention bestowed to render their Commerce beneficial, the fairest prospects being opened to the Dominions of both France and Spain.

It is in contemplation to establish a post near the mouth of Ohio. Cannon will be wanted to fortify it. Part of those at Kaskasky will be easily brought thither or otherwise secured as circumstances will make necessary.

You are to apply to General Hand [at Pittsburgh] for powder and lead necessary for this Expedition. If he can't supply it the person who has that which Capt. Lynn brot from Orleans can. Lead was sent to Hampshire by my orders and that may be delivered you. Wishing you success, I am, Sir,

Your h'ble Serv't,

P. HENRY.

"Being now in the country where all arrangements were to be made, I appointed Capt. William Harrod, and many other officers to the recruiting service; and contracted for flour and other stores that I wanted.

"I received information from Captain [Leonard] Helm, that several gentlemen took pains to counteract his interest in recruiting, as no such service was known of by the Assembly. Consequently he had to send to the Governor to get his conduct ratified. I found, also, opposition to our interest in the Pittsburgh country.

"As the whole was divided into violent parties between the Virginians and Pennsylvanians, respecting territory, the idea of men being raised for the State of Virginia affected the vulgar of the one party; and, as my real instructions were kept concealed, and only an instrument from the Governor, written designedly for deception, was made public, wherein I was authorized to raise men for the defence of Kentucky, many gentlemen of both parties conceived it to be injurious to the public interest to draw off men at so critical a moment for the defence of a few detached inhabitants, who had better be removed, &c.

“These circumstances caused some confusion in the recruiting service. On the 29th of March, I received a letter from Major Smith, by express, informing me that he had raised four companies on Holston, to be marched immediately to Kentucky, agreeably to his orders; and an express from Kentucky informed me that they had gained considerable strength since I left that quarter. This information of four companies being raised, with Bowman’s and Helm’s, which I knew were on their way to join me at Red Stone, caused me to be more easy respecting recruits than otherwise I should have been.

“The officers only got such as had friends in Kentucky, or those induced by their own interest and desire to see the country. Meeting with several disappointments, it was late in May before I could leave the Red Stone settlement, with those companies, and a considerable number of families and private adventurers. Taking in my stores at Pittsburgh and Wheeling; I proceeded down the river with caution.”

CHAPTER VII.

On arriving with his forces at the Falls of the Ohio, Colonel Clark took possession of an island [Corn Island] which contained about seven acres. He divided this island among a small number of families, for whose protection he constructed some light fortifications.

Of the four companies that were recruited by Major Smith, on the Holston, only one had arrived in Kentucky; and when Clark disclosed to the troops his daring designs against Post Vincennes and Kaskaskia, he was deserted by the greater part of that company. Another obstacle interfered with his plans. He found that the settlers of Kentucky, owing to the hostile temper of the Indians, could not at that time hazard a material diminution of the strength of their forts by joining the expedition under his command.*

The memoir of Clark proceeds: "On the [24th] of June, 1778, we left our little island, and run about a mile up the river in order to gain the main channel; and shot the falls at the very moment of the sun being in a great eclipse, which caused various conjectures among the superstitious. As I knew that spies were kept on the river, below the towns of the Illinois, I had resolved to march part of the way by land; and of course left the whole of our baggage, except as much as would equip us in an Indian mode.

"The whole of our force, after leaving such as was judged not competent to the expected fatigue, consisted only of four companies, commanded by Captain John

* From Dillon.

Montgomery, Joseph Bowman, Leonard Helms, and William Harrod. My force being so small to what I expected, owing to the various circumstances already mentioned, I found it necessary to alter my plans of operation. As Post Vincennes of this time was a town of considerable force, consisting of near four hundred militia, with an Indian town adjoining, and great numbers continually in the neighborhood, and in the scale of Indian affairs of more importance than any other, I had thought of attacking it first; but now found that I could by no means venture near it.

“I resolved to begin my career in the Illinois where there were more inhabitants, but scattered in different villages, and less danger of being immediately overpowered by the Indians; in case of necessity we could probably make our retreat to the Spanish side of the Mississippi; but if successful, we might pave our way to the possession of Post Vincennes.

“I had fully acquainted myself that the French inhabitants in those western settlements had great influence among the Indians in general, and were more beloved by them than any other Europeans—that their commercial intercourse was universal throughout the western and northwestern countries—and that the governing interest on the lakes was mostly in the hands of the English, who were not much beloved by them. These, and many other ideas similar thereto, caused me to resolve, if possible, to strengthen myself by such train of conduct, as might probably attach the French inhabitants to our interest, and give us influence at a greater distance than the country we were aiming for.

“These were the principles that influenced my future conduct; and, fortunately, I had just received a letter from Colonel Campbell,* dated Pittsburgh, informing me of the contents of the treaties† between France and America. As I [Clark] intended to leave the Ohio at Fort Massac, three leagues below the Tennessee, I landed on a small island in the mouth of that river, in order to prepare for the march. In a few hours after, one John Duff and a party of hunters coming down the river, were brought to the island by our boats. They were men formerly from the states, and assured us of their happiness in joining the adventure. * *

“They had been but lately from Kaskaskia, and were able to give us all the intelligence we wished. They said that Governor Abbott had lately left Post Vincennes, and gone to Detroit on some business of importance—that Mr. Rochblave commanded at Kaskaskia, &c.—that the militia was kept in good order, and spies on the Mississippi—and that all hunters, both Indians and others, were ordered to keep a good lookout for the Rebels—that the fort was kept in good order, as an asylum, &c.—but they believed the whole to proceed more from the fondness of parade than the expectation of a visit—that, if they received timely notice of us, they would collect and give us a warm reception, as they were taught to harbor a most horrid idea of the barbarity of Rebels, especially the Virginians; but, that

* The later Col. William Linn was the messenger.—H. W. B.

† “On the 6th of February, 1778, France acknowledged the independence of the United States, and concluded a treaty of amity and commerce, and a treaty of alliance with the new Republic. The British ministry considered these acts equivalent to a declaration of war by France against Great Britain. The first article of the Treaty of Alliance between the United States and France was fixed in these words:

“Art. I. If war should break out between France and Great Britain during the continuance of the present war between the United States and England, his Majesty and the United States shall make it a common cause, and aid each other mutually with their good offices, their counsels and their forces, according to the exigence of conjunctures, as becomes good and faithful allies.”

This treaty of Alliance was annulled by an act of Congress on the 7th of July, 1796.—Dillon.

if we could surprise the place, which they were in hopes we might, they made no doubt of our being able to do as we pleased—that they hoped to be received as partakers in the enterprise, and wished us to put full confidence in them, and they would assist the guides in conducting the party. This was agreed to, and they proved valuable men.

“The acquisition to us was great, as I had no intelligence from these posts, since the spies I sent twelve months past. But no part of their information pleased me more than that of the inhabitants viewing us as more savage than their neighbors, the Indians. I was determined to improve upon this, if I was fortunate enough to get them into my possession; as I conceived the greater the shock I could give them at first, the more sensibly would they feel my lenity, and become more valuable friends. This I conceived to be agreeable to human nature, as I had observed it in many instances. Having everything prepared, we moved down to a little gully a small distance above Massac, in which we concealed our boats, and set out a northwest course.

“The weather was favorable; in some parts water was scarce, as well as game; of course we suffered drought and hunger, but not to excess. On the third day John Saunders, our principal guide, appeared confused; and we soon discovered that he was totally lost, without there was some other cause of his present conduct. I asked him various questions, and from his answers I could scarcely determine what to think of him; whether or not that he was lost, or that he wished to deceive us. * * *

“The cry of the whole detachment was that he was a traitor. He begged that he might be suffered to go some distance into a plain that was in full view to try to make some discovery whether or not he was right. I told him he might go; but that I was suspicious of him from his

30
20 10
0
10 20 30

River Front, opposite
Kaskaskia

Scale $1\frac{1}{2}$ in = 100 ft
 Earth work lines of old Ft Gage
 On the high bluff East & across the river from Kaskaskia Ill
 As surveyed by H.W. Beckwith & Son
 April - - 1895

conduct—that from the first day of his being employed he always said he knew the way well—that there was now a different appearance—that I saw the nature of the country was such that a person once acquainted with it, could not in a short time forget it—that a few men should go with him to prevent his escape—and that if he did not discover and take us into the Hunter's Road that led from the east into Kaskaskia, which he had frequently described, I would have him immediately put to death; which I was determined to have done; but after a search of an hour or two he came to a place he knew perfectly; and we discovered that the poor fellow had been, as they call it, bewildered.

“On the 4th of July, in the evening, we got within a few miles of the town, where we lay until near dark, keeping spies ahead, after which we commenced our march, and took possession of a house wherein a large family lived, on the bank of the Kaskaskia river, about three quarters of a mile above the town. Here we were informed that the people a few days before were under arms, but had concluded that the cause of the alarm was without foundation; and that at that time there was a great number of men in town, but that the Indians had generally left it, and at present all was quiet. We soon procured a sufficiency of vessels, the more in ease to convey us across the river.

[We leave Clark's memoir and quote from the Mason letter as follows.—EDITOR.]

“On the evening of the 4th of July,” continues Clark, “we got within three miles of the town of Kaskaskia, having a river of the same name to cross to the town. After making ourselves ready for anything that might happen, we marched after night to a farm that was on the same side of the river about a mile above the town, took the family prisoners, and found plenty of boats to cross in, and in two hours transported ourselves to the other shore with the greatest silence.

"I learned that they had some suspicion of being attacked, and had made some preparations, keeping out spies, but they, making no discoveries, had got off their guard. I immediately divided my little army into two divisions; ordered one to surround the town, with the other I broke into the fort, secured the governor, Mr. Rochblave, in fifteen minutes had every street secured, sent runners through the town, ordering the people, on pain of death, to keep close to their houses, which they observed, and before daylight had the whole town disarmed."

[The Clark-Mason letter.—H.. W. B.]

The memoir proceeds as follows:

"With one of the divisions I marched to the Fort, and ordered the other two into different quarters of the town. If I met with no resistance, at a certain signal, a general shout was to be given, and certain parts were to be immediately possessed; and men of each detachment, who could speak the French language, were to run through every street and proclaim what had happened; and inform the inhabitants that every person that appeared in the streets would be shot down. This disposition had its desired effect.

"In a very little time we had complete possession and every avenue was guarded, to prevent any escape to give the alarm to the other villages in case of opposition.

"Various orders had been issued not worth mentioning. I don't suppose greater silence ever reigned among the inhabitants of a place than did at this at present; not a person to be seen, not a word to be heard by them for some time, but designedly, the greatest noise kept up by our troops through every quarter of the town, and patrols continually the whole night round it; as intercepting any

Negative by H. W. Beckwith

KASKASKIA IN. 1895.

Taken from south-west angle of the Fort across the river.

Negative by H. W. Beckwith

South slope of Fort looking East.

Negative by H. W. Beckwith

East slope of Fort, looking south

Negative by H. W. Beckwith

PART OF EAST SLOPE OF FORT.
Looking to the south-east angle of the Fort.

Negative by H. W. Beckwith

View from the north-east, looking south-westerly over the interior of the Fort.

Negative by H. W. Beckwith

Depression and debris of the cellar underneath the barracks in the Fort.

information was a capital object; and in about two hours the whole of the inhabitants were disarmed, and informed that if one was taken attempting to make his escape he should be immediately put to death."

When Colonel Clark, by the use of various bloodless means, had raised the terror of the French inhabitants to a painful height, he surprised them and won their confidence and friendship, by performing unexpectedly, several acts of justice and generosity. On the morning of the 5th of July, a few of the principal men were arrested, and put in irons. Soon afterward, M. Gibault,* the priest of the village, accompanied by five or six aged citizens waited on Clark, and said that the inhabitants expected to be separated, perhaps never to meet again, and they begged to be permitted to assemble in their church, and there to take leave of each other.

Clark mildly told the priest that he had nothing to say against his religion; that it was a matter which Americans left for every man to settle with his God; that the people might assemble in their church, if they would; but that they must not venture out of town. Nearly the whole French population assembled at the church. The houses were deserted by all who could leave them; and Clark gave orders to prevent any soldiers from entering the vacant buildings.

After the close of the meeting at the church, a deputation, consisting of M. Gibault and several other persons, waited on Clark, and said "that their present situation was the fate of war, and that they could submit to the loss of their property; but they solicited that they might not be separated from their wives and children; and that some clothes and provisions might be allowed for their support."

* The Reverend Pierre, i. e., Peter Gibault, was "Vicar General of the Bishop of Quebec for Illinois and the adjoining counties" during the British rule, and the secular priest of the French and Indians, not only at the Illinois villages, but of Vincennes as well. His home residence at Cahokia, Illinois. Being a subject of Great Britain, his later aid to, and open sympathy for the success of General Clark was a risk that invited his own arrest for treason.—H. W. B.

Clark feigned surprise at this request, and abruptly exclaimed, "Do you mistake us for savages? I am almost certain you do, from your language! Do you think that Americans intend to strip women and children, or take the bread out of their mouths? My countrymen," said Clark, "disdain to make war upon helpless innocence. It was to prevent the horrors of Indian butchery upon our own wives and children, that we have taken arms and penetrated into this remote stronghold of British and Indian barbarity; and not the despicable prospect of plunder.

"That now the king of France has united his powerful arms with those of America, the war would not, in all probability, continue long; but the inhabitants of Kaskaskia were at liberty to take which side they pleased, without the least danger to either property or families. Nor would their religion be any source of disagreement; as all religions were regarded with equal respect in the eye of the American law, and that any insult offered it would be immediately punished. And now, to prove my sincerity, you will please inform your fellow citizens, that they are quite at liberty to conduct themselves as usual, without the least apprehension.

"I am now convinced, from what I have learned since my arrival among you, that you have been misinformed, and prejudiced against us by British officers; and your friends who are in confinement shall immediately be released." In a few moments after the delivery of this speech, the gloom that rested on the minds of the inhabitants of Kaskaskia had passed away. The news of the treaty of alliance between France and the United States, and the influence of the magnanimous conduct of Clark, induced the French villagers to take the oath of allegiance to the State of Virginia. Their arms were restored to them, and a volunteer company of French militia joined a detachment under Captain Bowman, when that officer was despatched to take possession of Cahokia. The inhabitants of this small village, on hearing what had taken place at Kaskaskia, readily took the oath of allegiance to Virginia.

The memoir of Clark proceeds: "Post Vincennes never being out of my mind, and from some things that I had learned I had some reason to suspect that M. Gibault, the priest, was inclined to the American interest previous to our arrival in the country. He had great influence over the people at this period, and Post Vincennes was under his jurisdiction. I made no doubt of his integrity to us. I sent for him, and had a long conference with him on the subject of Post Vincennes.

"In answer to all my queries, he informed me that he did not think it worth while to cause any military preparation to be made at the Falls of the Ohio, for the attack of Post Vincennes, although the place was strong and a great number of Indians in its neighborhood, who, to his knowledge, were generally at war—that Governor Abbott had a few weeks before left the place on some business to Detroit—that he expected that when the inhabitants were fully acquainted with what had passed at the Illinois, and the present happiness of their friends, and made fully acquainted with the nature of the war, that their sentiments would greatly change—that he knew that his appearance there would have great weight, even among the savages—that if it was agreeable to me he would take this business on himself, and had no doubt of his being able to bring that place over to the American interest without my being at the trouble of marching against it—that his business being altogether spiritual, he wished that another person might be charged with the temporal part of the embassy ; but that he would privately direct the whole ; and he named Doctor Lafont [John Baptiste Laffont, a physician living at Kaskaskia], as his associate.

“This was perfectly agreeable to what I had been secretly aiming at for some days. The plan was immediately settled, and the two doctors, with their intended retinue, among whom I had a spy, set about preparing for their journey ; and set out on the 14th of July, with an address to the inhabitants of Post Vincennes, authorizing them to garrison their own town themselves, which would convince them of the great confidence we put in them, &c. All this had its desired effect.

“Mr. Gibault and his party arrived safe, and after their spending a day or two in explaining matters to the people, they universally acceded to the proposal [except a few emissaries left by Mr. Abbott, who immediately left the country], and went in a body to the church, where the oath of allegiance was administered to them in the most solemn manner. An officer was elected, the fort immediately [garrisoned] and the American flag displayed to the astonishment of the Indians, and everything settled far beyond our most sanguine hopes.

“The people here immediately began to put on a new face, and to talk in a different style, and to act as perfect freemen. With a garrison of their own, with the United States at their elbow, their language to the Indians was immediately altered. They began as citizens of the United States, and informed the Indians that their old father, the King of France, was come to life again, and was mad at them for fighting for the English ; that they would advise them to make peace with the Americans as soon as they could, otherwise they might expect the land to be very bloody, &c.

"The Indians began to think seriously; throughout the country this was now the kind of language they generally got from their ancient friends of the Wabash and Illinois. Through the means of their correspondence spreading among the nations, our batteries began now to play in a proper channel. Mr. Gibault and party, accompanied by several gentlemen of Post Vincennes, returned to Kaskaskia, about the first of August, with the joyful news.

"During his absence on this business, which caused great anxiety in me [for without the possession of this post all our views would have been blasted], I was exceedingly engaged in regulating things in the Illinois. The reduction of these posts was the period of the enlistment of our troops. I was at a great loss at this time to determine how to act, and how far I might venture to strain my authority.

"My instructions were silent on many important points, as it was impossible to foresee the events that would take place. To abandon the country, and all the prospects that opened to our view in the Indian department at this time, for the want of instruction in certain cases, I thought would amount to a reflection on government, as having no confidence in me. I resolved to usurp all the authority necessary to carry my points. I had the greater part of our [troops] re-enlisted on a different establishment—commissioned French officers in the country to command a company of the young inhabitants—established a garrison at Cahokia commanded by Captain Joseph Bowman; and another at Kaskaskia commanded by Captain John Williams. Post Vincennes remained in the situation as mentioned.

"Colonel William Linn, who had accompanied us as a volunteer, took charge of a party that was to be discharged on their arrival at the Falls, and orders were sent for the removal of that post to the main land. Captain John Montgomery was despatched to Government with letters. I again turned my attention to Post Vincennes.

"I plainly saw that it would be highly necessary to have an American officer at that post. Captain Leonard Helm appeared calculated to answer my purpose; he was past the meridian of life, and a good deal acquainted with the Indian [disposition]. I sent him to command at that post; and also appointed him agent for Indian affairs in the department of the Wabash. About the middle of August he set out to take possession of his new command.

"An Indian chief called the Tobacco's Son, a Piankeshaw, at this time resided in a village [of Chip-kaw-kay, i. e., Brushwood] adjoining Post Vincennes. This man was called by the Indians "The Grand Door to the Wabash;" and as nothing of consequence was to be undertaken by the league on the Wabash, without his assent, I discovered that to win him was an object of signal importance. I sent him a spirited compliment by Mr. Gibault; he returned it.

"I now, by Captain Helm, touched him on the same spring that I had done the inhabitants, and sent a speech, with a belt of wampum; directing Captain Helm how to manage, if the chief was pacifically inclined, or otherwise. The captain arrived safe at Post Vincennes, and was received with acclamations of the people.

"After the usual ceremony was over he sent for the "Grand Door," and delivered my letter to him. After having it read he informed the captain that he was happy to see him, one of the Big Knife Chiefs,* in this town—it was here that he had joined the English against him; but he confessed that he always thought that they looked gloomy; that as the contents of the letter was a matter of great moment he could not give an answer for some time—that he must collect his counsellors on the subject; and was in hopes the captain would be patient. In short, he put on all the courtly dignity that he was master of; and Captain Helm following his example, it was several days before this business was finished, as the whole proceeding was very ceremonious.

* A name by which the Virginians were early known to the savages, because, being hunters and woodsmen, they carried very large knives.—H. W. B.

“At length the Captain was invited to the Indian council, and informed by the Tobacco that they had maturely considered the case in hand, and had got the nature of the war between the English and us explained to their satisfaction; that, as we spoke the same language and appeared to be the same people, he always thought that he was in the dark as to the truth of it; but now the sky was cleared up; that he found that the Big Knife was in the right—that perhaps if the English conquered they would serve them in the same manner that they intended to serve us—that his ideas were quite changed—and that he would tell all the red people on the Wabash to bloody the land no more for the English; he jumped up, struck his breast, called himself a man and a warrior, said that he was now a Big Knife, and took Captain Helm by the hand.

“His example was followed by all present, and the evening was spent in merriment. Thus ended this valuable negotiation and the saving of much blood. In a short time almost the whole of the various tribes of the different nations on the Wabash, as high as the Ouiatenon, came to Post Vincennes, and followed the example of the Grand Door Chief; and as expresses were continually passing between Captain Helm and myself the whole time of these treaties, the business was settled perfectly to my satisfaction and greatly to the advantage of the public.

“The British interest daily lost ground in this quarter, and in a short time our influence reached the Indians on the River St. Joseph, and the border of Lake Michigan.

“The French gentlemen, at the different posts that we now had possession of, engaged warmly in our interest. They appeared to vie with each other in promoting the business; and through the means of their correspondence, trading among the Indians, and otherwise, in a short time the Indians and various tribes inhabiting the region of Illinois, came in great numbers to Cahokia, in order to make treaties of peace with us. From the information they generally got from the French gentlemen [whom they implicitly believed] respecting us, they were truly alarmed; and, consequently, we were visited by the greater part of them, without any invitation from us; of course we had greatly the advantage, in making use of such language as suited our [interest].

“Those treaties, which commenced about the last of August and continued between three and four weeks, were probably conducted in a way different from any other known in America at that time. I had been always convinced that our general conduct with the Indians was wrong—that inviting them to treaties was considered by them in a different manner to what we expected, and imputed, by them to fear—and that giving them great presents confirmed it. I resolved to guard against this, and I took good pains to make myself acquainted fully with the French and Spanish methods of treating Indians, and with the manners, genius, and disposition of the Indian in general.

“As in this quarter they had not yet been spoiled by us, I was resolved that they should not be. I began the business fully prepared, having copies of the British treaties.”

“At the first great council which was opened at Cahokia, an Indian chief with a Belt of Peace in his hand, advanced to the table at which Colonel Clark was sitting; another chief, bearing the Sacred Pipe of the tribe, went forward to the table; and a third chief then advanced with fire to kindle the pipe. When the pipe was lighted, it was figuratively presented to the heavens, then to the earth, and then to all the good spirits, to witness what was about to be done. After the observance of these forms, the pipe was presented to Clark, and afterwards to every person present. An Indian speaker then addressed the Indians as follows: "Warriors! you ought to be thankful that the Great Spirit has taken pity on you, and cleared the sky, and opened your ears and hearts, so that you may hear the truth. We have been deceived by bad birds flying through the land; but we will take up the bloody hatchet no more against the Big Knife; and we hope as the Great Spirit has brought us together for good, as he is good, that we may be received as friends, and that the Belt of Peace may take the place of the Bloody Belt."

"I informed them," says Clark, "that I had paid attention to what they had said; and that on the next day I would give them an answer, when I hoped the ears and hearts of all people would be open to receive the truth which should be spoken without deception. I advised them to keep themselves prepared for the result of this day, on which, perhaps, their very existence as a nation depended, &c., and dismissed them—not suffering any of our people to shake hands with them, as peace was not yet concluded—telling them it was time enough to give the hand when the heart could be given also.

"They replied that 'such sentiments were like men who had but one heart, and did not speak with a double tongue.' The next day I delivered them the following speech:

"Men and warriors! pay attention to my words: You informed me yesterday, that the Great Spirit had brought us together; and that you hoped, as he was good, that it would be for good. I have also the same hope, and expect that each party will strictly adhere to whatever may be agreed upon—whether it be peace or war—and henceforward prove ourselves worthy of the attention of the Great Spirit. I am a man and a warrior; not a counsellor. I carry war in my right hand; and in my left, peace. I am sent by the Great Council of the Big Knife, and their friends, to take possession of all the towns possessed by the English in this country; and to watch the motions of the Red People; to bloody the paths of those who attempt to stop the course of the river; but to clear the roads from us to those who desire to be in peace—that the women and children may walk in them without meeting anything to strike their feet against.

“I am ordered to call upon the Great Fire for Warriors enough to darken the land, and that the Red People may hear no sound but of birds who live on blood. I know there is a mist before your eyes. I will dispel the clouds, that you may clearly see the cause of the war between the Big Knife and the English; then you may judge for yourselves which party is in the right; and if you are warriors, as you profess to be, prove it by adhering faithfully to the party which you shall believe to be entitled to your friendship; and do not show yourselves to be squaws.

“The Big Knives are very much like the Red People; they don't know how to make blankets, and powder, and cloth. They buy these things from the English, from whom they sprung. They live by making corn, hunting, and trade, as you and your neighbors, the French, do. But the Big Knives daily getting more numerous, like the trees in the woods, the land became poor, and hunting scarce; and having but little to trade with, the women began to cry at seeing their children naked, and tried to learn how to make clothes for themselves. They soon made blankets for their husbands and children; and the men learned to make guns and powder.

“In this way we did not want to buy so much from the English. They then got mad [at] us, and sent strong garrisones through our country; as you see they have done among you on the lakes, and among the French. They would not let our women spin, nor our men make powder, nor let us trade with anybody else. The English said we should buy everything from them; and, since we had got saucy, we should give two bucks for a blanket, which we used to get for one; we should do as they pleased; and they killed some of our people to make the rest fear them. This is the truth, and the real cause of the war between the English and us, which did not take place for some time after this treatment.

“But our women became cold and hungry, and continued to cry. Our young men got lost for want of counsel to put them in the right path. The whole land was dark. The old men held down their heads for shame; because they could not see the sun; and thus there was mourning for many years over the land.

“At last the Great Spirit took pity on us, and kindled a Great Council Fire that never goes out, at a place called Philadelphia. He then stuck down a post, and put a war tomahawk by it, and went away. The sun immediately broke out; the sky was blue again; and the old men held up their heads, and assembled at the fire. They took up the hatchet—sharpened it—and put it into the hands of our young men—ordering them to strike the English as long as they could find one on this side of the great waters. The young men immediately struck the war post, and blood was shed.

“In this way the war began; and the English were driven from one place to another until they got weak; and then they hired you Red People to fight for them; the Great Spirit got angry at this and caused your old father, the French King, and other great nations to join the Big Knives, and fight with them against all their enemies.

"So the English have become like deer in the woods; and you may see that it is the Great Spirit that has caused your waters to be troubled, because you have fought for the people he was mad with. If your women and children should now cry, you must blame yourselves for it, and not the Big Knife.

"You can now judge who is in the right. I have already told you who I am. Here is a Bloody Belt and a White one; take which you please. Behave like men; and don't let your being surrounded by the Big Knives, cause you to take up the one belt with your hands, while your hearts take up the other.

"If you take the bloody path you shall leave the town in safety, and may go and join your friends, the English. We will then try like warriors, who can put the most stumbling blocks in each other's way, and keep our clothes longest stained with blood. If, on the other hand, you should take the path of peace, and be received as brothers to the Big Knives with their friends, the French, should you then listen to bad birds that may be flying through the land, you will no longer deserve to be counted as men; but as creatures with two tongues, that ought to be destroyed without listening to any thing you might say. As I am convinced you never heard the truth before, I do not wish you to answer before you have taken time to counsel. We will, therefore, part this evening; and when the Great Spirit shall bring us together again, let us speak and think like men with but one heart and one tongue."

"The next day after this Speech, a new fire was kindled with more than usual ceremony; an Indian Speaker came forward and said, 'They ought to be thankful that the Great Spirit had taken pity on them, and opened their ears and their hearts to receive the truth. He had paid great attention to what the Great Spirit had put into my heart to say to them.

“They believed the whole to be the truth; as the Big Knives did not speak like any other people they had ever heard. They now saw they had been deceived, and that the English had told them lies, and that I had told them the truth—just as some of their old men had always told them. They now believed that we were in the right; and as the English had forts in their country, they might, if they got strong enough, want to serve the Red People as they had treated the Big Knives.

“The Red People ought therefore, to help us; and they had with a cheerful heart taken up the Belt of Peace, and spurned that of war. They were determined to hold the former fast; and would have no doubt of our friendship, from the manner of our speaking—so different from that of the English. They would now call in their warriors, and throw the tomahawk into the river, where it could never be found. They would suffer no more bad birds to fly through the land, disquieting the women and children. They would be careful to smooth the roads for their brothers, the Big Knives, whenever they might wish to come and see them. Their friends should hear of the good talk I had given them; and they hoped I would send chiefs among them, with my eyes, to see myself that they were men and strictly adhered to all they had said at this great fire, which the Great Spirit had kindled at Cahokia, for the good of all people who would attend it.”

“The sacred pipe was again kindled, and presented, figuratively, to the heavens and the earth, and to all the Good Spirits as witness of what had been done. The Indians and the white men then closed the council, by smoking the pipe, and shaking hands. With no material variation, either of the forms that were observed, or of the speeches that were made at this council, Colonel Clark and his officers, concluded treaties of peace with the Piankeshaws, Ouiatenons, Kickapoos, Illinois, Kaskaskias, Peorias, and branches of some other tribes that inhabited the country between Lake Michigan and the River Mississippi.”*

Governor Henry soon received intelligence of the successful progress of the expedition under the command of Clark. The French inhabitants of the village of Kaskaskia, Cahokia, and Post Vincennes, having taken the oath of allegiance to the State of Virginia, the General Assembly of that State, in October, 1778, passed an act which contained the following provisions, viz.:

“All the citizens of the Commonwealth of Virginia who are already settled or shall hereafter settle on the western side of the Ohio, shall be included in a distinct county, which shall be called Illinois County; and the Governor of this commonwealth, with the advice of the council, may appoint a county lieutenant or commander-in-chief in that county, during pleasure, who shall appoint and commission so many deputy commandants, militia officers, and commissaries, as he shall think proper in the different districts, during pleasure; all of whom, before they enter into office, shall take the oath of fidelity to this commonwealth, and the oath of office, according to the form of their own religion.

“And all civil officers to which the inhabitants have been accustomed, necessary for the preservation of the peace, and the administration of justice, shall be chosen by a majority of the citizens in their respective districts, to be convened for that purpose, by the county lieutenant or commandant, or his deputy, and shall be commissioned by the said county lieutenant or commandant-in-chief.”

Before the provisions of this law were carried into effect, Henry Hamilton, the British Lieutenant Governor of Detroit, collected an army consisting of about thirty regulars, fifty French volunteers, and four hundred Indians. With this force he passed down the River Wabash, and took possession of Post Vincennes on the 15th of December, 1778. No attempt was made by the population to defend the town. Captain Helm* was taken and detained as a prisoner, and a number of the French inhabitants were disarmed.

* Dillon.

* By Dillon. The following anecdote is related in Butler's History of Kentucky, p. 30: "When Governor Hamilton entered Vincennes there were but two Americans there, Capt. Helm, the commandant, and one Henry. The latter had a cannon well charged and placed in the open fort gate, while Helm stood by it with a lighted match in his hand. When Hamilton and his troops got within hailing distance, the American officer in a loud voice cried out, 'Halt..' This stopped the movements of Hamilton, who, in reply, demanded a surrender of the garrison. Helm exclaimed, with an oath, 'No man shall enter until I know the terms.' Hamilton answered, 'You shall have the honors of war,' and then the fort was surrendered with its garrison of one officer and one private."

BY THE EDITOR.

The following seems to be the last official letter of Sir Henry Hamilton while on his way from Detroit with a military force to recover Vincennes from the rule of General Clark. It is written Dec. 4, 1778, from Ouiattanon [Wea-ta-non].

By another document from the Haldimand collection further on herein, this so-called Fort stood "70 yards" from the westerly bank of the Wabash, and some 18 miles below the mouth of the Tippecanoe River, which would place it six or seven miles below, and on the other side of the river from La Fayette, Indiana.

It was not a fort in the sense we use that word, but a French phrase, often, as here, applied to a trade-house inclosed by a palisade. It was a custom to assign such places to favorites, or as a reward for good service to French military officers, with whom the trade of the neighboring savages was a prized monopoly. For this privilege they were to make and keep the good will of the natives. In case a defection of either was feared a few soldiers were sometimes added to dignify the claim, and keep "the English" colonial venturers at a distance.

For lack of better and fuller data as to such quasi political posts the Editor here was misled, and, drawing from the material then at hand, in a volume he published in 1879, echoed the old historic fiction of a "chain of forts," by way of the Maumee and Wabash, that "connected" the French province of Canada with that of Louisiana.

The new matter found and given out by the Editor here in the work referred to, was freely used by later authors without giving credit to the source. They also copied the writers' errors without notice. With the "brief" of a painstaking lawyer in hand, one may throw the argument aside, easily quote the authorities cited as the result of his own research, with little risk of a charge of plagiarism.

The Ouiatenon "stockade" has long posed in western history as a "Fort." We let some of those who were better informed describe it and tell why it was built and retained.

George Croghan, a veteran trader of western Pennsylvania, taken in June, 1765, to this so-called Fort Ouiatenon says "This post has always been a very considerable trading place. The great plenty of furs taken in this country induced the French to establish it, which was the first on the Oubache [Wabash] and by a very advantageous trade they have been very richly repaid for their labour."

While on his way from Pittsburgh to Fort Chartres of the Illinois as the agent of Great Britain, to reconcile the Indians to allow it to occupy that military work and country, then but lately given up by France, Croghan was captured on the lower Ohio near Shawneetown by a war party of young Kickapoos who carried him to their town of Mat-o-cush some six miles below Post Ouiatenon. And from thence on June 23, 1765, up to the latter place.

He adds that on his arrival there, "several of the Ouiatensons [Weas of the Town across the river] with whom I had been formerly acquainted came to visit me and seemed greatly concerned at what had happened," etc. "They [also] said that the French [of the place, well advised of the purpose of his mission] had spirited up this [war] party to go and strike us." At this time he says "About fourteen French families were living in the fort."* Croghan was for many years an inveterate poacher on the beaver warrens of the French in this quarter. Hence they had no liking for him. We leave it to Sir Henry Hamilton, in his letter, which follows here, to describe the place and its mixed French and Indian habitants, as they appeared to him thirteen years later.

* His dally "Journal" of this mission.

On its other side the Wabash skirts the Wea prairie several miles. Along this margin were as many Wea Indian villages or lesser groups of lodges. The one lowest down was opposite the present town of Independence, in Warren County, on the site of the old Kickapoo village of Mat-o-cush above referred to. At the upper end of the plains, "at the head of the bluff" [or abrupt hill] near the mouth of Wea creek, was the historic Wea-Mi-ami town of Ouiatenon.

In his reminiscence as a pioneer settler and school teacher of this section, the late Sanford Cox, in his little volume, says "his father's farm was on [a part of] the ground once covered with this Indian town. Here "the blades of butcher knives, tomahawks, brass kettles, gun-barrels," etc., were found; that he himself had "found as high as six or eight Indian knives in an hour's search, soon after they moved on the farm; and that after the rust was taken off, the knives proved of excellent metal, having lost none of their temper by long exposure to the prairie fires and weather."

Over this ground, so numerous "were Indian beads that may have graced the neck of some Indian queen or maids of honor;" that the "growing weeds, or blades of grass shooting up through the eye" of these gems bore many of them "higher and higher" to glitter in the sun. No wonder that the writer's "little sister and a neighbor girl" each with such tufts in their hands, came running into the cabin to exclaim, "ain't this a rich country, where 'even the grass and weeds grow beads?'"*

In the absence of other proof differently, it may be well assumed that it was "the Bluff [near and] below the mouth of the Wea," referred to by Cox and was the same high hill" whereon the still more ancient "fort" and "village" of "Ouataton" was "situated," as described in the French Memoir of 1718. The outlook here fills that early description as no other point of view could have done. "From the summit of this elevation," says the Memoir, nothing is visible to the eye but [the Wea] prairies" [westerly down the river and more south towards Crawfordsville] "full of buffaloes."

We now proceed with Hamilton's letter.—H. W. B.

* Cox's "Early Settlement of the Wabash Valley." Gen. Scott and Wilkinson's accounts of their expeditions against these towns in 1791.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES.

B 122

HALDIMAND COLLECTION

Page 228.

[HAMILTON TO HALDIMAND.]

OUIATTANON, Dec. 4th, 1778.

SIR:

Since my leaving Detroit I have been joined on the way by savages from different quarters, the Ottawas of the Grande Glaize [The Au Glaize River that joins the Maumee at Defiance, Ohio], the Poutawattamis of St. Joseph [of Lake Michigan], the Miamis of Riviere a l' anguille [Eel River.] [The village of these Eel River Miamis was some six miles above the junction of the stream with the Wabash at Logansport, Indiana], the Poutawattamies Thipicano [The "Tippi-con" Miamis of the Tippecanoe River], the Ouiattanons, and lastly the Quiquapoos [the Kickapoos]. Their number is small, not amounting to 200, but I should be sorry to have the number increased as the expense of provision must be considerable and this wretched place little capable of furnishing a supply.

We are told they are in a miserable condition at Post Vincennes for want of provisions, their last year's crop having sprouted on the ground, they have sent to the Illinois for seed grain.

The savages are on good terms with each other, which is expressed at their meetings—the account of the strength of the Rebels varies so much, that I am at a loss to form a judgment of it. I do not, however, believe it to be such as we have the least cause to dread.

Yesterday evening some people from Detroit joined us. By a letter from thence, I learn that Mr. [John] Macomb, a merchant of that place, has forwarded some Indian goods to the Miamis [the "Miamis" village "Ke-ki-ong-gay," says Croghan, the trader, was on both sides of the River St. Joseph's about a quarter of a mile above where it falls into the Maumee, on the east side of which stands a stockade fort, somewhat ruinous"] agreeable to my directions—notwithstanding any orders that may have been given for the furtherance of his merchandise from Deer Island, he has fifty batteaux loads at that place.

I take the liberty of mentioning this, as the supplying all the Indians within my reach, must now depend greatly on the speedy arrival of goods at Detroit early in the spring. We are nearly exhausted at present, though we do our best to content them at little expense. Arms in particular there is a great demand for.

By what I can learn, if there be any fort at the Falls of the Ohio [at Louisville, Kentucky] it is very insignificant in its present state, but if it may present, I shall be better acquainted with it.

The Fort [as it is called] at this place [Ouiatenon] is a miserable stockade surrounding a dozen of miserable cabins, called houses. The Indians hereabout are numerous, there appear 96 of their cabins, which allowing five men to a house makes the number 480.

The French settlers are few and as inconsiderable as debauchery and idleness can make them. As to their attachments it is difficult to pronounce—interest I believe is the grand monarch with them—however, I have formally administered the oath of fidelity to His Britannic Majesty and left in the care of one honest man, the St. George's

Flag to be hoisted on Sundays and holidays, giving the Indians to understand it was a signal of His Majesty having resumed his rights and again taking them under his protection.

I tore in full council the grant [or rather deed of sale] of the Peankashaws telling the assistants that busyness had been transacted contrary to the express orders of the King and without the consent of the principal chief concerned—that they were now to consider these lands as restored to them by order of His Majesty.

[The Pyankeshaws of Vincennes, with those of their upper tribe on the Vermilion River by deed of August —, 1775, granted a body of land forty leagues wide on the east side, by a width of thirty leagues on the west side of the Wabash, to John Murray, 4th Earl of Dunmore, Governor of Virginia at the time—he is named in the grant as the honorable “Augustus, Earl of Dunmore, Governor of the Colony of Virginia”—“William and Daniel Murray”—kinsmen—“his son John Murray, merchants in the Illinois country,” and a number of other associates of London, Baltimore, Annapolis, Philadelphia and Quebec.

The grant “began at the mouth of Cat River fifty-two leagues above Post Vincennes, thence down to the place called Point Coupe [the “cut off”] about twelve leagues above Post Vincennes,” and begins again at the mouth of White River and continues then on down both sides of the meanders of the Wabash to its confluence with the Ohio.

The deed was drawn by the Pyankeshaw chiefs, and acknowledged all in due English form, and must have conveyed a vast acreage in Indiana and Illinois. It was ignored by the British commandant at Fort Chartres and later, by the United States, as it was by Lieut. Governor Hamilton, above, on behalf of Great Britain.—H. W. B.]

As to Mr. Celoron I have made all enquiries in my power, but can find no excuse for his extraordinary conduct—unless his being deserted by common sense and common courage can plead his cause. He might have stayed in perfect security a few leagues from this place where he might have found that his fears were entirely groundless, and that he had fled from a shadow.

Mr. Le Gras, a French trader [of Vincennes] has accepted a major's commission from the Rebel Officer commanding at the Illinois.

[General Clark's account of this affair is that Monsieur de Celoron, a British Indian agent of the Wea section of the Wabash, is that the former "hurt our growing interest so much" that "I resolved, if possible, to take him off." Accordingly "I sent a detachment of men from Kaskaskia under Lieutenant [John] Bailey to join Captain [Leonard] Helm at St. Vincent to surprise him [Celoron]. The Captain with about one hundred men, part French Militia and Indians set out [up the Wabash] by water."

"The agent, hearing of it, collected a few savages from the neighborhood that he could trust, to give battle; but a few days before Helm's arrival Mr. Celoron thought best to make his escape [in the night], leaving his friendly Indians in the fort [Ouiatenon] who, being in a grand council, to determine what was best to be done, neglected to shut the gate, or keep sentinels—not supposing an enemy so near.

While in the height of their deliberation Captain Helm, Bailey and his small party entered the Fort before they were apprised, and ordered them to surrender, about forty in number being made prisoners. The captain made a valuable treaty and gave them their liberty. This stroke completed our interest on the Wabash."*]

A letter from Mr. Gray, the deputy sheriff at Montreal, acquaints me that some legal process has been commenced against Mr. Dejean for acting under my direction in regard to criminal matters. I beg leave to recommend him to your Excellency's protection as a man who has created enemies by doing his duty, and who has had the misfortune to fall from good circumstances into indigence.

* Gen. Clark in letter to George Mason of Nov. 19, 1779.—H. W. B.

I hope I shall alone be responsible for any malversation of his, as he has only acted by my order, and I have had reason to be satisfied with his behavior as an honest man and loyal subject.

Should any complaints against myself be lodged judicially, I am perfectly at ease, persuaded your Excellency will allow me to vindicate my conduct without encountering the Chicane of the Law.

We are much at a loss for certain intelligence respecting a war with foreign Powers. Your Excellency's orders and Instructions will be waited for impatiently, as by them I shall regulate my proceedings in this country.

From what I can at present judge it will be practicable to establish a post and build a fort in any part of the Indian country eastward of the Mississippi as far as the Ohio, but for this, aids of men and merchandise will be necessary to support what may be undertaken and to keep up the good disposition of the Indians.

Those of this nation [the Weas] have promised to raise all their warriors next spring, and to spread themselves in all directions on the frontiers. I have recommended to them the example of the Lake Indians for courage and humanity.

I cannot pretend to acquaint your Excellency with the steps I shall take after my leaving this place, which will be in a few hours hence—the rigor of the season, which has in some places frozen the river quite across, the delays occasioned by the repairs necessary for one craft, and the usual tardiness of the Indians who being in Main Spring, must be attended to, all conspired to the tediousness of the journey. The health and good temper of all the various colors and characters that comprise my little band, give me encouragement to hope the best.

I have the honor to be, Sir,

Your Excellency's most devoted and most obedient servant,

HENRY HAMILTON.

Endorsed: Detroit No. 24—1779.

From Lt. Gov. Hamilton,

Dated at Ouiattanon 4th Dec., 1778.

Rec'd 19th March.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 122, P. 250.

[*HELM TO CLARK.]

DR. SIR—At this time there is an army within three miles of this place. I heard of their comin several days beforehand, I sent spies to find the certainty, the spies being taken prisoners, I never got intelligence till they got within 3 miles of the town, as I had called the militia & had all assurance of their integrity I ordered, at the firing of a Cannon, every man to appear, but I saw but few. Capt. Buseron behaved much to his honour & credit but I doubt the certaint of a certain gent. Excuse haste as the army is in sight. My determination is to defend the Garrison though I have but 21 men but wh't has lef me. I referr you to Mr. Wm. for the test. The army is in three hundred y'd of village. You must think how I feel, not four men that I can really depend on, but am determined to act brave; think of my condition I know its out of my power to defend the town as not one of the militia will take arms thoug before sight of the army no braver men than. Their is a flag at a small distance.

I must conclud

Yr humble servt

LE'OD HELM.

Must stop.

To Col. Clark.

Copy of Capt. Helm's letter commanding for the rebels at Post Vincennes. Enclosed in Lt. Gov. Hamilton's of 18th December. [The original spelling of the letter of Helm is followed.—H. W. B.]

* Capt. Helm was not aware of the approach of the British troops until they had gotten quite near Vincennes. He then wrote to Clark advising him of the fact. The "express" who carried the letter was killed, the letter taken and sent to Detroit. It is a part of the Canadian archives. A copy of it is given above.—H. W. B.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 122, P. 235.

[HAMILTON TO HALDIMAND.]

ST. VINCENNES, Dec. 18, 1778.

SIR—I had the honor in my last letter of acquainting your Excellency with my arrival at Ouiattanon, and proceedings at that place, since when nothing very material happened till the 15th of December, when a reconnoitering party from our camp seized a Lieutenant and three men sent up by the commandant at St. Vincennes with written instructions to watch for the English and to hasten back with his intelligence. The officer acquitted himself but poorly, having taken so little precaution as to be surprised himself.

He was furnished with two commissions, one from Lt. Gov. Abbott, the other from the Commandant for the Congress. He showed no apprehension of being hanged on the next tree, which he certainly deserved, and observing the savages offer'd him no violence, he was presently quite at his ease. From these men I learned that the commandant had permitted almost all his people to return to their homes and depended on the French militia, who had all taken an oath of fidelity to the States.

The 16th I sent off two parties of Indians with each an Indian officer, with instructions to lye on the roads, one on each side of the river, to intercept any intelligence of our arrival that might be sent to the Illinois or the Falls of Ohio. They had orders to keep their stations till they should discover the English Flag flying on the Fort. At the same time, Mr. Hay, appointed to act as Major to the Detroit Militia, was detached with Captain LaMothes' Company of Volunteers, Lieut. Du Vernet of the Royal Artillery with the six Pounder and the Detachment of the King's regiment. He had with him the Interpreters and some Chiefs of the different nations, had our whole force moved forward together it would probably have been impossible to have restrained the savages from destroying the settlement. As it was, the young men took alarm that they should have no share in the busyness and threw themselves hastily into their canoes to follow. They were, however, prevailed on to return. A placart was sent to the inhabitants cautioning them to avoid acting on the offensive, as the consequence must be fatal to them. Major Hay had orders to secure if possible the craft lying before the place, by sending a party in the night in boats to pass the town and stop any people who should attempt to escape by water. If [as I expected] there was not any resistance made and that he found the report of the prisoners to be true, he was to order the St. George's Ensign to be hoisted at the Fort as a signal for our out parties to join. He was likewise empowered to receive submission of the French inhabitants who should lay down their arms. Should he find that reinforcements had joined the Rebels he was to take post to the best advantage, send off express to me and wait my arrival. Having taken these precautions on the 17th, I fell down the river from the distance of seven leagues. It snowed and blew fresh from daybreak till one o'clock, when, to my surprize, I perceived the Rebel Flag still flying at the Fort I concluded they had been reinforced and was confirmed in that belief when I found Lieut. Schieffelin with all our boats lying in a little cove a mile above the town. The men [however half frozen] were in good spirits. I ordered Captains Maisonville and McLeod to land their men, and leaving one man to each boat as a guard, marched slowly towards the place, ordering a flanking party, as the brushwood was thick on our left. When we came in sight of the Town, I posted centries and halted the men. A messenger now came to me from Major Hay desiring I might send him the St. Georges Flag, that his men were advantageously posted and the gun mounted. I ordered the Flag to be carried and went to join him, where I found his men drawn up and the French militia bringing in their arms. Major Hay told me the Commandant was deserted by those he had reposed confidence in, and did not mean to hold out, but that he would not strike his colors till he knew what terms he was to have. The six pounder being ready, I ordered Lieut. Du Vernet to proceed with it towards the Fort, six men with a Sergeant of the King's Regiment marching before with fixed bayonets, followed by the remainder of the Detachment of the Volunteers and Militia, under Major Hay.

As I approached the Gate of the Fort I sent a person forward to summons the commanding officer to deliver his Fort up. He desired by a written paper to know who made the demand. I sent for answer verbally, the King's lieutenant Governor from Detroit, and advanced to the wickett. He came himself [for indeed he was almost alone] and asked what terms he should have, he was answered, humane treatment for himself, that no other terms would be mentioned. He then admitted me, and I instantly posted sentries at the gate to keep out the savages, but while I attended to this some of them got in at two gun ports which had not been secured. I called to the Interpreters and used my best entreaties with the Chiefs, who really did all in their power, but the torrent was too strong for such feeble barriers; they bore down the sentries, and seeing I had posted another at the door of the commandant's quarters, they went to the windows, which they broke and fell to plundering.

The soldiers in the meantime drew up in the fort and were quiet spectators of this scene of disorder, which lasted till the curiosity [I cannot say avarice] of the Savages was gratified. They have generously restored to Captain Helm whatever was required of his private property, some stout horses, 32 lately purchased on the account of the Congress, they found in the fort, which I would not deprive them of, as they have not committed a single act of cruelty, and treated the inhabitants with the humanity which was recommended to them. Had a single shot been fired, probably the settlement would have been destroyed in an hour's time. For some time the command't. hesitated to take down the continental flag, but at length finding it was left for themselves to do, he had it taken down and we hoisted the St. George's, which signal drew in our parties who had taken two prisoners, an American and a Frenchman, who had Capt. Helm's letter to Colonel Clark, commandant [under the Congress] of the eastern Illinois, acquainting him of the arrival of the English at this place and of his situation. I send Your Excellency a copy, as it shews what confidence is to be placed in men who have once violated a sacred engagement.

The 18th I convened the inhabitants in the Church, and having in pretty strong terms painted their poltroonery, ingratitude and perfidy, I read them an oath, to be subscribed only by those who, being sensible of their fault, should publickly acknowledge it, and thereby have some claim to the Protection of Government. The chief people of the place have either in an underhand manner, or openly, embraced the Rebel party—some have been in pay, others registered for service in case of need. The account of their number is subjoined.

The oath, which I read in the Church aloud and explained to them, I told was not forced upon them, but offer'd for the consideration of sober people convinc'd of their fault and who on their repentance might be once again receiv'd under the protection of their King. Humiliating as it is, 158 had signed it in a few days. I on my part swore conditionally. Copies accompany this letter and a list of the companies engaged in the service of the Congress who laid down their arms the 17th. There is nothing flattering to win such submission, but I must say to the praise of the officers and men, they supported the fatigues and hardships of their tedious journey with the utmost chearfulness. As to the poor savages, their not firing a single shot on the day of taking possession of the place, nor injuring or even insulting a single soul excepting a poor Miller, whose house they plundered, being half a league from the Fort, their conduct surely reflects disgrace on some well instructed Christian regulars who have not held Hospitals as Asylums from their fury.

Plan of Fort Sackville

Sir Henry Hamilton's changes of Captain Abbott's work of 1778.

SIR—As I have decided not to send a considerable party to the Illinois this winter, I beg leave to advance my reasons. Late rains have swelled the Rivers so as to make it probable we might be stopp'd so long as to consume our Provision before we got half way the distance, computed 80 leagues, the Fort at this place in no proper state to serve as a Garrison for the winter season, requires all hands to make it tenable. If the Garrison was weakened, a Force might come against it and be joined by the unsteady inhabitants. The Ouabache Indians, who are wavering, require the presence of some force to keep them to their professions. I have the honor to send the plan of the fort, which is a bad stockade. As soon as coverings for the men, provisions and stores are finished I design to alter its form to that of a triangle, having a block house in each angle to project over the picketting of the face of each half bastion. Our own men may carry on the work in the course of the winter, tho' this should be done. The village is built in such a manner [a space of from 100 feet to 200 feet and more being left between house and house] that most of them might be maintained by a dozen men and distress the largest Garrison the Fort could contain. Some Houses are near the Fort and it would be very expensive to purchase them and ruinous to particulars to destroy them. The Garrison might have it in their power, in case of treachery, to burn the whole town, either by making sallies in the night or firing red-hot bullets. Your Excellency will, I hope, excuse my entering into a number of particulars, the necessity of my having positive orders, and my ignorance as to what may be designed in consequence of the recovery of the place, prompt me to trespass on your time.

I have this day, 25th December, sent off an Express to Mr. Stuart with Belts for the Chickasaws and Cherakees and a letter informing Mr. Stuart of the good disposition of the Indians, requiring these to the southward to act vigorously the ensuing spring. If the account I have just received be true it need not be doubted they will viz't. that 400 Shawanese, Delawares, Ottawas and Cherakees, are now assembled at the Cherakee river with design to intercept the rebel boats passing and repassing the Ohio. My Scouts toward Kaskaskias brought me in two Prisoners last night, who inform me that no boats are as yet arrived at the Illinois from Orleans, that the Rebels do not exceed forescore at Kaskaskias and 30 at Cahokia, that some Poutcouattamies were lately arrived there and that there is no discipline observed by the Rebels. This day I sent off two Chiefs of the Poutcouattamies of Detroit, who design to go to Kaskasquias and have promised me to return as soon as they can execute their orders.

Captain Helm remains here on his parole till it be known if the Governor of Virginia permit his exchange for Mr. de Rocheblave, who is at Williamsburgh.

The arrival of a reinforcement of Troops from Detroit early in the spring will enable me to send home the Volunteer Militia who accompanied me hither for the Campaign.

Mr. de Celoron is unfit to remain as commandant at Ouiattanon. His pusillanimity drove him 400 miles from his post and he never waited to have certain accounts, but forged such as his fears or credulity suggested. A Miamis Chief acquainted me with the circumstances this day.

26th December. We have built a barrack of logs and boards capable of receiving 50 men, two companies move in this day. The rest remain tented in the Fort till Lodging can be built for them. We shall have the Well made in 6 days.—Though the frost is pretty severe. The Powder Magazine is finished. This day two Delaware came in, who heard the morning and evening gun as they say at the distance of 3 days' march. They say Belts are gone from the Chickasaas and Cherakees to the Shawanese and Delawares requiring them to forget former quarrels and to unite against the Virginians. The messengers are expected to be here in a few days.

These Delawares confirm the account of a number of Shawanese, Ottawas, Chickasaas and Cherakees being assembled at Cherakee [or, as it is called here, Chickasaa] river. They add that some one employed for His Majesty has invited all the Southern nations to convene at the same place next Spring to come to St. Vincennes to drive out the Rebels and their friends, that the people now there were to intercept the Rebel boats, &c., on the Ohio and Mississippi, that the Rebels were dispossessed lately of a settlement on the Mississippi by the English.

27th. This day a party of Quiquaboos went to war towards Kaskasquias. This makes me easy as to the Indians of this river, who will follow implicitly the example of the Quiquaboos, the most warlike and cruel of them all.

As I had engaged the Volunteer Militia of Detroit for the Campaign, they were this day advertised that they should be allowed to return with 20 days' pay from the date of their discharge.

Two hundred and fifty of the militia of this place appear'd this day under arms with their officers; all of them have taken the oath of allegiance and renounced their late confederacy. They are in course pardon'd.

I hope your Excellency will approve of this act of oblivion. If a sense of interest can move them they will adhere to it. As to courage, honor or gratitude, if they were of the growth of this soil, they would have shewed themselves on the occasion of a handfull of Rebels coming to take away the possessions of three hundred men, used to arms as Hunters and used to the mildest Government under heaven.

It will be a great satisfaction to me to have your Excellency's orders, & as soon as possible to resign to the person you shall send to command here, a power which must be maintained in Credit only by a military force.

I have taken up all the spiritous Liquors in the place, which is better surety for their good behavior, and a more beloved hostage than wife or child.—Tomorrow I shall destroy two Billiard tables, the sources of immorality and dissipation in such a settlement. Could I catch the Priest, Mr. Gibault, who has blown the trumpet of Rebellion for the Americans, I should send him down unhurt to your Excellency, to get the reward for his zeal.

The above mentioned Pouteouattamies whom I sent towards Kaskasquias are returned. The waters being out, as they say, prevented their progress.

They brought in a Frenchman, Prisoner, who had nothing new to tell.

The Scouts of Shawanese and Miamis which are gone towards the Falls of Ohio are not yet returned.

Several Chiefs and Warriors are returned to their Villages, seemingly well satisfied, and have promised to return if it should be necessary.

The diminution of our numbers is a necessary step, as the consumption of Provision during their stay is very considerable.

I will not take up more of your Excellency's time at present, only to request you will excuse the inaccuracy and hurry of my letter.

I have the honor to be, with profound respect, Sir, Your Excellency's most devoted and most humble servant,

HENRY HAMILTON.

St. Vincennes, Dec. 30th, 1778, the express sets out.

Endorsed: Detroit No. 25, 1779. From Lt. Gov. Hamilton with several enclosures from No. 1 to 8. Dated at St. Vincennes the 18th December, 1778. Received the 19th March, 1779.

REMARKS ON LIEUT. GOV. HAMILTON'S LETTER 18TH DEC'R, 1778.

In the 6th page he gives raisons for not sending any body this winter to the Illinois by water, to attack the Rebels. It shows he has no means to go by land.

Before that he speaks of one 6-pounder, but does not return what ammunition he has for said canon.

He finds, page 7, the village a detriment to the Fort now building, and immediately after he thinks it now, by proposing means to destroy said village, but he gives no reason why he does not remove the fort from so an disadvantageous situation. Soon after he seems to want positive orders, and as if he doubted or was ignorant of the use that the retaking of St. Vincennes could be; as if he had been ordered to attack it, and by his own raisons, page 6, he tells the necessity of having it in possession. If he leaves it without keeping a Garrison there, the Rebels will soon oblige him to make another Expedition.

He seems to think next spring to attack the two posts at the Illinois. It is hoped in that case that he will at least take one of the 3 Pounders which he got at St. Vincennes along, so as to make a cross fire, or else the Rebels might easily cover themselves against one cannon, that is, if he expects nothing but stockades to attack. Otherwise a 6 Pounder field piece would not be sufficient, or else he will be obliged to do as they did at Fort Stanwix: Two Royall mortars would be usefull, if he had more artillerymen, than two, he says, page 8, that he has sent two Indians, who were to return as soon as they had executed their orders, but does not mention what orders he gave them. Page 10, he mentions their return and says the water being out, an Indian expression, without explaining it. He mentions an reinforcement next spring from Detroit, but does not mention what number he wants. Neither if he has ordered said reinforcement or if the Commander in Chief is to order. He thinks M. Celoron unfit to remain Commandant at wiagtanon, as if he was their again, which ought to mention, but says he left it in a fright and went 400 miles from it. He speaks, page 9, of Indians who arrived and told they heard a morning and evening gun 3 days' march off. If it is his, he must have a great deal of powder to waste during the winter. Page 10, he requests the Commander In Chief's orders and a person to command to whom he will resign, as if he will neither stay at St. Vincennes nor proceed to the Illinois to reduce the Rebels, which I thought was his design of leaving Detroit. He does not mention from where he expects Provisions next spring, if he has ordered any from Detroit, or if the Commander in Chief is to order any with the reinforcement. Page 8, he intends to send back the militia from Detroit, which went with him for the Campaign, as if he would stay there: by his return the amount to 103 men, so that he expects more for a reinforcement besides the number for a garrison, St. Vincennes. He does not say what number will be wanted to keep the Indians to their professions as he says at page 7.

Endorsed: Remarks on the letter of Lieut. Gov. Hamilton.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 122, P. 233.

[Translation.]

The inhabitants of St. Vincennes are advised and cautioned by these notices to remain quietly, each one with his family, to await the arrival of the Lieut. Governor of Detroit, who is coming with the expectation of re-establishing peace and to secure honest people in their possessions. Those who have been so foolish as to listen to interested persons or to bad advisers and who have recognized their error will be pardoned it. Those on the contrary who have signally failed in their duty and remain attached to the Rebels can expect only the punishment their crimes merit. If the Indians have been peaceable and humane up to the present, it is not probable that they will begin at this hour to act otherwise. There is nothing to fear but for those who have pushed their folly to the extreme.

Major Hay is authorized by me to receive the oath of allegiance to His Brittanic Majesty and to take possession of arms, powder, ammunition and provisions, &c., until further orders. Signed by my Hand this 16th day of December, 1778.

HENRY HAMILTON.

True copy, Lt. Gov. and Superintendant; enclosed in Lt. Col. Hamilton's letter of 18th December; marked Detroit.

EDITORIAL [RESUMING CLARK'S NARRATIVE].

Soon after the reduction of Post Vincennes, the situation of Colonel Clark became perilous. Detached parties of hostile Indians began to appear in the neighborhood of his forces in the Illinois. He ordered Major Bowman to evacuate the fort at Cahokia, and join him at Kaskas-

kia. "I could see," says Clark, "but little probability of keeping possession of the country; as my number of men was too small to stand a siege, and my situation too remote to call for assistance.

"I made all the preparation I possibly could for the attack, and was necessitated to set fire to some of the houses in town, to clear them out of the way. But, on the 29th of January, 1779, in the height of the hurry, a Spanish merchant [Francis Vigo], who had been at Post Vincennes, arrived and gave the following intelligence:

"That Mr. Hamilton had weakened himself by sending his Indians against the frontiers, and to block up the Ohio: that he had not more than eighty men in garrison, three pieces of cannon, and some swivels mounted; that the hostile Indians were to meet at Post Vincennes in the spring, drive us out of the Illinois, and attack the Kentucky settlements, in a body, joined by their southern friends; that all the goods were taken from the merchants of Post Vincennes for the King's use;—that the troops under Hamilton were repairing the fort, and expected a reinforcement from Detroit in the spring; that they appeared to have plenty of all kinds of stores; that they were strict in their discipline; but, that he did not believe they were under much apprehension of a visit; and believed that, if we could get there undiscovered, we might take the place.

"In short, we got every information from this gentleman that we could wish for; as he had had good opportunities, and had taken great pains to inform himself, with a design to give intelligence. We now viewed ourselves in a very critical situation—in a manner cut off from any intercourse between us and the United States. We knew that Governor Hamilton, in the spring, by a junction of his northern and southern Indians [which he had prepared for], would be at the head of such a force that nothing in this quarter could withstand his arms—that Kentucky must immediately fall; and well if the desolation would end there.

“If we could immediately make our way good to Kentucky, we were convinced that before we could raise a force even sufficient to save that country, it would be too late—as all the men in it, joined by the troops we had, would not be sufficient; and to get timely succor from the interior counties was out of the question.

“We saw but one alternative, which was to attack the enemy in their quarters. If we were fortunate, it would save the whole. If otherwise, it would be nothing more than what would certainly be the consequence if we should not make the attempt. These, and many other similar reasons, induced us to resolve to attempt the enterprise, which met with the approbation of every individual belonging to us.

“Orders were immediately issued for preparations. The whole country took fire with alarm; and every order was executed with cheerfulness by every description of the inhabitants—preparing provisions, encouraging volunteers, &c., &c., and as we had plenty of stores, every man was completely rigged with what he could desire to withstand the coldest weather. To convey our artillery and stores, it was concluded to send a vessel round the water, so strong that she might force her way.

“A large Mississippi [keel] boat was immediately purchased, and completely fitted out as a galley, mounting two four-pounders, and four large swivels.* She was manned by forty-six men under the command of Captain John Rogers.

“He set sail on the 4th of February, with orders to force his way up the Wabash as high as the mouth of White

* This vessel was called “The Willing.”—Dillon. So named after Captain James Willing.—H. W. B.

River, and to secrete himself until further orders; but if he found himself discovered to do the enemy all the damage he could, without running too great a risk of losing his vessel; and not to leave the river until he was out of hope of our arrival by land; but by all means to conduct himself so as to give no suspicion of our approach by land.

“We had a great dependence on this galley. She was far superior to anything the enemy could fit out without building a vessel; and, at the worst, if we were discovered, we could build a number of large pirogues, such as they possessed, to attend her, and with such a little fleet, perhaps, pester the enemy very much; and if we saw it our interest, force a landing; at any rate, it would be some time before they could be a match for us on the water.”

Crossing the Kaskaskia, Clark took the old trail over the prairies of Illinois to the Embarrass near Vincennes. The narratives of Clark, or daily Journal of Bowman, refer to their crossing the upper branches of the Big Muddy, the “north fork of the Saline,” the two main branches of “the little Wabash” [a few miles west of Olney, present county seat of Richland County]. This trail between the ancient villages of Kaskaskia and Vincennes, followed afoot or on horseback when there was no habitation between, has improved apace with the settling of the state on either side, yet there have been but few changes of the old route of nearly two hundred years ago.

On account of the flooded condition of the country Clark left it at the Embarrass river. He says, “from the spot [on the west bank of the Wabash] we now lay on, [it] was about ten miles to town.” [Some ten miles below Vincennes]. Having crossed to the east side of the river, his route over the flooded lands from thence to Vincennes is a problem which a reference to its topography will greatly help to solve.

Westerly of the railroad from Vincennes to Evansville the country is "a low alluvial plain," broken by gentle, lateral or oblique ridges depressed here and there to again elevate into conical knobs called by the French "mamelles" because of a fancied likeness to the female breast. At crossing place there are two of these cones, one near the river, the other some two miles or more to the east. In later times this second mamelle was, and is now, known as the "Chimney Rock," and both still remain noted features of the landscape.

Geologically these ridges and knolls "are the remains of the Merom sandstone" that once covered the whole area in question. "Sections taken from the points named show a uniform strata and material" that leave no doubt as to the fact that, except the elevations named, the primeval covering was "washed away" and carried southward to make the "Sandy Barrens" in that direction of the County. The ridges and knolls that remain "are interspersed by numerous bayous or overflowed swampy basins," and by several "permanent ponds" that intervene.*

The writer here has used so much of the Professor's map that is with his report as covers Clark's route from the Wabash to Vincennes and produces it here changed so as to make it agree with the accounts as given by Clark and Bowman, or other authentic data.†

As the reader may recall, Clark gave two accounts of this campaign, one in the so-called Mason letter, written Nov.

* Report of the late Professor John Collett on Knox County in "The Geological Survey of Indiana for 1873, pages 324-328, et sequi.—H. W. B.

† To which Professor Collett did not have access at the time. But in the hurry of the hour he was required to rely on local tradition, much of which is in error as to Clark's real movements in that neighborhood.—H. W. B.

19, 1779, and in his "Memoir," composed a number of years later at the request of the Presidents, Thomas Jefferson and James Madison.*

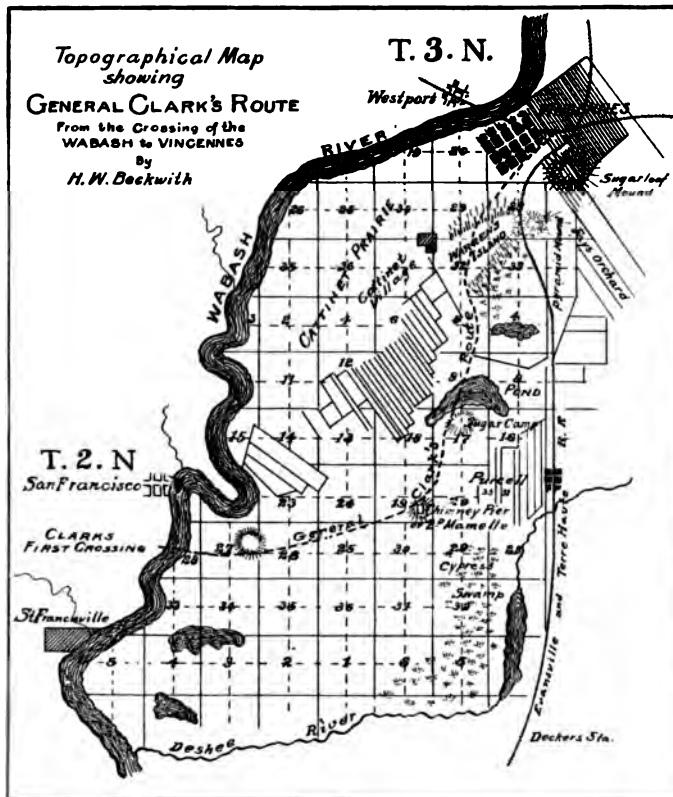

It remained for the late William Hayden English to publish the Clark "Memoir" from Judge Dillon's copy in full. In other respects Mr. English's "Conquest of the Country Northwest of the River Ohio, and Life of Gen. George Rogers Clark" seemingly exhausts the subject treated.

On a surface view these accounts of Clark seem to conflict in several places, the one with the other, and both with the statements of Bowman in his diary relating to the same events. But when all three are compared, sifted, and their descriptive statements applied to the known topography and geological features of the locality, the course of Clark's army over the submerged lands, knolls and sugar camps, woods and flooded basins, to Vincennes, will appear, as shown on the writer's map herewith, with a fair degree of certainty.

Clark says they crossed the Wabash about ten miles below Vincennes. Bowman, in his diary, says "at break of day, Feb. 21, began to ferry our men over in our two canoes to a small hill called the Mobib or Bubbriss," [which is here a misspelt slang phrase for the word mamelle]. The whole army being over, we plunged [on] into the water

* The writer here knew quite well the late historian, Judge John B. Dillon, of Indiana, and was aware of the fact that he had a copy of Clark's Memoir. By him the writer was also told that the late Lyman C. Draper of the Wisconsin Historical Society had gotten the original. All this time the document remained in manuscript form except in its greater portion and material parts as found in Dillon's "Historical Notes," etc., printed in 1843. Judge Dillon died, and the writer here, failed to secure a transcript from the copy of that author. Mr. Draper, with whom the writer here was personally acquainted, and with whom he had a frequent and voluminous correspondence for several years, kept his Clark Manuscripts under close cover, as he himself meant to write a life of Clark. Unfortunately for the history of the "North-west" he died without having done this great work, for which he had toiled so many years in collecting the material.—H. W. B.

T. 3. N.

sometimes to the neck for more than one league [easterly] to the next hill of the same name" [later known as the Chimney Rock].

Going north from the "second mamelle" or "Chimney Rock" the next day, Feb. 22, was the most daring and dangerous of Clark's ventures in all the perils of his journey. He finally reached the desired "undergrowth and Sugar Camps," evidently quite near the "permanent pond" as shown on the map. The Sugar Camps, Clark says, "was a delightful spot of ground of about ten acres." Bowman says under date of Feb. 22, "we came one league farther [north from the second Mamelles] to some sugar camps, where we staid all night. No provisions yet. The Lord help us."* Clark continues as follows: "Crossing a narrow, deep lake [the permanent pond of Professor Collett] in canoes, we came to a copse of timber called Warriors [Warrens] island."†

"We were now [continues Clark] in full view of the fort and town, not a shrub between us, at about two miles distance."‡

"The low plane we marched through was not a perfect level, but had frequent risings [ridges referred to by Professor Collett] which generally ran in an oblique direction to the town. We took advantage of one of them, marching [and counter marching] through the water under it, which

* The accounts of Bowman and Clark do not agree in that the former places the deep wading north of the "permanent pond," while Clark says it was south of that water as stated in the text.—H. W. B.

† In a transcript of the manuscript "Diary" supplied to Judge John Law of Vincennes, the hill in question is called "Warrens" Island, and a more careful scanning of Clark's Manuscript Memoir will no doubt disclose the same orthography.—H. W. B.

‡ In the Mason letter Clark is more explicit. He there says "As it was an open plain from the wood that covered us, I marched time enough to be seen from the town before dark.—H. W. B.

completely prevented our men being numbered." "In raising [French] volunteers in the Illinois, each person who set about the business had a set of colors given him;" "these they brought with them, ten or twelve pairs" in number; and they "were fixed on long poles procured for the purpose, so as to show above these heights [ridges] and at a distance made no despicable appearance."

"In this manner we moved so as to suffer it to be dark before we had advanced more than half way to the town. We then suddenly altered our direction, crossed the ponds where they could not have suspected us, and about eight o'clock gained the heights back of the town. Lieutenant [John] Bailey was ordered with fourteen men to march and fire on the fort. The main body moved in a different direction and took possession of the strongest [most populous] part of the town. The firing now commenced on the fort, but they did not believe it was an enemy until one of their men was shot down through a port as he was lighting his match, as drunken Indians frequently saluted the fort after night. The drums now sounded and the business fairly commenced on both sides. Reinforcements were sent to attack the garrison, while other arrangements were making in the town."

"We now found that the garrison had known nothing of us, that having finished the fort that evening* they amused themselves at different games and had retired just before my letter arrived, as it was near roll call. The placard being made public, many of the inhabitants were afraid to show themselves out of the houses for fear of giving offense, and not one dare give information [to the garrison]. Several suspected persons had been "confined in the garrison." Among them was a Moses Henry [a private citizen of

* After the plans of Hamilton's Military Engineer, Henry du Vernet, to enlarge and complete the original work of Lieutenant Governor Abbott's Fort Sackville.—H. W. B.

Vincennes, in known sympathy with the Americans]. His wife, "Mrs. [Ann] Henry, went under pretense of carrying him provisions and whispered him the news of what she had seen [in the town] and Mr. Henry conveyed it to his fellow prisoners, which gave them much pleasure," etc.* As for Moses Henry, after the recapture of Vincennes, Clark made him "Indian Agent" in that quarter.

Later in life he claimed 136.16 Arpents of land in virtue of a French or British grant, prior to its ownership by the United States, and which he had assigned to another old citizen of Vincennes, Luke Decker. Never having been "surveyed" or its boundaries otherwise defined, the claim along with those of others in like condition, was not allowed. Having died, Ann Henry, his widow, put in a claim, under the Act of Congress of August 29, 1788, that she had been the "head of a family settled at Post Vincennes on and before the year 1783." She, with her children, as heirs of Moses Henry, were accordingly granted a lot in Vincennes "seventy feet by twenty-five toises." [That is to say, 25 fathoms or 150 feet in length].†

* To make matters plainer to the general reader, the above numerous extracts of events since Clark crossed the Wabash, are grouped from Clark and Bowman's narratives.—H. W. B.

† Old grants or land claims at or near Vincennes treated in Vol. XVI American State Papers on Public Lands, etc.—H. W. B.

CHAPTER VIII.

*CLARK'S MEMOIR.

1779.

"Everything being ready, on the 5th of February, after receiving a lecture and absolution from the priest, we crossed the Kaskaskia river with one hundred and seventy men; marched about three miles, and encamped, where we lay until the [7th] and set out. The weather wet [but fortunately not cold for the season], and a great part of the plains under water several inches deep. It was difficult and very fatiguing marching.

"My object was now to keep the men in spirits. I suffered them to shoot game on all occasions, and feast on it like Indian war-dancers; each company by turns inviting the others to their feasts; which was the case every night; as the company that was to give the feast was always supplied with horses to lay up a sufficient store of wild meat in the course of the day; myself and principal officers putting on the woodsmen, shouting now and then, and running as much through mud and water as any of them.

"Thus, insensibly, without a murmur, were those men led on to the banks of the Little Wabash ["the two little Wabachees," vide in the Mason letter.—H. W. B.] which we reached on the 13th, through incredible difficulties, far surpassing anything that any of us had ever experienced. Frequently the diversions of the night wore off the thoughts of the preceding day. We formed a camp on a height which we found on the bank of the river, and suffered our troops to amuse themselves.

"I viewed this sheet of water for some time with distrust; but, accusing myself of doubting, I immediately set to work, without holding any consolation about it, or suffering any body else to do so in my presence; ordered a pirogue to be built immediately, and acted as though crossing the water would be only a piece of diversion. As but few could work at the pirogue, at a time, pains were taken to find diversion for the rest, to keep them in high spirits. In the evening of the 14th our vessel was finished, manned, and sent to explore the drowned lands on the opposite side of the Little Wabash, with private instructions what report to make, and, if possible to find some spot of dry land. They found about half an acre, and marked the trees from thence back to the camp, and made a very favorable report.

* Dillon.

“Fortunately, the 15th happened to be a warm, moist day, for the season. The channel of the river where we lay was about thirty yards wide. A scaffold was built on the opposite shore [which was about three feet under water], and our baggage ferried across, and put on it; our horses swam across and received their loads at the scaffold, by which time the troops were also brought across, and we began our march, through the water.

“By evening we found ourselves encamped on a pretty height, in high spirits; each party laughing at the other, in consequence of something that had happened in the course of this ferrying business, as they called it. A little antic drummer afforded them great diversion by floating on his drum, &c.

“All this was greatly encouraged; and they really began to think themselves superior to other men, and that neither the rivers nor the seasons could stop their progress. Their whole conversation now was concerning what they would do when they got about the enemy. They now began to view the main Wabash as a creek, and made no doubt but such men as they were could find a way to cross it. They wound themselves up to such a pitch, that they soon took Post Vincennes, divided the spoil, and before bed-time were far advanced on their route to Detroit. All this was no doubt pleasing to those of us who had more serious thoughts.

*“We were now convinced that the whole of the low country on the Wabash was drowned, and that the enemy could easily get to us, if they discovered us, and wished to risk an action; if they did not, we made no doubt of crossing the river by some means or other, even if Captain Rogers with our galley, did not get to his station agreeable to his appointment, we flattered ourselves that all would be well, and marched on in high spirits.”

Here follows an extract from the manuscript journal of Major Bowman:

“February 16th, 1779.—Marched all day through rain and water. Crossed the Fur river. Our provisions begin to be short.

“17th—Marched early, crossed several runs very deep. Sent Mr. Kernedy [Kennedy], our commissary, with three men, to cross the River Embarrass, if possible, and proceed to a plantation opposite Post Vincennes, in order to steal boats or canoes to ferry us across the Wabash. About an hour by sun we got near the River Embarrass—found the country all overflowed with water. We strove to find the Wabash. Travelled till eight o’clock in mud and water, but found no place to encamp on.

“Still keep marching on; but after some time Mr. Kernedy [Kennedy] and his party returned. Found it impossible to cross the Embarrass River. We found the water falling from a small spot of ground. Staid there the remainder of the night. Drizzly and dark weather.

“18th.—At daybreak heard Governor Hamilton’s morning gun. Set off, and marched down the river [Embarrass] saw some fine land. About two o’clock came to the bank of the Wabash: made rafts for four men to cross and go up to town and steal boats. But they spent the day and night in the water to no purpose, for there was not one foot of dry land to be found.

* See pages 240-245 this volume.

"19th—Captain McCarty's company set to making a canoe; and at three o'clock the four men returned, after spending the night on some logs in the water. The canoe finished, Captain McCarty with three of his men embarked in the canoe and made the next attempt to steal boats; but he soon returned having discovered four large fires about a league distant from our camp; they seemed to be fires of whites and Indians.

"Immediately Colonel Clark sent two men in the canoe down to meet the galley, with orders to come on, day and night: that being our last hope, and [we] starving. Many of the men much cast down—particularly the volunteers. No provision of any sort, now two days. Hard fortune.

"20th—Camp very quiet; but hungry. Some almost in despair. Many of the Creole[French] volunteers talking of returning." Clark now resumes: "Many of our volunteers began, for the first time, to despair. Some talked of returning; but my situation now was such that I was past all uneasiness. I laughed at them without persuading or ordering them to desist from any such attempt; but told them I should be glad if they would go out and kill some deer.

"They went, confused with such conduct. My own troops I knew had no idea of abandoning an enterprise for the want of provisions, while there was plenty of good horses in their possession; and I knew that without any violence, the volunteers could be detained a few days, in the course of which time our fate would be known.

"I conducted myself in a manner that caused the whole to believe that I had no doubt of success, which kept their spirits up." [Clark's MS. Memoir]. Fell to making more canoes, when about twelve o'clock our sentry on the river brought to, a boat with five Frenchmen from the fort [at Vincennes] who told us we were not as yet discovered—that the inhabitants were well disposed to us, &c. They informed us of two canoes they had seen adrift some distance above us. Ordered that Captain Worthington, with a party, go in search of them. Returned late with one only. One of our men killed a deer, which was brought into camp very acceptably.

“21st—[Bowman’s Journal.]—At break of day began to ferry our men over [the Wabash] in two canoes, to a small hill called the Mamelle. Captain Williams, with two men, went to look for a passage, and were discovered by two men in a canoe, but could not fetch them to. The whole army being over, we thought to get to town that night—so plunged into the water, sometimes to the neck, for more than one league, when we stopped on a hill of the same name—there being no dry land on any side for many leagues. Our pilots say we cannot get along—that it is impossible. The whole army being over, we encamped. Rain all this day. No provisions.”

The memoir of Clark proceeds: “This last day’s march* through the water was far superior to any thing the French had an idea of; they were backward in speaking—said that the nearest land to us was a small league, called the Sugar Camp, on the bank of the [river?]. A canoe was sent off and returned without finding that we could pass. I went in her myself, and sounded the water; found it deep as to my neck. I returned with a design to have the men transported on board the canoes to the Sugar Camp, which I knew would spend the whole day and ensuing night; as the vessels would pass slowly through the bushes.

“The loss of so much time, to men half starved, was a matter of consequence. I would have given now a great deal for a day's provision, or for one of our horses. I returned but slowly to the troops—giving myself time to think. On our arrival, all ran to hear what was the report. Every eye was fixed on me.

* February 21st. By Dillon.

“I unfortunately spoke in a serious manner to one of the officers; the whole were alarmed without knowing what I said. I viewed their confusion for about one minute—whispered to those near me to do as I did—immediately put some water in my hand, poured on powder, blackened my face, gave the war whoop, and marched into the water without saying a word. The party gazed, and fell in, one after another, without saying a word, like a flock of sheep.

“I ordered those near me to begin a favorite song of theirs; it soon passed through the line, and the whole went on cheerfully. I now intended to have them transported across the deepest part of the water; but when about waist deep one of the men informed me that he thought he felt a path.

“We examined, and found it so; and concluded that it kept on the highest ground, which it did; and by taking pains to follow it, we got to the Sugar Camp, without the least difficulty, where there was about half an acre of dry ground, at least not under water, where we took up our lodging.

“The Frenchmen that we had taken on the river appeared to be uneasy at our situation. They begged that they might be permitted to go in the two canoes to town in the night; they said that they would bring their own house provisions, without a possibility of any persons knowing it—that some of our men should go with them, as a surety of their good conduct—that it was impossible we could march from that place till the water fell, for the plain was too deep to march. Some of the [officers] believed that it might be done.

“I would not suffer it. I never could well account for this piece of obstinacy, and give satisfactory reasons to myself, or any body else, why I denied a proposition apparently so easy to execute, and of so much advantage; but something seemed to tell me that it should not be done; and it was not done.

“The most of the weather that we had on this march was moist and warm, for the season. This was the coldest night we had. The ice in the morning was from one-half to three-quarters of an inch thick, near the shores, and in still water. The morning was the finest we had on our march. A little after sunrise I lectured the whole.

“What I said to them I forgot, but it may be easily imagined by a person that could possess my affections for them at that time. I concluded by informing them that passing the plain that was then in full view and reaching the opposite woods would put an end to their fatigue—that in a few hours they would have a sight of their long-wished-for object—and immediately stepped into the water without waiting for any reply. A huzza took place.

“As we generally marched through the water in a line, before the third entered I halted and called to Major Bowman, ordering him to fall in the rear with twenty-five men, and put to death any man who refused to march, as we wished to have no such person among us. The whole gave a cry of approbation, and on we went.

“This was the most trying of all the difficulties we had experienced. I generally kept fifteen or twenty of the strongest men next myself, and judged from my own feelings what must be that of others. Getting about the middle of the plain, the water about mid-deep, I found myself sensibly failing, and as there were no trees nor bushes for the men to support themselves by, I feared that many of the most weak would be drowned.

"I ordered the canoes to make the land, discharge their loading, and play backwards and forwards with all diligence, and pick up the men; and to encourage the party, sent some of the strongest men forward with orders when they got to a certain distance, to pass the word back that the water was getting shallow, and when getting near the woods to cry out 'Land!'

"This stratagem had its desired effect. The men, encouraged by it, exerted themselves almost beyond their abilities—the weak holding by the stronger. The water never got shallower, but continued deepening. Getting to the woods, where the men expected land, the water was up to my shoulders, but gaining the woods was of great consequence; all the low men and the weakly hung to the trees, and floated on the old logs, until they were taken off by the canoes. The strong and tall got ashore and built fires. Many would reach the shore and fall with their bodies half in the water, not being able to support themselves without it.

"This was a delightful dry spot of ground of about ten acres. We soon found that the fires answered no purpose, but that two strong men taking a weaker one by the arms was the only way to recover him, and, being a delightful day, it soon did. But, fortunately, as if designed by Providence, a canoe of Indian squaws and children was coming up to town and took through part of this plain as a nigh way.

"It was discovered by our canoes as they were out after the men. They gave chase and took the Indian canoe, on board of which was near half a quarter of a buffalo, some corn, tallow, kettles, etc.

“This was a grand prize and was invaluable. Broth was immediately made and served out to the most weakly, with great care; most of the whole got a little, but a great many gave their part to the weakly, jocosely saying something cheering to their comrades. This little refreshment and fine weather by the afternoon gave new life to the whole. Crossing a narrow deep lake in the canoes, and marching some distance, we came to a copse of timber called the Warrior’s Island.

“We were now in full view of the fort and town, not a shrub between us, at about two miles’ distance. Every man now feasted his eyes, and forgot that he had suffered anything—saying all that had passed was owing to good policy, and nothing but what a man should bear; and that a soldier had no right to think &c.—passing from one extreme to another, which is common in such cases.

“It was now we had to display our abilities. The plain between us and the town was not a perfect level. The sunken grounds were covered with water full of ducks. We observed several men out on horseback, shooting them, within a half mile of us, and sent out as many of our active young Frenchmen to decoy and take one of these men, prisoner, in such a manner as not to alarm the others, which they did.

“The information we got from this person was similar to that which we got from those we took on the river, except that of the British having that evening completed the wall of the fort, and that there was a good many Indians in town.

“Our situation was now truly critical—no possibility of retreating in case of defeat—and in full view of a town that had at this time upwards of six hundred men in it, troops, inhabitants and Indians. The crew of the galley, though not fifty men, would have been now a reinforcement of immense magnitude to our little army [if I may so call it], but we would not think of them.

“We were now in the situation that I had labored to get ourselves in. The idea of being made prisoner was foreign to almost every man as they expected nothing but torture from the savages, if they fell into their hands.

“Our fate was now to be determined, probably in a few hours. We knew that nothing but the most daring conduct would insure success. I knew that a number of the inhabitants wished us well—that many were lukewarm to the interest of either—and I also learned that the Grand Chief, the Tobacco’s son, had, but a few days before, openly declared in council with the British that he was a brother and friend to the Big Knives.

“These were favorable circumstances, and as there was but little probability of our remaining until dark undiscovered, I determined to begin the career immediately, and wrote the following placard to the inhabitants:

“‘To the Inhabitants of Post Vincennes:’

“‘Gentlemen—Being now within two miles of your village, with my army, determined to take your fort this night, and not being willing to surprise you, I take this method to request such of you as are true citizens and willing to enjoy the liberty I bring you, to remain still in your houses. And those, if any there be, that are friends to the king, will instantly repair to the fort and join the hair-buyer general, and fight like men. And if any such as do not go to the fort shall be discovered afterwards, they may depend on severe punishment. On the contrary, those who are true friends to liberty may depend on being well treated, and I once more request them to keep out of the streets. For every one I find in arms on my arrival I shall treat him as an enemy.

“‘[Signed]

G. R. CLARK.

"I had various ideas on the supposed results of this letter. I knew that it could do us no damage, but that it would cause the luke-warm to be decided, encourage our friends, and astonish our enemies. We anxiously viewed this messenger until he entered the town, and in a few minutes could discover by our glasses some stir in every street that we could penetrate into and great numbers running or riding out into the commons, we supposed to view us, which was the case. But what surprised us was that nothing had yet happened that had the appearance of the garrison being alarmed—no drum, nor gun.

"We began to suppose that the information we got from our prisoners was false, and that the enemy already knew of us, and were prepared. A little before sunset we moved and displayed ourselves in full view of the town—crowds gazing at us. We were plunging ourselves into certain destruction, or success.

"There was no mid-way thought of. We had but little to say to our men except inculcating an idea of the necessity of obedience, &c. We knew they did not want encouraging, and that anything might be attempted with them that [was] possible for such a number—perfectly cool, under proper subordination, pleased with the prospect before them, and much attached to their officers.

"They all declared that they were convinced that an implicit obedience to orders was the only thing that would ensure success—and hoped that no mercy would be shown the person that should violate them. Such language as this from soldiers, to persons in our situation, must have been exceedingly agreeable. We moved on slowly in full view of the town; but as it was a point of some consequence to us to make ourselves appear as formidable, we, in leaving the covert that we were in, marched and countermarched in such a manner that we appeared numerous.

“In raising volunteers in the Illinois, every person that set about the business had a set of colors given him, which they brought with them, to the amount of ten or twelve pair. These were displayed to the best advantage; and as the low plain we marched through was not a perfect level, but had frequent raisings in it seven or eight feet higher than the common level, [which was covered with water,] and as these raisings generally run in an oblique direction to the town, we took the advantage of one of them, marching through the water under it, which completely prevented our being numbered; but our colors showed considerably above the heights, as they were fixed on long poles procured for the purpose, and at a distance made no despicable appearance; and as our young Frenchmen had, while we lay on the Warrior's Island, decoyed and taken several fowlers, with their horses, officers were mounted on these horses and rode about more completely to deceive the enemy.

“In this manner we moved, and directed our march in such a way as to suffer it to be dark before we had advanced more than half way to the town. We then suddenly altered our direction, and crossed ponds where they could not have suspected us, and about eight o'clock gained the heights back of the town.

“As there was yet no hostile appearance we were impatient to have the cause unriddled. Lieutenant Bayley was ordered with fourteen men to march and fire on the fort. The main body moved in a different direction, and took possession of the strongest part of the town.

“The firing now commenced on the fort; but they did not believe it was an enemy until one of their men was shot down through a port; as drunken Indians frequently saluted the fort after night. The drums now sounded, and the business fairly commenced on both sides. Reinforcements were sent to the attack of the garrison, while other arrangements were making in town.

"We now found that the garrison had known nothing of us; that having finished the fort that evening they had amused themselves at different games, and had just retired before my letter arrived, as it was near roll-call. The placard being made public, many of the inhabitants were afraid to show themselves out of the houses, for fear of giving offence; and not one dare give information.* Our friends flew to the commons and other convenient places to view the pleasing sight.

"This was observed from the garrison, and the reason asked, but a satisfactory excuse was given; and as a part of the town lay between our line of march and the garrison, we could not be seen by the sentinels on the walls. Captain W. Shannon and another being some time before taken prisoners by one of their [scouting parties] and that evening brought in, the party had discovered at the Sugar camp some signs of us. They supposed it to be a party of observation that intended to land on the height some distance below the town. Captain [William] Lamotte was sent to intercept them. It was at him, the people said they were looking, when they were asked the reason of their unusual stir. Several suspected persons had been taken to the garrison; among them was Mr. Moses Henry. Mrs. Henry went, under the pretence of carrying him provisions, and whispered him the news and what she had seen. Mr. Henry conveyed it to the rest of his fellow prisoners, which gave them much pleasure, particularly Captain Helm, who amused himself very much during the siege, and I believe did much damage.

"Ammunition was scarce with us; as the most of our stores had been put on board the galley. Though her crew was but few, such a reinforcement to us at this time would have been invaluable in many instances. But, fortunately, at the time of its being reported that the whole of the goods in the town were to be taken for the king's use, [for which the owners were to receive bills]. Colonel [Jean M. LeGras] Legras, Major [Francis] Bosseron, and others, had buried the greatest part of their powder and ball. This was immediately produced; and we found ourselves well supplied by those gentlemen.

* "The town immediately surrendered with joy and assisted at the siege"—Letter dated Kaskaskia, Illinois, April 29, 1779, from Col. Clark to the Governor of Virginia.—Dillon.

"The Tobacco's son being in town with a number of warriors, immediately mustered them, and let us know that he wished to join us, saying that by the morning he would have a hundred men. He received for answer that we thanked him for his friendly disposition; and as we were sufficiently strong ourselves, we wished him to desist, and that we would counsel on the subject in the morning; and as we knew that there were a number of Indians in and near the town that were our enemies, some confusion might happen if our men should mix in the dark; but hoped that we might be favored with his counsel and company during the night—which was agreeable to him.

"The garrison was soon completely surrounded, and the firing continued without intermission, [except about fifteen minutes a little before day,] until about nine o'clock the following morning. It was kept up by the whole of the troops,—joined by a few of the young men of the town, who got permission—except fifty men kept as a reserve.

"I had made myself fully acquainted with the situation of the fort and town, and the parts relative to each. The cannon of the garrison was on the upper floors of block-houses at each angle of the fort, eleven feet above the surface; and the ports so badly cut that many of our troops lay under the fire of them within twenty or thirty yards of the walls.

“They did no damage except to the buildings of the town, some of which they much shattered; and their musketry, in the dark, employed against woodsmen covered by houses, pailings, ditches, the banks of the river, &c., was but of little avail, and did no injury to us except wounding a man or two. As we could not afford to lose men, great care was taken to preserve them sufficiently covered, and to keep up a hot fire in order to intimidate the enemy as well as to destroy them.

“The embrasures of their cannon were frequently shut, for our riflemen, finding the true direction of them, would pour in such volleys when they were opened that the men could not stand to the guns; seven or eight of them in a short time got cut down. Our troops would frequently abuse the enemy in order to aggravate them to open their ports and fire their cannon, that they might have the pleasure of cutting them down with their rifles—fifty of which perhaps would be leveled the moment the port flew open; and I believe that if they [had] stood at their artillery the part of them would have been destroyed in the course of the night, as the greater part of our men lay within thirty yards of the walls; and in a few hours were covered equally to those within the walls, and much more experienced in that mode of fighting.

“Sometimes an irregular fire, as hot as possible, was kept up from different directions for a few minutes, and then only a continual scattering fire at the ports as usual; and a great noise and laughter immediately commenced in different parts of the town, by the reserved parties, as if they had only fired on the fort a few minutes for amusement; and as if those continually firing at the fort were only regularly relieved.

“Conduct similar to this kept the garrison constantly alarmed. They did not know what moment they might be stormed [or blown up?] as they could plainly discover that we had flung up some entrenchments across the streets, and appeared to be frequently very busy under the bank of the river, which was within thirty feet of the walls.

“The situation of the magazine we well knew. Captain Bowman began some works in order to blow it up, in case our artillery should arrive; but as we knew that we were daily liable to be overpowered by the numerous bands of Indians on the river, in case they had joined the enemy, [the certainty of which we were unacquainted with,] we resolved to lose no time, but to get the fort in our possession as soon as possible.

“If the vessel did not arrive before the ensuing night we resolved to undermine the fort, and fixed on the spot and plan of executing this work, which we intended to commence the next day.

“The Indians of different tribes that were inimical had left the town and neighborhood. Captain Lamotte [Captain William Lamotte, a noted Canadian and an active British partisan] continued to hover about it, in order, if possible, to make his way good into the fort.

“Some time before, a party of warriors, sent by Mr. Hamilton against Kentucky, [who] had taken two prisoners, was discovered by the Kickapoos, who gave information of them. A party was immediately detached to meet them, which happened in the commons; they conceived our troops to be a party sent by Mr. Hamilton to conduct them in, an honor commonly paid them.

“I was highly pleased to see each party whooping, hallooing and striking each other's breasts as they approached in the open fields; each seemed to try to outdo the other in the greatest signs of joy. The poor devils never discovered their mistake until too late for many of them to escape. Six of them were made prisoners, two of them scalped, and the rest so wounded, as we afterwards learned, [that] but one lived.

"I had now as fair opportunity of making an impression on the Indians as I could have wished for—that of convincing them that Governor Hamilton could not give them protection that he had made them to believe he could; and, in some measure to incense the Indians against him for not exerting himself to save [their] friends, ordered the prisoners to be tomahawked in the face of the garrison. It had the effect that I expected.

"Instead of making their friends inveterate against us, they upbraided the English parties in not trying to save their friends, and gave them to understand that they believed them to be liars, and no warriors.

"A remarkable circumstance happened that I think worthy our notice. An old French gentleman, of the name of St. Croix, lieutenant of Captain McCarty's Volunteers from Cohos [Kahokia], had but one son, who headed these Indians and was made prisoner. The question was put whether the white man should be saved. I ordered them to put him to death, through indignation, which did not extend to the savages. For fear he would make his escape, his father drew his sword and stood by him in order to run him through in case he should stir; being painted [he] could not know him.

"The wretch, on seeing the executioner's tomahawk raised to give the fatal stroke, raised his eyes as if making his last addresses to heaven, cried 'O, save me!' The father knew the son's voice. You may easily guess of the agitation and behavior of these two persons, coming to the knowledge of each other at so critical a moment.

"I had so little mercy for such murderers, and so valuable an opportunity for an example, knowing there would be the greatest solicitation made to save him, that I immediately absconded myself; but by the warmest entreaties from his father, who had behaved so exceedingly well in our service, and some of the officers, I granted his life on certain conditions.

“Parties attempted in vain to surprise him. A few others of his party were taken, one of which was Maisonville, [Francis Maisonville, of Kaskaskia], a famous Indian partisan. Two lads that captured him, tied him to a post in the street, and fought from behind him as a breastwork—supposing that the enemy would not fire at them for fear of killing him, as he would alarm them by his voice.

“The lads were ordered, by an officer who discovered them at their amusement, to untie their prisoner, and take him off to the guard, which they did; but were so inhuman as to take part of his scalp on the way; there happened to him no other damage.

“As almost the whole of the persons who were most active in the Department of Detroit, were either in the fort or with Captain Lamotte, I got extremely uneasy, for fear that he would not fall into our power; knowing that he would go off, if he could not get into the fort in the course of the night. Finding that, without some unforeseen accident, the fort must inevitably be ours, and that a reinforcement of twenty men, although considerable to them, would not be of great moment to us in the present situation of affairs, and knowing that we had weakened them by killing or wounding many of their gunners, after some deliberation, we concluded to risk the reinforcement in preference of his going again among the Indians; the garrison had at least a month's provisions, and if they could hold out, in the course of that time he might do us much damage.

“A little before day the troops were withdrawn from their positions about the fort, except a few parties of observation, and the firing totally ceased. Orders were given, in case of Lamotte's approach, not to alarm or fire on him, without a certainty of killing or taking the whole. In less than a quarter of an hour he passed within ten feet of an officer and a party that lay concealed. Ladders were flung over to them, and as they mounted them our party shouted; many of them fell from the top of the walls—some within, and others back; but as they were not fired on they all got over, much to the joy of their friends.

“But, on considering the matter they must have been convinced that it was a scheme of ours to let them in; and that we were so strong as to care but little about them or the manner of their getting into the garrison.

“The firing immediately commenced on both sides with double vigor; and I believe that more noise could not have been made by the same number of men; their shouts could not be heard for the fire arms; but a continued blaze was kept around the garrison, without much being done, until about daybreak, when our troops were drawn off to posts prepared for them, about sixty or seventy yards from the fort.

“A loop-hole then could scarcely be darkened but a rifle ball would pass through it. To have stood to their cannon would have destroyed their men, without a probability of doing much service. Our situation was nearly similar. It would have been imprudent in either party to have wasted their men, without some decisive stroke required it.

“Thus the attack continued, until about nine o'clock on the morning of the 24th. Learning that the two prisoners they had brought in the day before, had a considerable number of letters with them, I supposed it an express that we expected about this time, which I knew to be of the greatest moment to us, as we had not received one since our arrival in the country; and not being fully acquainted with the character of our enemy, we were doubtful that those papers might be destroyed; to prevent which, I sent a flag, [with a letter,] demanding the garrison."

The following is a copy of the letter* which was addressed by Colonel Clark to Lieutenant Governor Hamilton, on this occasion:

"Sir: In order to save yourself from the impending storm that now threatens you, I order you immediately to surrender yourself, with all your garrison, stores, &c., &c. For if I am obliged to storm, you may depend on such treatment as is justly due to a murderer. Beware of destroying stores of any kind, or any papers or letters that are in your possession, or hurting one house in town—for, by Heavens! if you do, there shall be no mercy shown you.

[Signed,]

"G. R. CLARK."

The British commandant immediately returned the following answer.

"Lieutenant Governor Hamilton begs leave to acquaint Colonel Clark, that he and his garrison are not disposed to be awed into any action unworthy British subjects."

"The firing, then," says Clark, "commenced warmly for a considerable time; and we were obliged to be careful in preventing our men from exposing themselves too much, as they were now much animated—having been refreshed during the flag.

"They frequently mentioned their wishes to storm the place, and put an end to the business at once. The firing was heavy through every crack that could be discovered in any part of the fort. Several of the garrison got wounded, and no possibility of standing near the embra-

* Extracted from Major Bowman's MS. Journal.—Dillon.

tures. Towards the evening a flag appeared with the following proposals:

“Lieutenant Governor Hamilton proposes to Colonel Clark a truce for three days; during which time he promises there shall be no defensive works carried on in the garrison, on condition that Colonel Clark shall observe on his part, a like cessation of any defensive work; that is, he wishes to confer with Colonel Clark as soon as can be; and promises that whatever may pass between them two, and another person mutually agreed upon to be present, shall remain secret till matters be finished, as he wishes; that whatever the result of the conference may be, it may tend to the honor and credit of each party. If Colonel Clark makes a difficulty of coming into the fort, Lieutenant Governor Hamilton will speak to him by the gate.

[Signed,]

“HENRY HAMILTON.

“24th February, '79.”

“I was at a great loss to conceive what reason Lieutenant Governor Hamilton could have for wishing a truce of three days, on such terms as he proposed. Numbers said it was a scheme to get me into their possession. I had a different opinion, and no idea of his possessing such sentiments; as an act of that kind would infallibly ruin him.

“Although we had the greatest reason to expect a reinforcement in less than three days that would at once put an end to the siege, I yet did not think it prudent to agree to the proposals; and sent the following answer:

“Colonel Clark’s compliments to Lieutenant Governor Hamilton, and begs leave to inform him that he will not agree to any terms other than Mr. Hamilton’s surrendering himself and garrison, prisoners at discretion. If

Mr. Hamilton is desirous of a conference with Colonel Clark, he will meet him at the church, with Captain Helm.

"[Signed]

G. R. C.

"February 24th, '79."

"We met at the church* about eighty yards from the fort—Lieutenant Governor Hamilton, Major [John] Hay, Superintendent of Indian Affairs, Captain Helm their prisoner, Major Bowman and myself. The conference began. Hamilton produced terms of capitulation, signed, that contained various articles, one of which was that the garrison should be surrendered, on their being permitted to go to Pensacola on parole. After deliberating on every article, I rejected the whole. He then wished that I would make some proposition.

"I told him that I had no other to make, than what I had already made—that of his surrendering as prisoners at discretion. I said that his troops had behaved with spirit—that they could not suppose that they would be worse treated in consequence of it—that if he chose to comply with the demand, though hard, perhaps the sooner the better—that it was in vain to make any proposition to me—that he, by this time, must be sensible that the garrison would fall—that both of us must [view?] all blood spilt for the future by the garrison as murder—that my troops were already impatient, and called aloud for permission to tear down and storm the fort; if such a step was taken, many of course would be cut down; and the result of an enraged body of woodsmen breaking in, must be obvious to him; it would be out of the power of an American officer to save a single man.

* During the conference at the church, some Indian warriors who had been sent to the falls of the Ohio, for scalps and prisoners, were discovered on their return, as they entered the plains near Post Vincennes. A party of the American troops, commanded by Captain Williams, went out to meet them. The Indians, who mistook this detachment for a party of their friends, continued to advance "with all the parade of successful warriors." "Our men," says Major Bowman, "killed two men on the spot, wounded three, took six prisoners and brought them into town. Two of them proving to be whites, we released them, and brought the Indians to the main street, before the fort gate, there tomahawked them, and threw them into the river."—Major Bowman's Ms. Journal.—Dillon.

“Various altercations took place for a considerable time. Captain Helm attempted to moderate our fixed determination. I told him he was a British prisoner, and it was doubtful whether or not he could with propriety speak on the subject.

“Hamilton then said that Captain Helm was from that moment liberated, and might use his pleasure. I informed the Captain that I would not receive him on such terms—that he must return to the garrison and await his fate. I then told Lieut.-Governor Hamilton that hostilities should not commence until five minutes after the drums gave the alarm.

“We took our leave, and parted but a few steps, when Hamilton stopped, and politely asked me if I would be so kind as to give him my reasons for refusing the garrison on any other terms than those I had offered.

“I told him I had no objections in giving him my real reasons, which were simply these: that I knew the greater part of the principal Indian partisans of Detroit were with him—that I wanted an excuse to put them to death, or otherwise treat them, as I thought proper—that the cries of the widows and the fatherless on the frontiers, which they had occasioned, now required their blood from my hands, and that I did not choose to be so timorous as to disobey the absolute commands of their authority, which I looked upon to be next to divine; that I would rather lose fifty men, than not to empower myself to execute this piece of business with propriety; that if he chose to risk the massacre of his garrison for their sakes, it was his own pleasure; and that I might perhaps take it into my head to send for some of those widows to see it executed.

"Major Hay [John Hay of Detroit], paying great attention, I had observed a kind of distrust in his countenance, which in a great measure influenced my conversation during this time. On my concluding, "Pray sir," said he, "who is it that you call Indian partisans?" "Sir," I replied, "I take Major Hay to be one of the principal."

In this connection the editor here will introduce a short paragraph from the Journal of John Leith, who at the time in question, was restrained more a prisoner than a free man, at Detroit, whither he had been taken on account of his sympathy with the Americans while a trader among the Indians. He says: "One day, while detained at the fort, I observed some soldiers drawing cannon out of the fort and placing them on the banks of the river. While I was ruminating in my mind, what could be the meaning of this singular manoeuvre, a young silversmith, with whom I was intimately acquainted, came and asked me to walk with him and see them fire the cannon. I walked with him to the place where they had carried them. When we arrived there we found Governor Hamilton and several other British officers who were standing and sitting around.

"Immediately after our arrival at the place, the Indians produced a large quantity of scalps, the cannon fired, the Indians raised a shout and the soldiers waved their hats, with huzzas and tremendous shrieks, which lasted some time.

"This ceremony being ended, the Indians brought forward a parcel of American prisoners, as a trophy of their victories; among whom were eighteen women and children, poor creatures; dreadfully mangled and emaciated; with their clothes tattered and torn to pieces, in such a manner as not to hide their nakedness: their legs bare and streaming with blood; the effects of being torn with thorns, briars and brush.

"To see these poor people dragged, like sheep to the slaughter along the British lines, caused my heart to shrink with throbbings and my hair to raise with rage; and if ever I committed murder in my heart, [Mr. Leith being a very religious man] it was then; for if I had had the opportunity, and had been supported with strength, I certainly should have killed the Governor, who seemed to take great delight in the exhibition. My business hurried me from this horrible scene, and I know not what became of those poor wretches who were the miserable victims of savage power."—H. W. B.

"I never saw a man," continues Clark, "in the moment of execution so struck as he appeared to be—pale and trembling, scarcely able to stand. Hamilton blushed—and, I observed was much affected at his behavior. Major Bowman's countenance sufficiently explained his disdain for the one and his sorrow for the other.

"Some moments elapsed without a word passing on either side. From that moment my resolutions changed respecting Hamilton's situation. I told him that we would return to our respective posts; that I would reconsider the matter, and let him know the result; no offensive measures should be taken in the meantime. Agreed to; and we parted. What had passed being made known to our officers, it was agreed that we should moderate our resolutions."

"In the course of the afternoon of the 24th, the following articles* were signed, and the garrison capitulated:

"I. Lieutenant-Governor Hamilton engages to deliver up to Colonel Clark, Fort Sackville, as it is at present, with all the stores, &c.

"II. The garrison are to deliver themselves as prisoners of war; and march out with their arms and accoutrements, &c.

* Major Bowman's MS. Journal. Dillon.

"III. The garrison to be delivered up at ten o'clock tomorrow.

"IV. Three days' time to be allowed the garrison to settle their accounts with the inhabitants and traders of this place.

"V. The officers of the garrison to be allowed their necessary baggage, &c.

"Signed at Post St. Vincent [Vincennes], 24th Feb'y, 1779.

"Agreed for the following reasons: The remoteness from succor; the state and quantity of provisions, &c., unanimity of officers and men in its expediency; the honorable terms allowed; and lastly, the confidence in a generous enemy.

"[Signed]

HENRY HAMILTON,

"Lt.-Gov. and Superintendent."

"The business being now nearly at an end, troops were posted in several strong houses around the garrison, and patrolled during the night to prevent any deception that might be attempted. The remainder on duty lay on their arms; and, for the first time for many days past, got some rest.

"During the seige I got only one man wounded; not being able to lose many, I made them secure themselves well. Seven were badly wounded in the fort, through ports. Almost every man had conceived a favorable opinion of Lieutenant-Governor Hamilton—I believe what affected myself made some impression on the whole—and I was happy to find that he never deviated, while he stayed with us, from that dignity of conduct that became an officer in his situation. The morning of the 25th approaching, arrangements were made for receiving the garrison [which consisted of seventy-nine men], and about ten o'clock it was delivered in form; and everything was immediately arranged to the best advantage.

“On the 27th our galley arrived, all safe—the crew much mortified, although they deserved great credit for their diligence. They had on their passage taken up William Myers, express from [the Virginia] government. The despatches gave much encouragement; our own battalion was to be completed, and an additional one to be expected in the course of the spring.”

The editor here has omitted the summary of Mr. Dillon, in his paragraph at the beginning of Chapter Nine of his historical notes, and substituted instead, the following and fuller extracts from General Clark's Memoirs:

He says that “finding that ten boats loaded with goods and provisions were daily expected down the Wabash, and for fear the British who had them in charge would get the intelligence and return, on the 26th, Captain Helm, and Majors Francis Bosseron and Legras, with fifty volunteers, were sent in three armed boats in pursuit of them.

“March 5th, Captain Helm, Major Bosseron and Major Legras returned from their journey up the river with great success. They came up with the enemy in the night, discerning their fires at a distance; waited until all was quiet; surrounded and took the whole prisoners without firing a gun.

“Those gentlemen were off their guard, and so little apprehensive of an enemy in that part of the world, that they could hardly persuade themselves that what they saw was real. This was a valuable [prize]—seven boats loaded with provisions and goods to a considerable amount. The provisions were taken for the public, and the goods divided among the whole of them [i. e., Clark's men] except eight hundred pounds' worth of cloth. This was very agreeable to the soldiers, as I told them that the State would pay them in money their proportions, and that they had great plenty of goods. This reservation was a very valuable idea, for [our recruits coming in] on their arrival, what few there were of them [were] almost entirely naked."

The editor of this publication has a manuscript autobiography taken down by himself, of the late John McFall, who was born near Vincennes in 1798, where he lived until 1817. He told the editor that his grandfather, Ralph Matison, was one of General Clark's soldiers who went up the Wabash with Captain Helm to intercept this convoy, and who often told McFall, his grandson, that Helm's forces found the British convoy laying in the mouth of the Big Vermilion river, and surprised them in the night time and took them without firing a shot.—H. W. B.

"We yet found ourselves," says Clark, "uneasy. The number of prisoners we had taken, added to those of the garrison, was so considerable when compared to our own numbers, that we were at a loss how to dispose of them, so as not to interfere with our future operations.

"Detroit opened full in our view. In the fort at that place there were not more than eighty men—a great part of them invalids—and we were informed that many of the principal inhabitants were disaffected to the British cause. The Indians on our route we knew would now more than ever be cool towards the English.

"We could now augment our forces in this quarter to about four hundred men, as near half the inhabitants of Post Vincennes would join us. Kentucky, we supposed, could immediately furnish two hundred men, as there was a certainty of receiving a great addition of settlers in the spring. With our own stores, which we had learned were safe on their passage, added to those of the British, there would not be a single article wanting for an expedition against Detroit.

"We privately resolved to embrace the object that seemed to court our acceptance, without delay—giving the enemy no time to recover from the blows that they had received; but we wished it to become the object of the soldiery and the inhabitants before we should say anything about it.

"It immediately became the common topic among them; and in a few days they had arranged things, so that they were, in their imaginations, almost ready to march. They were discountenanced in such conversation, and such measures were taken as tended to show that our ideas were foreign from such an attempt; but at the same time we were taking every step to pave our way.

"The quantity of public goods brought from Detroit added to the whole of those belonging to the traders of Post Vincennes, that had been taken, was very considerable. The whole was divided among the soldiery, except some Indian medals that were kept, in order to be altered for public use.

"The officers received nothing, except a few articles of clothing that they stood in need of. The soldiers got almost rich. Others envied their good fortune, and wished that some enterprise might be undertaken, to enable them to perform some exploit. Detroit was their object. The clamor had now got to a great height; to silence it, and to answer other purposes, they were told that an army was to march the ensuing summer from Pittsburgh to take possession of Detroit.

"On the 7th of March Captains Williams and Rogers set out by water with a party of twenty-five men, to conduct the British officers to Kentucky; and, farther to weaken the prisoners, eighteen privates were also sent. After their arrival at the Falls of the Ohio, Captain Rogers had instructions to superintend their route to Williamsburgh, to furnish them with all necessary supplies on the way, and to await the orders of the Governor.

“Poor Myers, the express, who set out on the 15th, got killed on his passage, and his packet fell into the hands of the enemy; but I had been so much on my guard that there was not a sentence in it that could be of any disadvantage to us for the enemy to know; and there were private letters from soldiers to their friends, designedly written to deceive in case of such accidents.

“This was customary with us as our expresses were frequently surprised. I sent a second dispatch to the Governor, giving him a short but full account of what had passed, and our views. I sent letters to the commandant of Kentucky, directing him to give me a certain but private account of the number of men he could furnish in June, “Early in the month of March, I laid before the officers my plans for the reduction of Detroit, and explained the almost certainty of success, and the probability of keeping possession of it until we could receive succor from the States.

“If we awaited the arrival of the troops mentioned in the despatches from the Governor of Virginia, the enemy in the meantime might get strengthened; and probably we might not be so capable of carrying the [post] with the expected reinforcement, as we should be with our present force, in case we were to make the attempt at this time; and in case we should be disappointed in the promised reinforcement, we might not be able to effect it at all.

“There were various arguments made use of on this delicate point. Every person seemed anxious to improve the present opportunity; but prudence appeared to forbid the execution, and induced us to wait for the reinforcement. The arguments that appeared to have the greatest weight were, that with such a force we might march boldly through the Indian nations—that it would make a great [impression] on them, as well as the inhabitants of Detroit, and have a better effect than if we were now to slip off, and take the place with so small a force,—that the British would not wish to weaken Niagara by sending any considerable reinforcements to Detroit—that it was more difficult for that post to get succor from Canada, than it was for us to receive it from the States—that the garrison at Detroit would not be able to get a reinforcement in time to prevent our executing our designs, as we might with propriety expect ours in a few weeks;—in short, the enterprise was deferred until the — of June, when our troops were to rendezvous at Post Vincennes.

“In the meantime every preparation was to be made, procuring provisions, &c.—and, to blind our designs, the whole, except a small garrison, should march immediately to the Illinois; and orders were sent to Kentucky to prepare themselves to meet at the appointed time. This was now our proposed plan, and directed our operations during the spring.

“A company of volunteers from Detroit, mostly composed of young men, was drawn up; and when expecting to be sent off into a strange country, they were told that we were happy to learn that many of them were torn from their fathers and mothers and forced on this expedition; others, ignorant of the true cause in contest, had engaged from a principle that actuates a great number of men, that of being fond of enterprise; but that they now had a good opportunity to make themselves fully acquainted with the nature of the war, which they might explain to their friends—and that as we knew that sending them to the States, where they would be confined in jail probably for the course of the war, would make a great number of our friends at Detroit unhappy, we had thought proper, for their sakes, to suffer them to return home, &c. A great deal more was said to them on this subject.

“On the whole they were discharged on taking an oath not to bear arms against America until exchanged. They received an order for their arms, boats, and provisions, to return with; the boats were to be sold and divided among them when they got home. In a few days they set out; and as we had spies who went among them as traders, we learned that they made great havoc to the British interest, on their return to Detroit—publicly saying that they had taken an oath not to fight against Americans, but they had not sworn not to fight for them, &c.—and matters were carried to such a height that the commanding officer thought it prudent not to take notice of anything that was said or done.

“Mrs. McComb, who kept a noted boarding house, I understand, had the assurance to show him the stores she had provided for the Americans. This was the completion of our design in suffering the company to return. Many others that we could trust, we suffered to enlist in the cause; so that our charge of prisoners was much reduced.

“I had yet sent no message to the Indian tribes, wishing to wait to see what effect all this would have on them. The Piankeshaws, being of the tribe of the Tobacco's Son, were always familiar with us. Part of the behavior of this grandee, as he viewed himself, was diverting enough. He had conceived such an inviolable attachment for Captain Helm, that on finding that the Captain was a prisoner, and not being as yet able to release him, he declared himself a prisoner also. He joined his brother, as he called Captain Helm, and continually kept with him, condoling their condition as prisoners in great distress—at the same time wanting nothing that was in the power of the garrison to furnish.

“Lieutenant-Governor Hamilton, knowing the influence of Tobacco’s son, was extremely jealous of his behavior, and took every pains to gain him by presents, &c. When any thing was presented to him, his reply would be that it would serve him and his brother to live on.

“He would not enter into council, saying that he was a prisoner and had nothing to say; but was in hopes that when the grass grew, his brother, the Big Knife, would release him; and when he was free, he could talk, &c.

“In short, they could do nothing with him; and the moment he heard of our arrival, he paraded all the warriors he had in his village [joining Post Vincennes], and was ready to fall in and attack the fort; but for reasons formerly mentioned, he was desired to desist.

“On the 15th of March, 1779, a party of upper Piankeshaws [of the Vermilion] and some Pottawattamie and Miami chiefs [of the upper Wabash] made their appearance, making great protestations of their attachment to the Americans; begged that they might be taken under the cover of our wings, and that the roads through the lands might be made straight, and all the stumbling blocks removed; and that their friends, the neighboring nations, might also be considered in the same point of view.

“I well knew from what principle all this sprung; and, as I had Detroit now in my eye, it was my business to make a straight and clear road for myself to walk, without thinking much of their interest, or anything else but that of opening the road in earnest, by flattery, deception, or any other means that occurred. I told them that I was glad to see them, and was happy to learn that most of the nations on the Wabash and Omi [Maumee] rivers had proved themselves to be men, by adhering to the treaties they had made with the Big Knife last fall, except a few weak minds that had been deluded by the English to come to war—that I did not know exactly who they were, nor much cared; but understood they were a band chiefly composed of almost all the tribes—such people were to be found among all nations—but as these kind of people, who had the meanness to sell their country for a shirt, were not worthy of the attention of warriors, we would say no more about them, and think on subjects more becoming us.

“I told them that I should let the great Council of Americans know of their good behavior, and knew that they would be counted as friends of the Big Knife, and would be always under their protection, and their country secured to them, as the Big Knife had land enough, and did not want any more;—but, if ever they broke their faith, the Big Knife would never again trust them, as they never hold friendship with a people that they find with two hearts;—that they were witnesses of the calamities the British had brought on their countries by their false assertions, and their presents, which was a proof of their weakness; that they saw that all their boasted valor was like to fall to the ground, and they would not come out of the fort, the other day, to try to save the Indians that they flattered to war, and suffered to be killed [at Vincennes] in their sight; and, as the nature of the war had been fully explained to them last fall, they might clearly see that the Great Spirit would not suffer it to be otherwise—that it was not only the case on the Wabash, but everywhere else—that they might be assured that the nations that would continue obstinately to believe the English, would be driven out of the land, and their countries given to those who were more steady friends to the Americans.

“I told them that I expected, for the future, that if any of my people should be going to war through their country, that they would be protected, which should be always the case with their people when among us; and that mutual confidence should continue to exist, &c., &c.

“They replied, that from what they had seen and heard, they were convinced that the Master of Life had a hand in all things—that their people would rejoice on their return—that they would take pains to diffuse what they had heard, through all the nations, and made no doubt of the good effect of it, &c.—and after a long speech in the Indian style, calling all the Spirits to be witnesses, they concluded by renewing the chain of friendship, smoking the sacred pipe, exchanging belts, &c., and I believe, went off really well pleased—[but not able to fathom the bottom of all they had heard, the greatest part of which was mere political lies]—for, the ensuing summer, Captain Shelby, with his own company only, lay for a considerable time in the Wea town [of Ouitanon] in the heart of their country, and was treated in the most friendly manner by all the natives that he saw; and was frequently invited by them to join and plunder what was called ‘the King’s Pasture at Detroit.’ What they meant was to go and steal horses from that settlement.

“Things being now pretty well arranged, Lieutenant Richard Brashear was appointed to the command of the garrison, which consisted of Lieutenants Bayley and Chapline, with forty picked men—Captain Leonard Helm, commandant of the town, Superintendent of Indian Affairs, &c.—Moses Henry, Indian Agent, and Patrick Kennedy, Quartermaster. Giving necessary instruction to all persons that I left in office, on the 20th of March I set sail on board of our galley, which was now made perfectly complete, attended by five armed boats, and seventy men.

“The waters being very high, we soon reached the Mississippi; and the winds favoring us, in a few days we arrived safely at Kaskaskia, to the great joy of our new friends, Captain George and company waiting to receive us.

“On our passage up the Mississippi we had observed several Indian camps, which appeared to us fresh, but had been left in great confusion. This we could not account for, but were now informed that a few days past a party of Delaware warriors came to town [Kaskaskia] and appeared to be very impudent—that in the evening, having been drinking, they said they had come there for scalps and would have them, and flashed a gun at the breast of an American woman present.

“A sergeant and party that moment passing by the house, saw the confusion and rushed in; the Indians immediately fled; the sergeant pursued and killed [some] of them. A party was instantly sent to rout their camps on the river. This was executed the day before we came up, which was the sign we had seen.

“Part of the Delaware nation had settled a town at the forks of the White River, and hunted in the countries on the Ohio and Mississippi. They had, on our first arrival, hatched up a kind of peace with us; but I always knew they were for open war; but never before could get a proper excuse for exterminating them from the country, which I knew they would be loath to leave, and that the other Indians wished them away, as they were great hunters and killed up their game.

“A few days after this, Captain Helm informed me, by express, that a party of traders who were going by land to the falls, were killed and plundered by the Delawares of White River—and that it appeared that their designs were altogether hostile, as they had received a belt from the great council of their nation.

"I was sorry for the loss of our men; otherwise pleased at what had happened; as it would give me an opportunity of showing the other Indians the horrid fate of those who would dare to make war on the Big Knife—and to excel them in barbarity I knew was, and is, the only way to make war and gain a name among the Indians.

"I immediately sent orders to Post Vincennes to make war on the Delawares—to use every means in their power to destroy them—to show no kind of mercy to the men; but to spare the women and children. This order was executed without delay; their camps were attacked in every quarter where they could be found—many fell, and others were brought to Post Vincennes and put to death—the women and children secured, &c.

"They immediately applied for reconciliation; but were informed that I had ordered the war—and that they dare not lay down the tomahawk without permission from me; but if the Indians were agreed, no more blood should be spilt until an express should go to Kaskaskia, which was immediately sent.

"I refused to make peace with the Delawares, and let them know that we never trusted those who had once violated their faith; but that if they had a mind to be quiet, they might; and if they could get any of the neighboring Indians to be security for their good behavior, I would let them alone; but that I cared very little about it, &c.—privately directing Captain Helm how to manage.

"A council was called of all the Indians in the neighborhood; my answer was made public; the Piankeshaws took on themselves to answer for the future good conduct of the Delawares; and the Tobasco's Son, in a long speech, informed them of the baseness of their conduct, and how richly they had deserved the severe blow they had met with—that he had given them permission to settle that country, but not to kill his friends—that they now saw the Big Knife had refused to make peace with them; but that he had become surety for their good conduct, and that they might go and mind their hunting—and that if they ever did any more mischief—pointing to the sacred bow that he held in his hand—which was as much as to say that he himself would for the future chastise them.

“Thus ended the war between us and the Delawares in this quarter much to our advantage; as the nations about said that we were as brave as the Indians and not afraid to put an enemy to death.

“June being the time for the rendezvous at Post Vincennes, every exertion was made in procuring provisions of every species, and making other preparations. I received an express from Kentucky, wherein Colonel [John] Bowman informed me that he could furnish three hundred good men.

“We were now going on in high spirits, and daily expecting troops down the Tennessee; when, on the —, we were surprised at the arrival of Colonel Montgomery with one hundred and fifty men only—which was all we had a right to expect from that quarter in a short time, as the recruiting business went on but slowly; and for the first time, we learned the fall of our paper money. Things immediately put on a different appearance.

“We now lamented that we did not march from Post Vincennes to Detroit; but as we had a prospect of a considerable reinforcement from Kentucky, we yet flattered ourselves that something might be done; at least we might manœuvre in such a manner as to keep the enemy in hot water, and in suspense, and prevent their doing our frontiers much damage. We went on with procuring supplies.

“There is one circumstance very distressing, that of our money’s being discredited, to all intents and purposes, by the great number of traders who come here in my absence, each outbidding the other, giving prices unknown in this country by five hundred per cent, by which the people conceived it to be of no value, and both French and Spaniards refused to take a farthing of it. Provision is three times the price it was two months past, and to be got by no other means than my own bonds, goods, or force.

“Several merchants are now advancing considerable sums of their own property rather than the service should suffer, by which I am sensible they must lose greatly, unless some method is taken to raise the credit of our coin, or a fund to be sent to Orleans for the payment of the expenses of this place,* and did not yet lose sight of our object; and, in order to feel the pulse of the enemy, I detached Major [Godebory Lienetot, a French citizen of Vincennes] who had lately joined us, and a company of volunteers, up the Illinois river—under the pretence of visiting our friends; he was instructed to cross the country, and call at the Wea towns, and then proceed to Post Vincennes, making his observations on the route. This we expected would perfectly cover our designs; and if we saw prudent, we might on his return proceed. Early in June Colonel Montgomery was despatched by water with the whole of our stores; Major [Joseph] Bowman marched the remainder of our troops by land. Myself, with a party of horse, reached Post Vincennes in four days, where the whole safely arrived in a short time after.

“Instead of three hundred men from Kentucky, there appeared about thirty volunteers, commanded by Capt.

* Letter dated Kaskaskia, April 29, 1779, from Col. G. R. Clark to the Governor of Virginia.—Jefferson’s correspondence, i. 454.—Dillon.

McGary. The loss of the expedition was too obvious to hesitate about it. Colonel [John] Bowman had turned his attention against the Shawanees towns, and got repulsed, and his men discouraged.

“The business, from the first had been so conducted as to make no disadvantageous impression on the enemy, in case of a disappointment as they could never know whether we really had a design on Detroit or only a finesse to amuse them, which latter would appear probable. Arranging things to the best advantage was now my principal study. The troops were divided between Post Vincennes, Kaskaskia, Cahokia, and the Falls of Ohio. Colonel Montgomery was appointed to the command of the Illinois; Major Bowman to superintend the recruiting business; a number of officers were appointed to that service; and myself [and Major Lienetot] to take up my quarters at the falls, as the most convenient spot to have an eye over the whole.”

Thus closes the detail of Colonel Clark's proceedings at Post Vincennes.

CHAPTER X.

By Dillon.—During the years 1779 and 1780, many causes contributed to attract a great number of emigrants from the interior of Virginia, and from other States, to the fertile district of Kentucky. (Three hundred large family boats arrived at the Falls of the Ohio, during the spring of 1780. [Butler's History of Kentucky, 99.]—Dillon). Among these causes it is proper to reckon the achievements of Colonel Clark in the west, the temporary triumph of the British arms in some of the Southern States, and the munificent spirit in which the government of Virginia invited adventurous families to take possession of the rich unappropriated lands which it claimed in the regions west of the Allegheny mountains.

The danger which surrounded the first English settlers in these regions began to abate. The ancient French inhabitants of the new county of Illinois had taken the oath of allegiance to the State of Virginia.

In July, 1778, the Congress of the United States directed Brigadier-General McIntosh to collect at Pittsburgh a force of fifteen hundred men for the defence of the western frontiers; and on the 17th of September, 1778, a treaty of peace, friendship, and alliance was concluded at Fort Pitt, between commissioners in behalf of the United States, and the chief men and deputies of the Delaware nation of Indians.*

* Laws United States, i. 302.—Dillon.

In the spring of 1779, Colonel John Todd* bearing the commission of county lieutenant for the County of Illinois, visited Post Vincennes and Kaskaskia for the purpose of organizing a temporary government according to the provisions of the act of the General Assembly of Virginia, of October, 1778. On the 15th of June, 1779, Mr. Todd issued the following proclamation:

“Illinois [County] to-wit: Whereas, from the fertility and beautiful situation of the lands bordering upon the Mississippi, Ohio, Illinois, and Wabash rivers, the taking up the usual quantity of land heretofore allowed for a settlement by the government of Virginia, would injure both the strength and commerce of this country—I do, therefore, issue this proclamation, strictly enjoining all persons whatsoever from making any new settlements upon the flat lands of the said rivers, or within one league of said lands, unless in manner and form of settlements as heretofore made by the French inhabitants, until further orders herein given.

“And in order that all the claims to lands in said county may be fully known, and some method provided for perpetuating by record the just claims, every inhabitant is required as soon as conveniently may be, to lay before the person in each district appointed for that purpose, a memorandum of his or her land, with copies of all their vouchers; and where vouchers have never been given, or are lost, such depositions or certificates as will tend to support their claims,—the memorandum to mention the quantity of land, to whom originally granted, and when—deducing the title through the various occupants to the present possessor.

“The number of adventurers who will shortly overrun

* The same who later was killed at the battle of Blue Licks, Aug. 19, 1782.—H. W. B.

this country renders the above method necessary as well to ascertain the vacant lands as to guard against trespasses which will probably be committed on lands not of record.

“Given under my hand and seal at Kaskaskia, the 15th of June, in the third year of the Commonwealth, 1779.

“JOHN TODD, JR.”

For the preservation of peace and the administration of justice a court of civil and criminal jurisdiction was instituted at Post Vincennes, in June, 1779. The court was composed of several magistrates. Colonel J. M. P. Legras, having been appointed commandant of the town, acted as president of the court, and in some cases exercised a controlling influence over its proceedings.

Adopting in some measure the usages and customs of the early French commandants, the magistrates of the Court of Post Vincennes began to grant or concede tracts of land to the French and American inhabitants of the town, and to different civil and military officers of the country. Indeed it appears that the court assumed the power of granting lands to every applicant.

Before the year 1783, about twenty-six thousands acres of land were granted to different individuals. From 1783 to 1787, when the practice was stopped by General Harmar, the grants amounted to twenty-two thousand acres.* They were given in tracts varying in quantities from four hundred acres to the size of a house lot.

Besides these small concessions there were some grants of tracts several leagues square. The commandant and magistrates, after having exercised this power for some time began to believe that they had the right to dispose of all that large tract of land which, in 1742, had been granted by the Piankeshaw Indians, for the use of the French inhabitants of Post Vincennes.

* Letter written in 1790 from Winthrop Sargent to George Washington. Letter dated Vincennes, January 19, 1802, from Gov. Harrison to James Madison.—Jefferson's correspondence, 1-163. The above group of notes are by Dillon.

“Accordingly an arrangement was made, by which the whole country to which the Indian title was supposed to be extinguished, was divided between the members of the court, and orders to that effect entered on their journal; each member absenting himself from the Court on the day that the order was to be made in his favor, so that it might appear to be the act of his fellows only.”

By the Editor.—Meanwhile the partisans of Detroit with such savages as they could still hold to their allegiance, carried on more organized attacks on Kentucky, whose people in large force, made several incursions against the Shawnees in Ohio and burned their villages on Mud River and the Miamis.

Nor did this war end with that of the Revolution; but the Virginians and French of the Illinois held the country involved until it was conceded to us by the treaty of peace with Great Britain.

The great statesman, Jefferson, early foresaw what might be the result of Clark's campaign, saying it “would, if successful, have an important bearing ultimately in establishing the northwestern boundary.” And it did.—H. W. B.

*CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 5, P. 73.

[GAGE TO HALDIMAND.]

NEW YORK March 16, 1772.

SIR—I have now the satisfaction to acquaint you that it is His Majesty's pleasure the battery should be completed and made durable, and that barracks should be built for the troops at Pensacola.

With regard to the batteries, I believe there is nothing more to be done to make them lasting but to pile their foundations and to face them with masonry.

I have further considered your proposal to build block houses for lodging the troops, and to raise a building for the officers of the Regiment and those at the Garrison. I believe upon the whole it will be the best method, but the block houses should be made as airy as possible and not crowded with too many men. You will find in the roll which is sent by this opportunity, a draught of a block house of Captain Sowers' invention, to let in air, which if you approve of and nothing better can be contrived you will order to be executed. And that the men may have room sufficient, I propose a seventh block house, as you will observe in the plan sent you. But if you judge it useless, you will act for the best.

I don't think we could build block houses cheaper than those made at the batteries and should be glad you would direct the Engineer to make the same contract for those that are to be built as was made for the others. But if the situation of Pensacola is more favourable than that of the harbour for bringing materials or finding workmen, in that case an abatement should be made in the price. They must be built of seasonable timber and the sooner they are begun the better.

* The following letters [pages 290-457] are literal copies taken from letters in the Canadian Archives at Ottawa.

A plan of the building proposed for the officers of the Regiment and Garrison is also sent herewith, and we must begin it and finish it as soon as we can.

You will be so good to order the Engineer to prepare the lime and brick for the foundation, chimines [chimneys], &c., and if he can begin the foundation the better, and he will send information immediately of the number of masons you will want from this place and what time they should be with you.

The timber for this building should be well seasoned. Capt. Sowers tells me you had a great deal of timber cut, but that it may have been applied to other purposes. If it is expended, more timber must be procured, and cut at the time of year when the sap is down. You see that we shall want information also in this respect, and to know what number of carpenters will be required from this place and the time they should be at Pensacola.

You will order Lieut. Hutchins to draw bills upon the Chief Engineer for the expenses attending these works, but all his drafts must first have your approbation, and all his accounts also approved by you. This method will be regular and save me a deal of trouble.

The fate of Fort Chartres is decided. It will be abandoned and a body of troops posted at Kashaskies. I believe nothing useful could be sent you from thence that would bear the expense of carriage to Pensacola. There is a galley said to be good and well contrived, but I don't know if she could go by sea from the Mississippi to Pensacola.

Lieutenant Hutchins can give you the best information about it.

I am with great regard and esteem, Sir,

Your most obedient, humble servant,

THOS. GAGE.

TO BRIGADIER GENERAL HALDIMAND,
Pensacola.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 69, P. 270.

N. ORLEANS, July 6, 1772.

[WILLING TO HALDIMAND].

SIR—At the request of my Brother, Thomas Willing, Esq., of Philadelphia I have taken the liberty of addressing you to acquaint you with my arrival here with a barge of goods suitable to the Indian Illinois trade, for account of Messrs. Willing & Morris & Co., and finding since my arrival that Major H. Hamilton and the troops had destroyed Fort Chartis and abandoned it with all the troops except fifty men who remained to protect the Inhabitants until they could remove their effects, I think it most prudent to form some plan for the Benefit of the Company, and I being assured by my Brother that I might rely on your friendship and protection, &c., have to request of you to get me a permission to trade and settle a Plantation and Place of Trade upon the River Pearlart, 9 or 10 leagues from New Orleans on the English side of the Lake.

I propose setting off tomorrow with my goods to Manshack and there to stay with my goods untill further hear from you, or get permission, the last of which your friend T. W. will gladly pay. Should there be any security necessary, W. & Morris will be security, or I make no doubt you'll receive or have received from my Brother mentioning me to you; if so, I hope there will be no difficulty, as you'll undoubtedly grant him that fav'r. Should be glad of a line from you with a letter of Recommendation to the Officers up the River under your Command, will oblige your

Very h'mble Servant, &c.,

JAMES WILLING.

TO BRIGADIER GENERAL HALDIMAND,

At Pensacola.

Endorsed: James Willing, July 6, '72.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 185, P. 2.

[BENTLEY TO CARLETON].

Illinois Pt.

To His Excellency, General Carlton, Governor of the Province of Canada, etc., etc., etc., Residing at Quebec:

The petition of Daniel Murray, Agent for the Contractors, Patrick Kennedy and Thomas Bentley, all of the Village of Kaskaskia, in the Country aforesaid, Merchants, humbly sheweth:

That since Captain Hugh Lord's departure from this country and Mr. De Rocheblave being vested with the Government, we, your humble petitioners and His Majesty's most faithful Subjects, find to our most bitter grief our liberties trampled upon and common justice, in almost all cases, refused us. That on our presuming to remonstrate against such injustice, the said Mr. De Rocheblave will not listen to us, informing us that such are the laws of France, which he orders us to follow, telling us he knows no other, refusing the English laws proclaimed here by Colonel John Wilkins and hitherto followed by his successors to the command, that we being the only English Merchants or inhabitants of this place, we take the liberty to represent to you our unhappy situation, and lay our grievances before you, hoping from you a speedy and immediate redress, for without such 'twill be impossible for an Englishman to remain in this country, as the said Mr. De Rocheblave is daily imposing upon us, by refusing the appointment of our suits and denying us the justice which by Law and Equity we have a right to demand at his hands, both for the security of our property as well as our persons, neither of which we look upon to be safe under his government. As Englishmen and English laws are to our great mortification despised by the public in general, and appears to be so by the said Mr. De Rocheblave in particular. That with such inhabitants as we happen to have any controversy respecting accounts or demands, unavoidable in business, he acts in the first place as Counsel for such against us, and afterwards as Judge. He one day decides a matter in our favour and immediately issues out a sentence in favour of the opposite party. That contrary to our wise constitution and to the great detriment of the Merchant, he acts in the capacity of a Trader, buying and selling goods both wholesale and retail, and has been known to make proposals for the purchasing of a cargo [last summer] to a very considerable amount, which he would have effected had his credit been equivalent thereto.

Public advertisements with respect to property he orders in a most arbitrary manner to be torn down, which he has been known to do twice in one day. Protest and appeal from his sentence he pays no regard to, seizing notwithstanding of such for the payment agreeable to his sentence, refusing undeniable security.

He forbids the trading of liquor to savages under the severe penalty of two thousand dollars, and those very savages, notwithstanding such orders, being constantly drunk when in the village: upon an inquiry made, accused [him] even to his face of being the person that intoxicated them with Rum or Taffid, which they said he bartered to them for beavers, otters, etc.

Such is his partiality in favour of the French that upon the approach of savages Coming to war against their enemies last spring, he sent out a party of men under French colours to know the design of their coming. That such partiality is not to be wondered at when we consider that the said Mr. De Rocheblave, on this country being taken possession of by the English, abandoned his property here and preferred the Spanish government to ours, taking the oath of allegiance thereto.

That it is not within the cognizance of any person in the country, so far as we can learn, that the said Mr. De Rocheblave has ever been qualified by taking the oaths of allegiance and Supremacy previously necessary toward the holding of such an office.

That, abstracted from all manner of prejudice whatsoever, we do not look upon the said Mr. De Rocheblave from his behaviour at all times and partiality against us on all occasions, to be by any means an Englishman's friend, having endeavoured to throw aspersions upon the character of some of us without the least foundation [and merely thereby intending to veil his own iniquitious practice], openly countenancing known Villians in opposition against us, and even encouraging the Savages to rob our boats, whose sole motive was trading amongst them in their winter grounds. That Mr. Murray, one of your humble petitioners, acting here as Agent for the Contractors, applied to Mr. De Rocheblave to oblige Mr. Viviat, a Merchant in this place [who had obtained a Certificate from Captain Lord] on the said Murray's name, on his, the said Captain Lord's, leaving this, implying that he had already bought provisions sufficient for the subsistence of two Companies of Soldiers for twelve months, to lodge the same according to the said Certificate, which he hitherto has refused to do, notwithstanding it was further enforced in consequence of a Lieutenant Governor's coming to Post Vincennes who might have occasion for the same, yet the same application was of no effect.

We humbly hope that your Excellency will be kind enough to compassionate our situation and grant us such redress and that in the most speedy manner possible, as British Subjects have a right to expect at the hands of an English Governor, and your petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

Dated at Kaskaskia 10th April, 1777.

T. BRENTLEY [BENTLEY].

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 185, P. 10.

MISILAMACKINAC, 1st August, 1777.

[BENTLEY TO MURRAY].

DEAR SIR—I hope this will find you on your return from Post Vincent and doubt not but that you will have explained the nature of our complaints against Mr. De Rocheblave to Gov.^r Abbott, as you proposed. Little did I think it would have become so very necessary, being utterly ignorant of the mischief this man was hatching against me. You will plainly perceive that he has done this in order to get the start of me, thinking by such means to throw discredit on my report. You see what Villainy the mind of man is capable of. But what, indeed, may we not expect of a man like him, after having taken the oath of allegiance to the three kingdoms of France, Spain and Great Britain! Such a man would not, in my mind, hesitate on the arrival of the Americans to enlist himself under their banner, and even to be one of the first to do so.

You must know that I am now a prisoner, Rochblave having accused me of such correspondence with the Americans as occasioned Major De Peyster, who commands at this place, to put me in custody on my arrival here.

I am, therefore, in consequence thereof, confined to the fort, nor am I yet acquainted with the particulars of my accusation. Bonner is I believe, my accuser, in conjunction with Rochblave, and you well know how they both stand affected towards me: that nothing will be wanting on their parts to complete my ruin. However, I rely entirely on my innocence to extricate me from this dilemma, as God Almighty, who knows my inmost thoughts and actions, knows likewise I do not deserve such treatment.

I beg the favour that on receipt of this you will write a letter to the Governor at Post Vincent, desiring he will forward the same to the Governor at Detroit, wherein you will please to mention everything you can recollect which has passed between us on the North American subject, and particularly with respect to Barges which went down the Ohio last Autumn. As you can evidence for me that on the arrival of such news at Kaskaskia, finding that Mr. Rocheblave did not immediately send off an Express to give information thereon, I mentioned to you that it would be necessary for us to send one in case he did not, soon after which he despatched one himself. You must recollect also I often repeated to you how happy we were to be out of the way and in a country where we could act a Neutral part. You well know my mind on the subject and how much I abhorred the thought of interfering on either side, ever blaming the obstinacy and violence committed on both sides, as also how much I wished for the arrival of King's troops, after expressing my surprise that such were not sent to prevent the Americans sending powder, etc., up the Mississippi, and that you must recollect to have heard me often repeat that I had rather see a hundred King's troops arrive than two thousand North Americans. You know the injustice done me by Rocheblave on many occasions, which you will please explain at large, as also the cause of our intended complaints against him to general Carlton and the petition on the Subject which we should have sent had not Kennedy, after promising, refused to sign it. You were present when he decided the affair of Bonner's note to Bazille la Chapelle in my favour, and you were also present when, a few days after, he sent Mr. La Chance with a party of men to seize for the payment, notwithstanding I appealed from his judgment to the Governor, who was soon expected at Post Vincent, and offered security. You likewise know that he refused to oblige Mr. Viviat to give an account of his transaction with Bonner, that I might know the value of Bonner's note given to Mr. Viviat in my name for fourteen hundred odd livres, payable in Beaver at five livres a pound, which he seized for the payment. You know perfectly well that he set aside my mortgage on Bonner's house, which was duly recorded in the Secretary's books, and sold the house for the payment of Iandron's mortgage upon the same, which was not registered until several months after mine, as also he ordered to be torn down two advertisements which I put up to the public in one day protesting against the sale. Omit not to mention Bonner's Villainy to me, and how much he was countenanced, even afterwards, by Rocheblave, as also how he countenanced Givault in his behaviour, permitting him to stay several days in Kaskaskia after I applied to him to oblige to return to his duty. I am not conscious that any part of my conduct will admit of an ambiguous interpretation, and must imagine that 'tis the corn that was taken from Mathero's that he wants to make a handle of. Some hints have been given me that he would even insinuate I have supplied Gunpowder, etc., to the Americans. My invoices will show the quantity of gunpowder and guns I brought up with me. If Hamilton can prove that I sold 40 guns to Motard in March last and that I left a considerable quantity on my coming away, as also what gunpowder I left behind me, and the remainder being to the best of my recollection little more than three hundred weight, will show whether it was too much to be expected for my winter's trade amongst the Savages, as well as at Kaskaskias, and at Kaskaskias, where in fact I sold the most. I beg you will include at the same time a copy of my letter left with you wherein I instructed you to close up the matter about the corn immediately upon the arrival of Captain Johnson, by Mathews' and Muckle Murray's affidavits. I do not know if you were privy to Mr. Rocheblave's offering me three hundred weight of gunpowder for sale last autumn. If you have knowledge thereof 'twill be right to mention it in your letter. I cannot call to mind whether it was before or after he sold some Gunpowder to Mr. Billtre. Hamilton can prove that I left orders in case the Americans arrived to hide my goods in trunks, which will show I had not the least intention of supporting them. On the contrary, Hamilton and Mathews can prove, notwithstanding these Americans sent me orders by the former to give no more orders to the Delaware Indians, I have sold them powder constantly since, in opposition to their orders.

Please to include Hamilton's and Matthews' affidavits in your letter, as also Muckle Murray's should be there, and when you have finished your letter you will do well to make oath that the contents of such a letter of such a date is a just and true relation of facts. This you will be kind enough to accompany with your letter, and of all such affidavits please make a duplicate or even triplicate for fear of accidents.

I am extremely sorry to give you this trouble, but am so well convinced of your good will to serve injured innocence that the nature of my case will sufficiently apologize to you for the same.

All I wish is that I may be at liberty to return immediately to Kaskaskias that I may avail myself of such evidence as may be necessary to clean up my character, which you well know I can do without the least difficulty. Should Governor Johnson be arrived you can easily convince him how falsely I am accused, when Rocheblave's malice will appear in a most conspicuous light to any impartial mind.

I know my poor wife will be much afflicted at my situation, and you will endeavor all in your power to encourage her to keep up her spirits, that my affairs may not suffer any other cause than that which my absence alone can occasion. No person knows better than herself how innocent I am of everything that can be laid to my charge, but what is not villainy capable of, and more especially place in a man like Rocheblave, who does not [who does not fr?] understanding sufficient to put a gloss upon actions of his own, however black, and to render criminal such as are most innocently intended in others. However I trust in God that He will release me from my enemy's hands and that He will doubly load him with that infamy which they would so unjustly heap upon me, such being the reward due to their actions.

I am, dear Sir,

Your very obliged h'ble serv't,

T. B.

TO DAN'L MURRAY,

At Kaskaskias.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 122, P. 21.

[BUTLER'S EXAMINATION BEFORE ROCHEBLAVE.]

[Translation].

Today the 15th February, 1778, 8 o'clock in the morning, there appeared in the audience chamber of this fort, by our order the said Henry Butler of Irish origin living six years in the Province of Pennsylvania, who, after legal pressure had been brought to bear, was ready to tell the truth to the following questions:

They ask him when and how he came to this country.

In reply: "he had arrived several days ago and was forced to bear arms for the rebels, had left Fort Pitt three months before with three others and joined the Sieur [John] Morin, whom he found hunting on Belle Riviere."

They asked him what was then going on in the said fort as well as in the neighboring provinces.

He "had heard it said that the King's troops were scattered through the neighboring villages of the said fort and their General was at a place called White Horse." He was asked if he had heard that Philadelphia was taken and how? He replied that "he heard that the people of Philadelphia had raised the chain and had given entrance to the vessels of His Majesty."

They ask him if he had seen any engagement between the King's troops and the Rebel army.

He replied that "he heard said that there had been a battle on a little river called the 'Schuyler' which the Rebels had lost."

They asked him where was Congress?

He replied it was then at Lancaster, but had since retired to Carlyle.

He was asked if he knew the armament prepared for this country.

He replied that he had left the party before they had learned that.

He was asked if he knew George Morgan and where he was.

He said he knew him and that he had gone to Philadelphia to seek for money to pay for the provisions for the troops which he had furnished, and he had not yet returned.

They asked him if he knew anything else.

He replied that he heard them say the affaire would finish this spring; that the people were inclined to the King's party, and were not contented by the oath they had exacted from house to house, on the contrary; he added they had brought the prisoners taken by the Royal Army to a place called Winchester.

Read to him he made his declaration and said it contained the truth and signed herewith, our sheriff witnessed and signed.

HIS

HENRY [X] BUTLER.

MARK

ROCHEBLAVE, commandant.

PATT KENNEDY.

CHARLES GOGIS.

CAR BONNEAUX, Sheriff.

And today the 16th of the same month continued the same questioning of the affairs we were engaged in under legal oath taken again by the said Butler, they asked him what was the strength of the garrison and the name of the Brigadier-General.

He replied: The Brigadier-General was called Hand, formerly surgeon of the 18th Regiment, commanding there, and had nearly 100 men, mostly deserters from the troops of His Majesty. The thing he could not explain clearly was: Were the deserters, settlers [colonists]?

He was asked if they had a large number of barges and boats prepared.

He said that they had nearly eighty ready; that they worked at others every day; that they had more, but a storm swamped seventeen.

They asked if he knew anyone named W. Ling, to which he replied, no. They asked him: what did the pay bring? He replied he had received nothing for the three months he had been at Fort Pitt. They asked him what the people thought of the decent of the Apalaches.

He replied that they had been quiet until the building of the barges, since then they thought it was for the evasion of the chiefs and congress, that the people determined to stop them if they wished to escape by there.

Read to him this declaration he said it contained the truth, and had nothing to add or change, to augment nor diminish, and made his mark not knowing how to sign the year and day.

HIS

HENRY [X] BUTLER.

MARK

PATT KENNEDY, Witness.

JAMIS MORIN, Witness.

CAR BONNEAUX, Sheriff.

Endorsed examination of Henry Butler at Post Vincennes before Mons. Rocheblave.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 122, P. 512.

[MONTGOMERY TO DE PEYSTER].

SIR—Mr. Philip Dejean, having at the instance and through the intercession of Mr. Bentley, obtained permission from the Governor and Council of this State, to come to this Country on his Parole, and applying to me to go to Detroit, I offered to comply with his request on his taking the oath of neutrality, which he did not think proper to do, notwithstanding which, as he is extremely anxious to have his family with him until a cartel takes place for the exchange of prisoners, and well knowing the disposition of the state of Virginia under which I have the Honour to serve, that it is not their intention by any means to oppress, but as far as in them lays to alleviate all such persons as the fate of arms shall deliver into their hands. I have, therefore, at his particular requisition, granted him a Party under my protection to go to Detroit in order, if you should think meet; to conduct his family to this country. I hope they will be properly received, begging leave to assure you that I am inspired thereto by no other motives whatsoever than those of humanity, in which I have no doubt, from your known character, you will most readily concur with me.

I have the honor to be, sir,

Your most obedient and very humble servant,

JNO. MONTGOMERY,

Lieutenant Colonel Commandant.

Fort Clark at Kaskaskias in the Illinois Country, 6th July, 1780.

ART. SCHUYLER DE PEYSTER, ESQ.

In Council March 4th, 1780.

On the application of Colonel Legras and Mr. Bentley, of St. Vincent, on behalf of Philip Dejean, a friend of theirs, the lieutenant governor is advised to permit the said Dejean to go to Colonel Clark's headquarters in the Illinois on parole. [A copy].

FER'K H. RANDOLPH, Cl'k Council.

This certifies that Mr. Dejean has permission on parole to go to Colonel Clark's headquarters.

"PORTESFIELD,"

Lt. Col. T. T. M.

25th March, 1780.

WM. YOUNG:

From Lt. Col. Montgomery, commanding at Fort Clark, of the 6th of July, 1780, to Major De Peyster.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 122, P. 40.

[Translation]

February 28, '78.

[Extract of a letter from M. Rocheblave to Bosseron].

By a deserter who arrived at Fort Pitt we have learned that the people of Philadelphia, having secured the ear of Congress have raised the chain that forbade the vessels of the King to come, and has by that means entered under the obedience of His Majesty, that congress had fallen precipitately toward the mountains after the complete routing of the army, that the people sighed ardently for Peace to release them from the most frightful misery, and that the Chiefs, to save themselves, turned their efforts toward the road to Fort Pitt. A batteau descending to the said Fort took Sieurs Becquet and their goods. Mr. la Chance was subjected to the same thing with his brandy, of which the settlers never received. The displeasure of the country proves very certain that they should manage to make little use of the force there. Certain rumors of the bad disposition of the savages makes me engage to speak to the Chiefs of the Wolfs.

I pray you, if you can, come and see me.

BY THE EDITOR.

The letter of Edward Abbott from Vincennes shortly after his arrival in April, 1777, to take charge of that Post and district as their "Lieutenant Governor," shows the neglect of their affairs by the British owners.

Ever since the conquest, except the fiat of a "Commandant," or arbitrary edicts of a "Judge Advocate," appointed from the "Province of Illinois," the French and Indian mixed inhabitants of this section had drifted along some fourteen years without a civil government. Yet in this remote wilderness they were at peace with the friendly savages, and had no concern in the wars and turmoil of the country abroad.

They bartered their furs with home or foreign traders, hired to them, and as "Engages" in that business, roved with distant savages, or as voyagers went to "town" as they called New Orleans, or went elsewhere up and down western rivers.

They readily obeyed the governing power that was, or claimed to be, no matter how often changed, and paid a most grateful homage to the Father Priests who visited them. They had, nor wanted, but little and were content.

Though Captain Abbott says "anarchy" prevailed, he meant their lack of the laws to which he was accustomed. His letter shows that he found the inhabitants polite, sociable, obedient and altogether a light-hearted and happy people.

In these respects Vincennes was a type of other permanent French settlements, such as those at Cahokia, Fort Chartres, Kaskaskia, or elsewhere in the Northwest.

The exceptions were the trade places that had become a refuge for outcasts or other vile men, as at Peoria, Wea and the Miamis. Here, without the restraining presence of good women of their own race, and that of the Missionary Fathers, personal broils were rife, as well as the most flagrant debauchery of the native savages.

At the time of which we write there was no fort at Vincennes, and Governor Abbott, assisted by the French, spent a part of 1777 "trying to stockade the place," for which "Rocheblave," then Commandant at Kaskaskia, was "sending cannon from the Illinois."*

He named the stockade "Fort Sackville," after Lord George Sackville, otherwise known as Lord George Germain. Under Lord North's rule he was Secretary of State for the American Colonies, and during the War of the Revolution opposed every measure, short of absolute submission, to end that contest.

Aside from his orders to go, Captain Abbott's personal "reasons both for remaining at Vincennes and leaving it were to avoid expense." He had a deep "regret for the poor people attached to the Crown, who feel themselves cast off, but determined to defend Fort Sackville."†

He quit Vincennes late in the winter of 1778 and drew his salary as its Lieutenant Governor from April 1, 1777, to July 20, 1778, at the rate of two hundred pounds sterling yearly.‡

He had no Indian or border experience, and by education and habit was a refined, honest and kind-hearted gentleman in the Artillery service.

* Abbott to Sir Guy Carleton, Vincennes, July 9, 1777. Canadian Archives.

† Abbott to Sackville, April 3, 1778. Canadian Archives.

‡ Canadian Archives.

Without following him in the meantime, "Captain Abbott" was later ordered by General Haldimand to embark with a detachment of Royal Artillery for Dominica, or if that island is not restored on his arrival here, to go to Barbadoes."*

†Now to Captain Abbott's letter.—H. W. B.

* Haldimand to Abbott, Quebec, Oct. 20, 1778. Canadian Archives.

† See next page, page 313.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES Q, COLONIAL OFFICE RECORDS

VOL. 14, Page 48.

[ABBOTT TO CARLETON.]

Copy of a letter from Lieutenant Governor Abbott, Superintendent, dated St. Vincennes, 25th May, 1777:

SIR—I have the honor of acquainting your Excellency of my arrival the 19th inst. The short time, and trouble with the Indians, &c, have not permitted my taking a general review of the affairs of this district.

Since the conquest of Canada no person bearing His Majesty's commission has been to take possession; from this your Excellency may easily imagine what anarchy reigns.

I must do the inhabitants justice for the respectful reception I met with, and for their readiness in obeying the orders I thought necessary to issue.

The Wabache is perhaps one of the finest rivers in the world; on its banks are several Indian towns, the most considerable the Ouiga [Wea], where, it is said, there are 1,000 men capable to bear arms. I found them so numerous and needy, I could not pass without great expense. The presents, though very large, were in a manner despised, saying their ancient Father [the French] never spoke to them without a barn* full of goods.

Having no troops and only a handful of French, obliged me to acquiesce in part of their inhabitants' demands.

* This word is very obscure in the original, and it may be meant for cabin.

which has occasioned a much greater expense than I could have imagined; but I believe it not thrown away, as I left them seemingly well disposed for His Majesty's service.

I have drawn on Mr. Dunn for seven thousand five hundred and thirty-two pounds six shillings and ten pence half penny New York currency and request your Excellency will order payment. I have likewise taken the liberty of drawing on Mr. Dunn for 6,428 livres in favor of Jean Baptiste Racine, dit [alias] St. Marie, who has acted as commandant of this place since it was conceded to His Majesty. The fair character he bears, with the certificate annexed to his account makes me think it just. I hope your Excellency will excuse the incorrectness of this as I am every minute called away and have not a moment to myself.

I beg leave to mention Mr. Edgar, the bearer of this, who has had a great deal of trouble, paid all the expenses of Government without the least gratification, and without whom I could not have kept the accounts in any order from the multiplicity of affairs. I offered him payment which he refused. He came with me to see the country and can much better inform you of it than I can, who was continually employed.

[This person was John Edgar, a merchant in the Indian trade at Detroit. Of Scotch-Irish descent, his sympathy later drew him to the American side of the war then being fought so bitterly with Great Britain and her Indian allies. He staked all, and for a time, lost all on the issue.

For talking in favor of the Americans, and especially of his horror of the capture or murder of their women and children by the savages, he was imprisoned, first at Detroit, and later sent in irons to Quebec. However, he escaped on the way, going first to Boston and soon thereafter settled permanently at Kaskaskia.

The Congress of the United States, April 7, 1798, passed "An Act for the relief of the refugees from the British provinces of Canada and Nova Scotia," agreeable to which, the commissioners under it, in their report of May 8, 1800, state that Mr. John Edgar was "entitled to a special rate of allowance of two thousand acres of land." Adding that "he rendered many important services" and that his losses were very great and his sufferings still greater."*

He was an active and sagacious business man, and under the more favorable conditions in Illinois, soon recovered his earlier losses. With all this he was very generous to the needy. He was hospitable, and at his mansion, the finest in Kaskaskia, he and his wife were famous entertainers. It was a welcome resort of fashionables at home, or prominent visitors. And when General La Fayette was there in April, 1825, he was Col. Edgar's guest. In the meanwhile Edgar had become the largest land owner in the State, and prominent as a citizen of Illinois; on the bench as a judge, in the territorial and State legislature, in military affairs, and in the commercial growth of the State.—H. W. B.]

I shall send off in a few days toward Fort Pitt to see what is doing there. I enclose a note sent me from Mons. Rocheblave which shows the Spaniards' intention towards us, and which corresponds with other intelligence which I have had. By the next opportunity I hope to have it in my power to send a circumstantial account of this place.

I must not neglect mentioning a Mr. Ramsey.

[James Ramsey who subscribes himself "Sub-Lieutenant of His Majesty's 42 regiment and Judge Advocate of the Province of Illinois" in 1768, with power and authority to examine the land titles of the Province of Illinois and administer the oath of allegiance to its inhabitants. And the French at Vincennes accordingly took such oath before him.*

* American State Papers, Vol. 1, Public Lands, page 106, edition of 1832.

He was appointed to this position Nov. 6, 1768, by John Wilkin, Commandant of the Illinois at Fort Chartres.—H. W. B.] who had been here about nine years ago from the the Illinois.

I would beg your Excellency would give me orders concerning the land at this place, for few of them have any proper grants though possessed near thirty years.

I have the honor to be with respect

Your Excellency's most Obedient Hum'l Serv't,

EDWARD ABBOTT,

Lieut. Governor & Superintendent of St. Vincennes.

As it is necessary for a Commissary of Indian Affairs at this place I could wish your Excellency would approve of Mr. Edgar a person well qualified for it. [See Amer. State Papers, Pub. Lands P. 106-110.]

To His Excellency Sir Guy Carleton.

Endorsed: Copy of a letter from Lieut. Governor Abbott, Superintendent, dated St. Vincennes 26th May 1777.

In Sir Guy Carleton's [No. 32] of 11th August, 1777.

* The old Land Office Records at Vincennes since removed to the State Archives at Indianapolis.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 122, P. 48.

DETROIT, April 25, 1778.

[ABBOTT TO CARLETON.]

SIR—I left St. Vincenne the third of february, and after a painful journey of thirty-three days through the woods, arrived here the seventh of March.

I once flattered myself [as I had the honor of informing your Excellency] of being able to remain without incurring any great expence, experience has convinced me to the contrary, which determined me to leave the place before the Indians returned from their winter Hunt, knowing they would be much exasperated, my not making large presents.

I hope your Excellency will approve my conduct. It was the only alternative left under the restrictions you was pleased to lay on me. It was not possible for me to meet thousands of savages without presents of ammunition, Liquor and Merchandise. Notwithstanding every precaution in my power, I have been obliged to incurr a great expence to keep the Indians in the Crown's interest, for which I have drawn on Mr. Dunn.

The necessity and the nature of my situation, I hope, will induce your Excellency to order payment, however unfortunate I may have been to fall under your displeasure.

The utility of a Person to command at St. Vincenne to prevent the savages entering into the Rebel service, I submit to your Excellency, if this is necessary, it must of course, be attended with expence.

I enclose the instructions I left with Major Beaulow, senior officer at St. Vincenne.

I have the honour to be your Excellency's most obedient and most humble servant,

EDWARD ABBOTT.

I enclose a copy of a letter sent me from St. Vincenne, which arrived this morning.

To HIS EXCELLENCY SIR GUY CARLETON.

[Haldimand Collection].

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 122, P. 75.

COUNCIL HELD WITH THE INDIANS AT DETROIT, JUNE-JULY, 1778, BY THE ENGLISH LIEUT. GOVERNOR HAMILTON.

DETROIT, June 29th, 1778.

At a conference with the Ouiattonons, Quinquabones [Kickapoos] and Mascoutins were Present:

Lieut. Governor Hamilton, John Hay deputy agent; Capt. McKee; sworn interpreters; Charles Beaubin and Isidore Chesne.

OUIATTONONS [WEAS].

War Chiefs.

Village Chiefs.

Au, qua, sa, ca,
Mau, wee, shinga,
Nee, Mee, Ca,
Packing, qoi, shinga,
Cha, ha,

Qui, qua, po, qois,
Me, lou, e, son, ata,
Ta, pa, tia.

QUIQUABONES [KICKAPOOS].

War Chiefs.

Village Chiefs.

Egh, kee, too, wa,
Miquetto,

Mahimamba,
Pi, e, mash, kee, canny,

and thirty warriors.

Mahinamba spoke on a Calumet or pipe.

Father!

You see here a pipe that came from your hands. It has been round the Nations on the Ouabach and the Illinois, and has had the effect you said it would have when we smoked out of it. We felt our Hearts and minds at ease. The person whom you sent with this pipe told us that after it had been round the Villages in our neighborhood it should return from whence it came, for which reason we present it to you.

A PIPE.

Qui-qua-po-quois then spoke and declared the satisfaction his Nation felt on receiving the above mentioned Pipe and a road Belt and invitation to come to Detroit, that they had forced their march, the Delawares having informed them the Rebels from Virginia were on their way towards them; that they had not, however, met with the least obstacle in their way towards them, but found the road traced by their father to be very plain and even.

He then spoke with a green Belt of Wampum, which denoted the uprightness of their intentions, and was the custom of their ancestors.

PRESENTED A GREEN BELT.

Sa-pa-tia then spoke:

Father!

The road you have traced for us is so clear and good that our Women and children may follow it, we like it, and think it is by permission of the Great Spirit above, that we frequent it. I am sent here by the War Chiefs of the Nation to know your will. They smoaked out of the pipe you sent us and addressed themselves to you, as there are many bad birds [evil minded people] who come whistling about our ears. We hope you will set us right and have compassion on our Women and Children.

SIX STRINGS OF WAMPUM.

Ma-hi-nam-ba then presented a pipe painted green to show the sincerity with which his nation acted towards their Father.

He then presented one for the Qui-qua-bones and Mascoutins, saying their Chiefs had authorised him to do so and to assure their Father that they had no other will than his, and were happy to find a Father who would take pity on them and assist them.

That chiefs then present had each a tribe.

Cha-ha, War Chief, spoke:

Father!

I am a War Chief, but speak on Wampum that came from our Village Chiefs or those remaining of them, for you know the loss we have met with. The great Spirit was kind to us in our distress and inspired us with sense to look towards you. We return thanks to the master of Life for having taken pity on us. We are happy to have found the Road good, as we hope by your means we shall soon meet some of those birds called Big knives [Rebels but particularly Virginians]; our young men will wait our return, and meet us with great joy. Our Chiefs have never known what it is to disappoint anybody and will not begin with you.

Eight strings of Wampum.

Lieutenant Governor:

Children!

I have listened to you with attention. I am glad to find you did not meet with any obstacle in your way. You are welcome, as I know the loss you have met with in the death of your great chief Wa-bene-Kiah and his son and some others, has justly grieved you very much. I shall condole with you before I enter into any discourse.

Then, according to their custom, condoled with them, by giving white wampum, black strouds, &c., &c., to cover the graves and bones of their dead, and told them they should get a small quantity of Rum every day while they remained here, and when they went away would receive a little to take to their villages, &c.

Tomorrow evening I shall meet you again and let you know [according to your desire] my sentiments, as well as those of all the nations in this neighborhood.

In the meantime here is a party of my children, the Poutawattamies, who are going to war. I am glad you will have an opportunity to see them before they go away, by which you may judge of the intentions of the rest.

Lieut. Governor then presented a war axe to Peemembik-aetack, Poutawattamie war chief, with the usual recommendation of sparing the blood of the aged women and children, and that as they shewed a firm attachment to His Majesty and government in taking up the axe at his request, it was hoped and expected that they would lay it down when required in the same obedient manner.

The above War Chief then sang the war song and expressed his resolution of paying the greatest attention to what he might hear from his Father, who was his, as well as their Nation's support.

An Outawa and a Chippewa War Chief being present by accident, likewise sung the war song which was followed by a War Chief of the Qui-qua-bones.

The Lieut. Governor returned them thanks for this mark of their attachment and in particular to the Qui-qua-bones, who he said he was convinced intended acting with the same vigour as the rest of their Brethren, his children.

The weather being bad the 30th June, the Conference did not begin till the 1st July, when the above mentioned persons were present.

Lieut. Governor Hamilton spoke:

Children!

You are assembled here to hear what I have to say to you. I pray you to pay attention, and I shall also hear what you may have to say.

Six strings Wampum to each nation.

Children!

I am happy that you found the road so clear, as you expressed to me the 29th June. I hope that your young men, &c, will trace the same path, and come in to see their Father. I should like to communicate to you the news we have received, and what I have already communicated to all my children.

The Rebels at the beginning of these troubles had the advantage in Canada. At that time we had nothing to apprehend or to fear and had no occasion to have a number of Troops. The Indians in this neighborhood at the beginning of this affair came to me and demanded an axe to act against the Rebels, who had rebelled against their King and who meant to inhabit their lands, I told them—Children! You had better wait untill we hear further; perhaps the King may command you to take the axe, that we may all act in concert throughout the Colonies. What could they have done last war if the King had not given them assistance? I speak to you of these things knowing you will know I speak the truth. I speak to you who are an ancient nation. You know the last war the Spanish joined the French and were at last obliged to ask peace. The English Forces have taken New York, Boston and Philadelphia and driven the Rebels wherever they dare face them both by land and sea, and I believe in a time the King will bring their necks under his feet, and whenever they acknowledge their disobedience and return to their duty the King will then acknowledge them for his children.

The rebels, not contented to act against their Sovereign, have also acted against the Indian nations and want to dispossess them of their Lands. The King, always attentive to his dutiful Children, ordered the axe to be put into the hands of his Indian Children in order to drive the Rebels from their Land, while his Ships of War and Armys cleared them from the sea.

Children!

These strings are to remind you that the King never tried to take any of your lands, but that it was the rebels.

Six Strings to each Nation.

Children!

I now speak to you, the three nations on the Ouabash, to inform you that the Ottawas, Chippowas, Hurons, Poutawattamies, Senecas, Shawanese, &c, have hold of their father's axe, and are all of one voice, and will not bury it until the King, their Father, shall order peace.

Thirteen strings.

Children!

It would have given me pleasure to have seen you here assembled in Council at the time it was held, but as you came too late, you will be informed of the Proceedings by some of your Friends or the Interpreters.

Children!

I am glad to see you all composed. What I am now going to say is of importance to you, your wives and children. I heard that the Spaniards have given succor to the Rebels and given them what assistance they could. Notwithstanding they were rebels against their King and enemies to the Indian nations, I have heard that the Spaniards have said to you, the Indians on the Ouabash, that they owned the lands there and that the King of England had no claim thereto. I desire to know from you if it be true or not? Is it possible that the Spaniards have forgotten already that they were obliged to ask for peace from the King of Great Britain, and don't they know that the King will protect his children, the Indians, in the security of their lands and that no power whatever shall dispossess them? I give you, the three nations, Qui-qua-bones, Ouattonons and Mascoutins, each a Belt, to assure you that the King will protect you from any Power that may attempt to invade your just rights. I have the King's orders to protect those that shall shew themselves his children. I don't want to purchase your friendship with Liquor.

The King, knowing that his children who act with his axe are unable to provide for themselves, has accordingly provided for them. I am persuaded you have worn out your shoes, etc. I shall therefore give you something that when you return your people may see you have given me your hands and were well received, and perhaps they may tread the path you have done.

I am well assured that the Delawares have acted in favor of the rebels. I have accordingly in Council delivered a Belt in my name and that of all the Nations neighboring here around, and in the name of the six nations, that if they still continue to favor the Rebels that I would, with all my children, look on them as rebels.

The lieutenant governor changed their medals and told them that they were from the King. He looks on you as his children, therefore wishes you should wear [wear] his picture, you not having any other Father but him.*

Lieutenant Governor spoke:

Children!

As you are all here present and wanting to return, I will finish what I have to say to you before we break up this meeting. I cannot but praise the behaviour of the Indian nations who have taken hold of their Father's axe and who have acted as men. I hope you'll act the same part and not redden you axe with the blood of women and children

* A medal given to Mahim-amba in lieu of a small English medal received in 1764.

A medal to Me-lou-e-son-ata in lieu of a French medal.

A medal to Pi-e-mash-kee-canny in lieu of a French medal.

A medal to Sa-pa-ti-a, who had not any before.

or innocent men. I know that men kill men and not children. I speak to you who are men.

Fourteen strings.

Sa, pa, ti, a, then spoke:

Father!

You are in the right to ask of us our sentiments. We will inform you we acknowledge you say right when you say this island is yours. It is true. Some birds have told us otherwise, but we have not yet paid any attention to them. We address ourselves to you, who is our true Father. Who are the Chiefs that pretend to be ignorant that the French King has been conquered by the English? We, the Indians on the Ouabach never pretend to go to the Spanish side for succor, but come to your side as you are our Father. Even the least your Children will know that we are at present the King of England's Children, as we have been conquered by you. As to the Big Knives, we know them. We have received your Belt in our Village. One of our Chiefs is gone to take a walk with it towards them; he will soon return. All our War Chiefs are much pleased to go against the Virginians and act in Concert with their brothers. Our intention is never to act against children but against men. We thank you for saying you'll take care of us. We are assured that our young men will tread the path which we found so clear and smooth.

Lieutenant Governor spoke:

Children!

I am glad to hear you express you sentiments agreeably to those of the other nations.

Qui-qua-po-quois then spoke:

Father!

You are in the right to think that the Spaniards try to draw us to them. The son of old Tobacco, who is a Pian, in company with another, were on the Spanish side and asked us to go. We would not. We told them we had you for a Father. We saw a road, our eyes were open, and we followed your path well beaten.

Father!

Believe that we, the Ouittonons, Qui-qua-bones and Mascoutins are all as one man, and we are sincere for you. Don't imagine that altho we go for Rum to the Spaniards that they have our Hearts.

3d July, 1778.

The chiefs, etc., assembled as the 1st July. The Lieutenant-Gov'r then presented an axe to Chaka, Ouatttonons war Chief told him that as he sang on the axe belonging to Peemembekeetack [a Powtawatomie war Chief] he now presented him an axe for his use to act against those people who want to possess themselves of your Land, its the King's Command that I put this axe into your hands to act against His Majesty's Enemies. I pray the Master of Life to give you success, as also your warriors whenever you go with your Father's axe.

Cha-ha, Ouiattonon War Chief, received the axe with marks of satisfaction and sung the war song and presented it to a Ouiattonon War Chief who sang and presented it to Mis-quitto, qui-qua-bones, War Chief who sang, and said, Father:

I have never as yet sang the war song. I am but a young man, notwithstanding I have killed men, I shall endeavour to sing;—Sings. Lieutenant-governor then spoke. I thank you Misquitto for having sharpened the Ouiattonos axe, I present you this axe [giving a War Belt] to use against the King's ennemies. I am persuaded the Ouiattonons will sharpen it for you in return. Misquitto sings the war song and presented it to Cha-ha, Ouiattounon. War Chief Cha-ha then spoke.

Father! It gives me pleasure to see you have given the Qui-qua-bones an axe, and that we, the Ouittanons, should sharpen it. As for my part I am almost ashamed to say anything as the Qui-qua-bones are greater warriors than we are.—Sings.

Lieutenant-Governor presented a certificate to Qui-qua-po-quois, for his attachment to His Majesty and Government. Ta,-pa,-tia, spoke,—

Father!

We return you thanks for your attention towards us. You have asked in what time we want to return to our villages. We answer you that we want to return directly, if possible. You know that we Village Chiefs have nothing to say in War. When we get at our villages shall interpret everything which occurred to our War Chiefs, who know how to act in War.

Father!

We hope you'll provide us with water carriage, that we may be enabled to return speedily. We are assured that everything is at your command, therefore you can order us some with ease.

Lieutenant-Governor:

Children!

I have attended to what you have said. The same water carriage that brought you here shall take you back. As to what regards my children, I assure you I have never shewn more favor to one nation than to another. I look on them as with one eye and use them all alike. I have nothing more to say but to wish you a good voyage and a safe return to your village. , Council held with the Indians at Detroit, June, 1778.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 182, P. 489.

[Translation]

BY THE INHABITANTS OF VINCENNES.

To His Excellency, the Governor of the State of Virginia:

SIR—This is in the name of the inhabitants of Vincennes that the undersigned have the honour to write these lines to your Excellency, in order to let you know the character they have concurrently taken with the French of Kaskias, those of Vermillin those of Onyas [Weas], &c., together with our friends, and of Canada, of which we know their intentions.

We are unanimously convinced not to receive any other troops in our homes than those sent by the King of France to Chase the enemies from our country.

The Indians for which we seek are intelligent. We have made it a crime to receive the Virginian Troops here. Some nations fight, themselves, against us, consequently we will give it to them. We pray Your Excellency will not have that trouble again, at least that we may have the liberty to act against the Enemies of France. Yours and ours embrace the same cause. Many nations want to join us as much for us as for them, themselves. We will wait, for the Virginians will not be troublesome in their possession. Remember what I told you. It is the same as the memoir we addressed to the minister of France, M. le Chevalier de Luzerne; at least he knows the Justice of our cause and wish it well in this regard; in attending to that decision we have the honor to be, with respectful affection,

Your Excellency's most humble servants.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES 2, VOL. 15, P. 230.

[HAMILTON TO CARLETON(?)].

MY LORD—This very day an express is arrived at this place from the Illinois with the following account, which my duty requires I should communicate as quickly as possible.

Twenty days since, a party of the Rebels, reported to amount to three hundred men, marched across the country from near the mouth of the Ouabash to Kaskaskias and surprised the place [which is defenseless] at night, seized Mr. de Rocheblave and put him in irons.

They exact an oath of allegiance to the Congress from the inhabitants, who, by what I can learn, are too fickle and ready for change to make any difficulty.

The Rebels have sent a Detachment with an officer to Cahokia to receive the submission of the inhabitants, and the person who brought the account has no doubt but those of St. Vincennes are by this time summoned, as a French Priest named Gibault, had his horse ready saddled to proceed there from Cahokia, with design to act as an agent for the Rebels.

This Ecclesiastic is a fellow of infamous morals, and I believe very capable of acting such a part.

An Express with this Account goes off tomorrow, for Niagara and Quebec.

Monsieur de Celoron, now at this place, sets off tomorrow for Ouiattonon, with Belts and Speeches for the Indians of the Ouabash, who have lately engaged to act against the Rebels, and whose interest it is to oppose their Progress.

Your lordship is acquainted with the state of this country, with regard to the Troops which occupy the several posts, that there is but a single Regiment between Montreal and Michilleinaskinac, that between the posts on the Lakes and New Orleans there is not a single Fort or Garrison to check the French or Spaniards in any attempt to molest the Rebels, or keep the Indians or inhabitants in awe.

The present tractable disposition of the Savages is to be made the most of as really the only means left in my hands. How long the management of them may be entrusted to me is what I am at a loss to guess. There is not at this moment a single vessel at this post. They are ordered away by the Officer Commanding the Troops, who has received orders which deprive me of what authority I might put to profit.

No accounts yet arrived from England; no orders or instructions from Quebec, and tho' from what passes in the Mississippi there is reason to think a foreign war is declared, no advice that can be depended on is yet given. Letters from St. Joseph's mention that French, Spanish and Rebel Officers have been in treaty with the Savages of that Quarter, but have not received any decisive answer.

Mr. de Rocheblave before his falling into the hands of the Rebels informed me that four English frigates were in the mouth of the Mississippi.

The bandetti who have given an alarm in the country will I trust be obliged to retire, as there is reason to think the jealousy of the Savages will incite them to fall on them.

Some parties of Savages have lately returned from War with tolerable good success.

I have the Honor, etc.,

HENRY HAMILTON.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 122, P. 115.

[HAMILTON TO CARLETON(?)].

SIR—Since my last of the 6th Instant an Express is arrived from the Illinois, with an account of the arrival of a party of Rebels, in number, three hundred, who have taken M. de Rocheblave prisoner, have laid him in Irons, and exact an oath from the Inhabitants binding them to obedience to the Congress, etc.

There is an officer with thirty men detached by the Rebels to Cahokia to receive the allegiance of the people at that post and I have no doubt that by this time they are at St. Vincennes, as when the Express came away one Gibault, a French priest, had his horse ready saddled to go thither from Cahokia to receive the submission of the Inhabitants in the name of the Rebels.

'Tis now but twenty-one days since the rebels got Possession of Kaskaskias. Monsieur de Celoron sets off this day with Belts for the Ouabash Indians whose deputies went from this not long since, well satisfied with their reception and took three War Belts.

A letter from Mr. Rocheblave written some little time before his imprisonment mentions there being four English frigates in the entrance of the Misisipi.

As there is not one of the vessels here at present, I send this express in a Batteau to Fort Erie by Lieut. Chabert of the Indian Department.

I beg leave to take notice to your Excellency that if the Ouabash Indians are supported properly it will entail a considerable additional expence at the same time 'tis well known to your Excellency that these Nations are the only barrier to be opposed at present to the inroads of the Rebels and the attempts of the French and Spaniards.

I am also to observe to Your Excellency that there remains yet a large quantity of provision to be forwarded to this Post, that scarce any merchandize is yet arrived, and goods of last year left on the carrying place being not yet forwarded, that large quantities will be wanted for the savages, as well as for supplying the trade, and that the Vessels alone will not be sufficient to transport the quantities wanted.

If the merchants were allowed to forward their goods in batteaus all the way, they would many of them, I believe, choose to venture, rather than abide the damage, losses and delays they suffered last year.

I have the Honor to be, sir, your most obedient and most humble servant,

HENRY HAMILTON.

August 8th, 1778.

Endorsed: Detroit.

LIEUT.-GOV. HAMILTON.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 96, P. 6.

No. 4.

MICHILIMAKINAC, 15th August, 1778.

From Major De Peyster to His Excellency, the Commander-in-Chief:

SIR—The enclosed letter from Mr. [Richard McCarty, later captain under Clark] Macarty, a Trader from this Post to the Illinois, and one from St. Joseph's, will give your Excellency some insight in what is doing or likely to be done in that quarter. McCarty's account is confirmed by several people just arrived from the Illinois, I am also informed that reports are spread in all the Illinois villages that the french are soon to take possession of that Country as there are no troops at present to keep the Virginians from going there. They have it in their power to spread reports and poison the minds of the Indians so as to make it at least very dangerous to Traders.

Mr. Louis Chevalier at St. Joseph's holds the pass to Detroit and can also give the first intelligence of the enemy's motion on the Wabash. This gentleman is so connected with the Potawatamies that he can now do anything with them, having lived upwards of thirty years at that place. A young Indian named Amiable, at present at Montreal, is his son. Some mark of distinction given to this young man, and he, with a few of his comrade-Potawatamies persuaded to remain another year at Montreal, would be of great service, as those at St. Joseph would never misbehave whilst any of their friends are down the country.

In the year '63 when St. Joseph's was cut off, Mr. Chevalier two days before it happened, informed Mr. Schlosser of the Indians having intentions, which he did not believe, to his cost.

Chevalier happening to be present, it gave some designing people a handle against him as his innocence was not generally known.

I have, since my arrival here, inquired particularly into all those matters and finding that affair no ways to his disadvantage and seeing the great attention paid to him by the Indians, I thought it necessary to render him useful by giving him some authority at St. Joseph's which he has hitherto exerted with the greatest discretion.

I have the honor, etc.,

[Signed]

A. S. DE PEYSTER.

A letter prior to this [see page 41] concerning an application made by the Merchants, Traders and Inhabitants of Machilimackinac, to His Excellency, the Commander-in-Chief, for a Missionary at that Post.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 122, P. 137.

[Translation.]

[CELORON TO HAMILTON.]

SIR—Since I arrived at this post I learned from an Indian Piawkichias [Pi-an-ke-shaw] come from St. Vincennes to the River Anguille; that the Virginians had gathered four hundred men, and in a few days three hundred more would arrive. That they had arrested Mr. Le Gras after seizing his goods [which they used to win over the Indians] they sent him under a good guard to Illinois; that Gudert, who had been an interpreter last year, and two settlers had also been seized to be sent there, but the Indians had claimed them as brothers and kept them awaiting my arrival at Ouyastonons.

I have been detained here for eight days wanting water, and waiting for the reply of the village, not yet made. The Indians do not appear disposed to go to the Illinois. The Indians of Onatache, tepicouos, du coeur de ceif and those of St. Joseph, have not yet returned from Kaskaskias where they were invited to go by the rebels of the north of Virginia.

On my arrival at this post I found all the merchandize for Vincennes and the Onyas party. They promised the Indians who would help them, all the effects that the French brought from Detroit. A party of fifteen Indians left here yesterday for the falls to attack the rebels there, where there is great numbers and a strong fort between the falls and the River Roetie, south of the Belle River. They are continually working to strengthen it. All the news deserves the greatest attention, and should I hear of anything worth while, when I go to the Onyas, I shall send a courier with it.

I have the honor to be with respect, Sir,

Your very humble servant,

CELORON.

At Miamis the 28th August, 1778.

The Virginians after having taken the oath at St. Vincent's, established three officers there, who are Messrs. Myette, commandant; Baron, Major; and Munbrum, lieutenant.

Endorsed: From Mr. Celoron at the Miamis the 28th August; received 5th Oct.; enclosed in Lieut.-Gov. Hamilton's letter of the 16th and 17th Sept., and received the 5th Oct., marked Detroit.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 122 P. 136.

By George Rogers Clark, Esq., Colonel in the Virginia Troops, and Commandant of the Eastern Illinois and its Dependencies, &c., &c.

Whereas, Kinaytounak, Chief of the Renard Nation of Indians, has entered into alliance and Friendship with the United States of America and promised to be a true and faithful subject thereto:

In consideration of which I do give him this as a Remembrance that he and his Nation are to treat all the Subjects of the said States with Friendship and receive them at all times as their Brothers. Given under my hand and seal at Fort Bowman in Kahos, this 28th day of August, 1778.

G. R. CLARKE [Seal].*

Endorsed: Commission given by the Rebels, chief of the Renards, sent by Gautier to Major de Peyster, received with his letter of 13th, May the 30th, 1778.

* This seal bears a lion rampant with star and crescent, the field marked for gules.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 122, P. 167.

[HAMILTON TO HALDIMAND].

DETROIT, Sept. 22nd, 1778.

SIR—I have the honor to acquaint your Excellency that the preparatives for our little enterprize are forwarding with alacrity. This day, 15, large Pirogues capable of transporting from 1,800 to 3,000 lbs. each, having had a thorough repair, set off for Wold Rapid where cattle and wheels are likewise sent to expedite the carriage at that portage. Biscuit is baked, provisions packed in small barrels or bags, the militia companies drafted, artillery stores prepared, boats mending and all that can be thought on, put forward.

If it be possible to move off on 1st of the next month, I shall use my best endeavors to do it. I cannot foresee [tho' I shall provide against] any inclemency of the weather, which ought to prevent our taking and maintaining a post till reinforcements can join us, light Cannon and an able Engineer [as I must profess my own want of knowledge in a branch which requires abilities which I could never pretend to] are capital points. I purpose taking presents not only for the Ouebash and more Western Indians, but to encourage the Delawares, Mingoes and Shawanese to keep good watch towards the banks of the Ohio during the winter, the season when the Savages are usually dispersed for hunting.

If the Western Indians express their resentment for the inroad of the Rebels into their Country this will be a noble opportunity to build a fort on so important a spot as the Forks at the conflux of the Ohio and Misissipi, which may be in future, a bridle on the Americans of whatever denomination or interest.

The falls on the Ohio are another important pass which I believe the Rebels will not omit to secure and fortify, the Forks of the Thiakiki are a third object, with the mouth of the Missouri for keeping in temper, the only way of subjecting savages here, we might undersell the Spaniards.

As these are points perhaps too difficult to be attempted in our present situation, perhaps liable to objection in any, I mention them with that distrust and diffidence which my humble station and abilities demand. It would however make me very happy to think a proposal of the kind should meet with your Excellency's approbation and that I could be in the slenderest degree a means of promoting the honor and interest of my King and Country.

The Spaniards are feeble and hated by the French. The French are fickle and have no man of capacity to advise or lead them, the Rebels are enterprising and brave, but want resources, and the Indians can have their resources but from the English, if we act without loss of time in this favorable conjuncture.

This may appear a picture with strong lights and little or no shade, but as the effects of pushing a force supported by the zeal of the Indians [who have hitherto acted with perfect compliance] have not yet been tryed, I hope to be excused if perhaps too sanguine.

The most considerable of the French in this settlement have shewn a very good example, and 'tis better followed than I had expected, the appearance of a reinforcement from Niagara will fortify them in their good disposition.

I design forming a depot at the Miamis, but shall take a survey of the Portage before I fix on its being on this or the other side of the carrying place; should the Indians act with zeal for us, it shall be on the other side; if coolly, on this.

An account of the numbers which leave this place shall be transmitted to your Excellency by the next vessel which goes to Fort Erie; the savages are to give their answer this day.

Some working oxen and horses set off this day for the Miamis to forward the transport of provisions at that carrying place.

Major Hay [of the militia, not yet confirmed from Headquarters, tho' his Commission and those of the other officers in the Militia and Indian department were sent down above a year since for the Commander-in-Chief's approbation] and Lieut. Duvernet, R. R. A., will commit to paper their remarks upon their communication from this to the Illinois, and should anything occur to me on our progress, I shall venture to communicate them to your Excellency, trusting to your Candor and indulgence for the errors, omissions and incorrectness which want of information, hurry, or my want of judgment may occasion.

Several appointments with pay, taking place on this occasion, a list of them shall be prepared for your Excellency, and I hope shall appear not too lightly undertaken.

September 23d, 1778. This day I met the Outawas, the Chippewes and Poteonattamies in Council by their own appointment. Present, Captain Lernoult, Lieut. Shourd and the Interpreters. The Hurons were to have come but the bad weather prevented them. However the Outawas spoke with a sort of resentment at their failing to meet as agreed upon. Some days ago I had called the Chiefs together and without directly asking them to join me, had told them I was going to rise up to keep my word with the Ouabash Indians, who had taken up the axe of their Father, the King, had accepted his medals and professed their attachment to the English. I further informed them that my hands were loosed by your orders, that I should no longer consider myself as a village Chief, and that Capt. Lernoult would act the part of Father to them in my absence. This with the mustering the militia, pressing all the craft on the River, and other preparations, informed them sufficiently of my designs of going to war. I had previous intelligence of some designs to traverse the good disposition of the Indians who at these times have always been tamper'd with. Two lieutenants of the militia who have betrayed a backwardness, I have broke and order'd to do their courvee, James Cassety, an Irishman, and Francois Marantete, a Frenchman.

Your Excellency will receive enclosed an extract of the Council.

The copies of orders mentioned in your Excellency's letter of the 6th of August, shall be transmitted as soon as my present hurry will permit, and should I be too much press'd in time, Captain Lernoult will send them by the earliest opportunity.

Sept. 24th. The oath of allegiance was tendered to the Volunteers from the different companies who appeared to the number of 75, to the officers of Militia and of the newly formed Companies, &c.

In the Afternoon the Indians had an ox, and Captain Lernoult with several of the officers and principal inhabitants assisted at their feast.

Sept. 25th. A chief of the Poutcouattamies took charge of a Letter and message for St. Josephs. From Major de Peyster's, opinion of Louis Chevalier, I have written to Chevalier in a style to prompt him to deserve a confidence, I must own there is much reason to think ill placed, at all events there is no other person there, can engage the Poutcouattamies to act, and as Interest is his Deity perhaps he may reconcile his worship with his Duty.

26th. I gave Capt. McKee a message and present of ammunition for the Shawanese who are under Mr. De Quindre and have not yet broke up their little siege. This evening Mr. Charles Baubin came in from the Maamis. Letters which he brought mention one Clarke with 80 men being at St. Vincennes, where the French receive them well. The Indians at Ouittoun as yet undecided and timorous. I shall lose no time to encourage them.

Should I arrive time enough at Ouittoun to speak to the Chiefs before they take a decisive part, I don't doubt the sight of the Chiefs from the Lake will determine them as I could wish.

I hope to have your Excellency's approbation for a step I mean to take with the air of Authority I support, which is to cancel the bargain made for the lend [land] of the Peakashaws, the effect of this, with that nation, and those of Ouabash, will probably be to beget a confidence in the English, as the French and Virginians have been jointly concerned in an underhand purchase, unauthorized by His Majesty.

Gibault, the Priest, has been active for the Rebels. I shall reward him if possible.

27th. Ordered a Lieutenant of the Indian Department with a small party of the Militia to the Miamis to assist the workmen in repairing the carrying place, assisting the Master Carpenter, Boat builder, &c., with written instructions.

Monsieur de Celoron writes that Jean Baptiste Chapoton [late a Captain of Militia at this place] Bosseron Junior and Mons. Le Gras are on the best terms imaginable with the rebel officers at St. Vincennes.

This last person had been equipped at this place, was in partnership at Detroit and had received many favors at the hands of the English and French at this place, not to say anything of Governor Abbott's kindness to him.

Mr. J. B. Chapoton was dismissed at his own request on the pretence of being too old to fulfill the functions of his place. He has exceeded the terms expressed in his pass, so that he proves himself a worthy associate of Mr. Le Gras in perjury, treason and ingratitude

My determination is to set out as soon as possible. Captain Lernoult will send forward any reinforcement, thus the time spent in Indian Councils [which are sometimes very deliberate] may be employed at the Miamis in fortifying that Depot, calling in the Indians, building craft and storehouses, and procuring intelligence.

Captain McKee has orders to make enquiry what is doing at the falls on the Ohio, his information shall be forwarded by express if necessary.

Expresses shall be sent to Niagara from time to time thro' the winter.

I am persuaded troops may be forwarded to the southward all times; the winters are mild and the Rebels are not so well clothed as we. Good arms are our greatest want.

I shall use every means in my power to communicate with Mr. Stuart, but believe it will be scarce practicable.

Sir, it is with due deference I take the liberty to mention what occurs to me at present relative to the post at the Miamis.

There will be a store of provisions, perhaps of ammunition and Indian goods, at that place. As soon as I arrive there I shall order a Ridoubt to be thrown up, the houses to be fortified, or such other precaution taken for its defence as may appear best suited to the number of inhabitants and nature of the ground.

If the Rebels at Fort Pitt with the assistance of the Delawares in their interest, could effect the surprize of such a place, they would not only possess themselves of our magazine, but cut off one of our communications with Detroit, as we might in that case be obliged to return by the way of St. Joseph and be distressed for Provisions. I shall represent this to Capt. Lernoult who will judge how far a detachment sent from Detroit to the Miamis will be a cover to Detroit, and facilitate and secure our correspondence and communication.

The weakness of the Garrison of Detroit is known to your Excellency. I need not therefore dwell on that subject, but at all events, I shall proceed, guided by the best information I can procure.

Among several persons very capable of informing as to the nature of the country and characters of the inhabitants, Mr. Alexis Maisenville is perhaps the most so, and I must render that justice to his zeal and good will which they merit. He has been very forward on this occasion and every other to act the part of a good subject. I beg leave to recommend him to your Excellency's favor. When we shall arrive at the Illinois I expect great advantage from his enterprizing spirit.

I have engaged a person to go from the Miamis to the Chickesees from whom he will procure guides to lead him to Mr. Stuart, a verbal message is all I shall charge him with for fear of discovery.

Enclosed is a letter to the commandant on the Spanish side of the Misisipi, which I shall send by the first opportunity which may present.

The copies of orders which I have the honor to transmit, are not by any means in the correct form I could wish. Your Excellency will, I hope, make allowance for my hurry. Favorable rains for some days past and the good temper and disposition of the Indians encourage me to hope our little enterprize may be attended with some advantage. When Mr. Baubin left the Miamis, there was no notion there of any preparations, so that the first reports at the Illinois will probably gain little credit.

Oct. 2d. We have found it a difficult matter to find two savages to go express with letters for Niagara, they are so desirous of going towards the Ouabash. I hope, however, to procure them by tomorrow. On account of all the vessels being absent, the repairing our craft goes on but slowly, the master builder is this day to give in the return of those which are in condition, and a second Brigade will set off the 5th inst.

The violent rains which were so necessary for raising the waters of the Miamis River, have retarded us in many particulars.

Your Excellency will please to observe that on the list of volunteers for the enterprize several persons are employed who must carry arms when occasion calls. As to the high pay, wages are so extravagant here that the common men receive but half what they might earn were they to stay at home. This encouragement therefore was necessary.

Oct. 3rd, 1776 [1778], 11 o'clock a. m.

Last night the Savages were assembled when I sung the War Song, and was followed by Captain Lernoult and several officers, &c., and the warriors going on the enterprize—the best dispositions and alacrity shown by all.

Two Indians set off Express this day with the Letters.

As Captain Lernoult cannot spare men from the garrison, I leave two small Howitzers behind, as they would be but lumber without people to work them.

I have for the six-pounder which we take, 2 Artillery men, 1 Sergt., 1 Corp'l., and 12 of the Volunteer Militia under the orders of Lieut. Du Vernet, who has exerted himself in providing and preparing the many necessities coming under his direction.

We shall set off for the Miamies River the 6th without fail.

I have the honor to be, Sir, with the most profound Respect, Sir,

Your Excellency's most obedient and most devoted servant,

HENRY HAMILTON.

I take the liberty of enclosing three letters in Your Excellency's packet.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 99, P. 171.

Proportion of stores taken from Detroit upon an Expedition to the Illinois:

Beafs, 6 per.....	1	prickers	2
Travelling Carriages.....	1	punches	2
Trunks do.	1	Sheepskins	2
Case shott fix'd.....	200	Carbine Cartridges.....	480
Grape shott.....	30	Carbine flints	200
Loose round shott.....	50	Paper quilres	120
Fix'd do. do.	150	Thread, lbs.....	10
Tubes	700	Handjack	1
Portfires	84	Bridge Barrels.....	1
Stow Match, lbs.....	60	Leather Bucketts.....	2
Spunages	2	Filling boxes.....	2
Ladles	1	Hand Bills	20
Wadhook.....	1	Oke Cloths	4
Portfire sacks	2	Hanks of Cord.....	12
Tent hooks	2	Carbine Ball	100
Drag rope, sets.....	1	Tanned Hides	2
Mens harness, do.....	2	White Rope, 2-3 of a coil...
Tube bones	2	Tents	5
Spunage tacks.....	200	Grind stones	1
Flax, lbs.	2	Cross cut saws.....	3
Shells, gunades.....	20	Tackes, double, Block and
Fuzes, spare.....	30	Simple	2
Hammers, claw.....	2	Whip saws	2
Tennant saw.....	1	Files, fordo.....	6
Apons of Lead.....	2	Grease, lbs.....	20
Powder horns with slugs...	2	Sulphur, lbs.....	25
Flannel Cartridges.....	200	Saltpetre, lbs.....	25
Leather Cartridges.....	2	Team by Esallt.....	6
Powder in barrels.....	4	Spades	6
Dark leadhorns.....	5	pincers, prs.....	4
Scales, pr.....	1	Supass, do.....	6
Weights from ¼ to 2 lbs..		Knives	6
Common measures from ¼		Copper adze	1
oz. to 3 lbs.....		Quadrant brass	1
Spikes of Steel.....	6	Handspikes	6

Proportion of stores taken from Detroit by Lt. General Hamilton:

HENRY DU VERNET,
2d Lieut. of Artillery.

Number of batteaus and peroques employed on Gov.
Hamilton's expedition :

Peroques	42
Batteaus	10, 1 a very large French one.
Total	52

The number of Carts employed, etc., on the Carrying place of the Miamis :

Carts	10
Carriages with 4 Wheels for the Batteaus.....	2
Carriages with 2 Wheels for the peroques.....	4
Total	16

Part of our Provisions were sent forward with Col. Mc-Leod; the Rest got over in 6 days from the 29th November to the 5th December.

HENRY DU VERNET,
2d Lieut. of Artillery.

Return of the state of His Majesty's Garrison of Fort Sackville, 30th January, 1779.

	Captains.....		Captains.....	Interpreters.	Store Keeper....	Volunteers		Captains.....	Rank and File.....	Sergeants.	Mattresses	Bateau Masters	Surgeon.	Lieutenants.....	Captains.....	Majors
Royal Artillery	2
King's Regiment	30	2
Detroit Volunteers	34	3	1	1
Militia	5	1	1	1	1	1
Indian Department	3
Artificers	3
Total	3	3	2	2	1	3	3	69	5	2	1	1	2	2	1

--(Canadian Archives, Series B, Vol. 122, p. 287)

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 122, P. 211.

[HAMILTON TO HALDIMAND].

SIR—The 2nd Instant an express went by land from this place to Niagara with a letter in form of Diary commencing the 22nd of September, 1778. I have the honor of transmitting to your Excellency by an Indian express the occurrences since that letter was closed.

The 5th of October, late in the evening, Messieurs Charles and Nicholas Gouin came to Detroit, the latter express from the Miamis, with an account that Mr. de Celown [Celoron] was at Ouittonon, when one De Couague, the bastard savage son of the old man now Interpreter at Niagara, and who is a chief among the Peorias, arrived with 5 other Persons, having Belts from the Rebels and speeches address'd to the Ouebash Indians nearly in the following terms:

“You Indians living on the River ‘Ouabash’—we are not “come with design to take your lands from you; we only “desire to pass thro’ your Country to Detroit to turn out “your Father who is there, for now your late Father, the “King of France, is come to Life and will recover the coun“try he lost to the English.

“Here are several Belts for you to consider upon—a “white one for the French, a red one for the Spaniards who “mean to assist them, a blue one in the name of the Colo“nies; a green one offering peaceable terms from the “Americans if you allow them to pass freely, and, lastly, a “red one offering you War, if you prefer that.

“We desire you to leave a very wide road for us, as we “are many in number and love to have room enow for “our march, for us swinging our arms as we walk, we may “chance to hurt some of your young people with our “swords.”

Mr. de Celoron, as I am informed, contented himself with hearing this much, and without waiting to hear what reply the Indians made to this flourishing speech, mounted his horse and rode off for the Miamis, who had sent a chief and some men to meet the Rebels, I suppose with friendly overtures, as they are reputed but a dastardly nation and have done nothing this war, tho' treated as well as the bravest.

Mr. de Celoron's expeditious movement rather surprizes me, but in this country where indulgence pleuiero takes place, there can be but slender confidence on protestations or even stronger ties. However, his own account may throw a different light on his actions. I own the proceedings of several people at the different forts gives little room for confidence in any of them.

Two men of the name of Raimbault went lately from the Miamis with goods for St. Vincennes, notwithstanding Mr. Baubin positively forbade them, representing the obligation of their oath and the terms of the pass received from me at this place.

Mr. Bellestre, who has been some time amongst the Spaniards, is said to be at the head of 200 French, who have joined the Rebels on their march, 100 from Illinois, the rest from St. Vincennes.

The 6th our tents were struck before day and most of our stores embark'd, when three Hurons from Sandooski arrived with a very substantial account; of the approach of the Rebels by several different routes, that the advanced guard of their main body was 800 strong, that they were provided with Cannon to come against Detroit, with various particulars calculated to alarm and disconcert the Indians.

I told the messenger, however little credit I gave to this account, it should be communicated to the 4 neighboring nations, but that I had engaged to assist the Ouabash Indians; I would keep my word.

The Indians, being assembled in the afternoon, heard my opinion of the intelligence, and with the utmost cheerfulness agreed to accompany us.

During our meeting the vessel hove in sight. The 7th, at 8 in the morning, Captain Bird with fifty of the King's Regiment from Niagara, landed.

Captain Lernout has permitted Lieut. Shourd with 2 Sergeants and 30 men to accompany us, which, considering our hasty levies, will be a reinforcement of consequence. The true spirit of the service prompts Lieut. Shourd, his Sergeants, and I think the greater part of his men, to present themselves on this occasion. Our strength will now consist of one Lieutenant of Artillery with two Gunners, one Lieutenant of the King's, 2 Sergeants and 31 Rank and File, and the Volunteer and Militia, as mentioned in a former letter.

The Indians about 70, several of them Chiefs, the rest picked men.

My satisfaction is, all are Volunteers.

Your Excellency will, I hope, excuse the hurry and incorrectness of my letter.

I have the honor to be, with the greatest respect, &c, Sir, Your Excellency's most devoted, most obedient and most humble servant,

HENRY HAMILTON.

DETROIT, 7th Oct., 1778, ½ after 11 a. m.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 122, P. 217.

[HAMILTON TO HALDIMAND.]

ROCHER DE BOUT, Oct. 14th, '78.

SIR—I have the honor to acquaint your Excellency that the little force under my command arrived at this place yesterday, having found the water higher than usual at this time of the year. We have this day got up the greatest part of the Provision brought by Captain Grant in a small sloop to the foot of the rapids. A detachment of the King's Regiment of one Subaltern, one Sergeant and 31 rank and file joined us at pointe des Chesnes the 11th instant, but an unlucky accident has deprived us of Lieut. Shourd, who commanded it. His fuzee going off accidentally has broke his leg, and I was under the necessity of sending him back to Detroit with the surgeon in a batteau. The Indians join us as we proceed, and there is amongst us all the best temper that can be wished. This evening late a trusty savage arrived, whom I had sent forward for intelligence. He brings an account that the proposition of the Rebels to the savages at St. Vincennes have been rejected, and tho' they have not been apprized that the Indians of the Lakes were coming to their assistance, they have answered them with a spirit that leaves no room to doubt all will go well. Mr. de Celoron has acted in a manner very unprecedented and which I hope for the honor of human nature will never be followed. Treachery, ingratitude and perjury are heavy charges to lay to the account of a man reputed a man of honor, but I am bold to say it can be but too well supported. He had the effrontery to repeat to me by word of mouth and in hearing of the people in my batteau, that the Rebels were at the Miamis, tho' they had not arrived at the Ouiat, when he had precipitately left it, bringing with him however some Packs of Peltry. He ranged about for three days among the Indians, in the mouth of the Miamis river, spreading this report which, however, they did not credit.

I shall have the honor of writing to Your Excellency more Particularly from the Miamis town.

We have been highly favored by the weather, else we must have suffered great delay in arriving thus far.

Any intelligence of moment shall be forwarded to Detroit by every occasion that presents.

I have the Honor to be, with the highest regard, Sir,

Your Excellencys most obedient and most humble servant,

HENRY HAMILTON.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 122, P. 219.

[HAMILTON TO HALDIMAND.]

Proceedings of the Rebels at St. Vincennes as related to Lieut. Gov. Hamilton by Neegik, an Ottawa War Chief, sent forward to gain intelligence. Camp at Rochee de Bout 14th Oct., 1778.

On the Rebels' first arrival at St. Vincennes they took down the English Flag left there by Lieut. Gov. Abbott, wrapped a large stone in it and threw it into the Ouabash, saying to the Indians, thus we mean to treat your Father.

Having called the Indians together they laid a War belt colored red, and a belt colored green before them, telling them that if they delighted in mischief and had no compassion on their wives and children they might take up the red one; if, on the contrary, they were wise and preferred peace, the green one.

The old Tobacco, a chief of the ————, spoke as follows:

"MY BROTHERS—You speak in a manner not to be understood. I never yet saw, nor have I heard from my ancestors that it was customary to place good and bad things in the same dish. You talk as if you meant us well, yet you speak of war and peace in the same minute. Thus I treat the speeches of such men—on which, with a violent kick, he spurned their belts from him."

The son of Lagesse, a young chief of the Poutcouattamies of St. Joseph, spoke next to them:

"MY BROTHERS—"Tis because I have listened to the voice of our old men and because I have regard to our women and children that I have not before now struck my Tomahawk into some of your heads.—Attend to what I say. I will only go to see in what condition our wives and children are [meaning I will first place them in security] and then you may depend on seeing me again."

The Rebel speaker then said:

"You are young men, and your youth excuses your ignorance. You would not else talk as you do. Our design is to march through your country, and if we find any fires in our way we shall just tread them out, as we walk along, and if we meet with any obstacle or barrier we shall remove it with all ease, but the bystanders must take care lest the Splinters should scar their faces.

"We shall then proceed to Detroit, where your father is, whom we consider as a Hog put to fatten in a penn; we shall enclose him in his penn till he be fat, and then we will throw him into the river. We shall draw a reinforcement from the Falls on the Ohio, and from thence and the Illinois send six hundred men to Chicagou."

To this the Indians reply'd: "You that are so brave, what need have you to be reinforced to go to Detroit, you that can put out our fires and so easily remove our barriers. This we say to you: 'Take care that in attempting to extinguish our fires you do not burn yourselves; that in breaking down our barriers you do not run splinters into your hands. You may also expect that we shall not suffer a single Frenchman to accompany you to Detroit.' "

End of the conference.

Lieut. de Quindre is returned from the attack of the fort at Kentucke, having had only two men killed and three wounded. They could not succeed in their attempt. One hundred Shawanese are still at war. Mr. de Quindre is to join me on the way with several others who have gone out from Detroit. There were but 40 Rebels at St. Vincennes. As I expect they will send for help from Kaskas-quias as soon as they hear of our coming, I mean to send from the Miamis some Indians to give an alarm that way, and try to divide their attention.

15th. A fall of snow this day promises to raise the waters and facilitate our progress. I have the honor to be with the greatest respect, Sir, your Excellency's most Obedient and most humble servant,

HENRY HAMILTON.

Endorsed: Detroit [No. 21], 1778. Letter from Lieut. Governor Hamilton, 14th and 15th Oct., [rec'd] 28th Nov. Copy taken 12th January, 1779.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 122, P. 222.

[HAMILTON TO HALDIMAND.]

MIAMIS TOWN, 28th Oct., 1778.

SIR—This day I hope to have passed 57 days Provisions for 300 men. The Savages are in good health and good temper. The restraint on their passion for Rum has only improved their good disposition. Our own people are in perfect health and spirits. The indecision of the Ouabash Indians may be attributed to the influence of interested advisers. I believe they are only waiting the motions of the Lake Indians to take an active part against the Rebels.

Ammunition is sent from here for the Shawanese. Yesterday I held a Council with about 200 Chiefs and Warriors. Their behavior was such as I wished. Since it is likely I shall pass the winter to the Southward of Detroit and the Indians have this morning desired me to apprise their friends thereof, I hope for your Excellency's orders and instructions for my conduct.

By every opportunity that offers I shall give you an account of our situation and prospects. Every intelligence I have procured confirms my suspicions of Mr. de Celoron's treachery.

He left Detroit the 9th of August, and he quits his post without having executed my orders, and by his delays seems to have endeavored to stop any attempt from our side at least for the current year. We met him in the lake the 9th October.

I have the honor to be, with the most profound respect,
Sir, your Excellency's most devoted, obedient Servant,

HENRY HAMILTON.

Monsieur Chevalier arrived here from St. Joseph with two chiefs and a few warriors. This step is of consequence to the service at present. We have been joined by several on our road, and I am persuaded shall have as many as we can manage or wish for.

HENRY HAMILTON.

Endorsed: Detroit No. 22, 1778. Letter from Lt. Gov. Hamilton 28th Oct. Copy taken 12th January, 1779.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 122, P. 224.

[HAMILTON TO HALDIMAND.]

CAMP AT PETITE RIVIERE, NOV. 1st, '78.

SIR—I have the honor to acquaint your Excellency that I have sent off from this place 22 Voitures with provisions, stores, &c., under the command of Lieut. Du Vernet, a very active and intelligent officer, who has my orders to encamp at the Forks of the Ouabash till my arrival or further orders.

I this day purpose setting off with 7 Boats loaded, and take along with me the Ottawas and Chippewas, in all 72. Four the first Chiefs of the Miamis nation have joined me, with 30 warriors. M. Chevalier came to the Miamis Town with a chief and 14 of the Poutcouattamies of St. Joseph; this and his future behavior may efface his former behavior.

Major Hay follows tomorrow with the last of the batteaux, the Poutcouattamies and the Miamis. This carrying place is free from any obstructions but what the carelessness and ignorance of the French have left and would leave from generation to generation. An intelligent person at a small expense might make it as fine a road as any within twenty miles of London. The woods are beautiful—Oak, Ash, Beech, Nutwood; very clean and of great growth. Your Excellency will, I hope, excuse my mentioning a trifling tho' curious particular. In a ridge near the road I found a sea fossil. To find marine productions on this hauteur des terres [height of ground] is to my mind more curious than their being found in the Alps. There are no mountains in view from Detroit to this place. so that these appearances cannot readily be accounted for from Volca-nos, of which there is no trace to be observed. All our people, of all colors, are in perfect health and their disposition such hitherto, as leaves me no room for complaint.

Lieut. Du Vernet having taken a Sketch of the Miamis river, and purposing to continue his plan to the Illinois, I shall take the first opportunity of transmitting it to your Excellency, agreeable to Lt. Du Vernet's request. At the same time take the liberty of commending his diligence; as to his capacity, I dare not give my opinion, knowing my own deficiency in those points, which no officer ought to be ignorant of.

I have got his French medal from Wanaquibe, chief of the Poutcouattamies of St. Joseph, in presence of 200 chiefs and warriors & the Miamis country.

Our number at present are nearly as follows: Detachment of the kings, 32 non commissioned officers included with the artillery, 2 gunners, 4 of the King's and 17 from the 2 Detroit companies, which are each at 44, officers included; La Mothes' Volunteers, 42; Ottawas, 40; Chippewas, 20; Wyandotts, 4; Poutouattamies, 15; Poutcouattamies of St. Joseph, 15; Miamis, 30 [Women are not included in this return of savages]. The Shawanese are expected this night with Captain McKee who writes me word that they attempted A Fort built by the Rebels at the falls of the Ohio, but only succeeded in destroying a parcel of Tools. I shall endeavour to cut off the communication from the Fort to the Illinois and perhaps shall find the taking that Fort an object well worth attention. The rebels are building a Fort in the Island at the Falls. I hear the Miamis of the Riviere a l'Anguille will join us. We have had pretty sharp frost but fine clear weather. By damming up the water of this Petite Riviere, 4 miles below the landing, the water is backed and raised an inch here. At the Dam it rose an inch the first hour. The Beavers had worked hard for us, but we were obliged to break down their dam to let the boats pass that were sent forward to clear the river and a place called the Chemin couvert [covered road].

M. de Celoron has a brother in the Rebel service, and I have no room to doubt his treasonable design in spreading reports which might delay us till next spring, when reinforcements from the Colonies might effectually frustrate our attempts to regain the Illinois or keep the Indians in our interest; double pay I take it, has been his seducer, and as to his reward, I hope to have your Excellency's orders. I have ordered his suspension in the interim.

Your Excellency will, I trust, make allowance for the haste and incorrectness of this report.

I have the honor to be, with all imaginable respect, sir,

Your most humble and most obe't servant,

HENRY HAMILTON.

From Lieut. Gov. Hamilton, dated at Camp little riviere the 1st Nov., 1778. Received 19th March, 1779.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 96, P. 19.

[MAJOR DE PEYSTER TO GENERAL HALDIMAND].

MICHILIMAKINAC, 24th Oct., 1778.

SIR—Your Excellency's Letters of the 30th August and 2d of September, I received the 21st instant by De Grose-lier. I received about the same time a Letter from Lt. Gov. Hamilton which he left to be forwarded from Detroit. As the Indians not been gone to their several homes before I received Mr. Hamilton's Letters, it would have been in my power to have seconded his attempt which he tells me he directs in person [In person] to dispossess the Rebels at the Illinois and as it may be in my power to dispose the Indians here to co-operate by going down the Illinois River, he gives me this notice.

The Indians at present are too much dispersed for me to assemble them in a body sufficiently strong to go down that river, and I am persuaded they would not leave their wives and children in their wintering grounds, there having been no previous provision made for them. I shall however send Express to the Grand River and on the borders of Lake Michigan to endeavor to spirit up the young men to join Mr. Hamilton by the most expeditious route, ordering them to call at St. Josephs for further information of his situation. I shall also write to Mr. Chevalier to give Mr. Hamilton every assistance in his power which I fear cannot be much as the Indians mostly are gone to their hunting grounds.

I have long since by civil treatment apparently secured that gentleman to His Majesty's Interests, foreseeing that he would become useful before those troubles could be at an end. The different representation of him by Mr. Hamilton and myself must appear extraordinary. I can assure Your Excellency that I never heard anything that could be proven to his disadvantage. On the contrary, whilst at this Post, he with a becoming decency, set his enemies at defiance. Should he, however, prove faithless the disadvantages arising from my credulity will be greatly overbalanced by advantages that may occur by putting some confidence in him.

This much I am obliged to say in vindication of my judgment, as Mr. Hamilton notwithstanding my representation to him, writes me that he has represented him to Your Excellency in a very unfavorable light. I shall take every possible method to procure intelligence of the present state of the Illinois and transmit [if I receive any] by way of Detroit during the course of the winter. I have now to offer my sentiments agreeable to Your Excellency's request whether anything can be done for the recovery of the Illinois, provided Your Excellency's Instructions relative to stopping the communication of the Ohio, etc., be vigorously put in execution. I am persuaded that Mr. Gautier or some other active person may assemble a body of Indians in his direct road from La bay to the Prairie de Chien and in the River St. Pierre, to go down the Mississippi early in the Spring, which may be performed from the mouth of the Oresconsign in seven or eight days. That country is full of resources, but the Indians must have presents. Whenever we fall off from that article they are no more to be depended upon. The past is soon forgot by them except when they do us a favour. Give the Indians of this country a present and they will immediately strive to make some trifling return, which we must however give them four times the value for. To second the above mentioned Indians, the Pottawatamies must be also ordered to move down the Illinois River followed by the Ottawas and Chippawas, those latter will be rather late, but by sending belts before them to assure the Illinois Indians that they came in friendship to them provided they join in driving out the Rebels, it will have a great effect, even the bruit of their intended March will settle them. The inhabitants of that country are not to be depended upon should the French offer to interfere, otherwise should they join the rebels it would be thro' fear of being plundered by the strange Indians. I some time ago represented a small armed vessel necessary to be under the direction of the commanding officer of this Post, as a Porte respect to the Indians, and to reconnoitre the different Bays and Creeks in Lake Michigan; also to be ready to send to Detroit on immergency and finding I could not carry on the service without one, I armed the Welcome to send to Labay, St. Joseph's, Milwaukee, &c., as the winds are generally so strong that canoes cannot move even in a fair wind which makes their passages very tedious on the Lakes. But finding no favorable answer, indeed none at all to myself. I dismissed her. I can send such a vessell to St. Joseph and get answer to my letters in eight days or sooner, whereas I must not expect it in less than a month, if so soon, by a Canoe or small boat. The above representation was long before your Excellency took the Command.

I hope Your Excellency is acquainted with the reasons why Sir Guy Carleton ordered me to remain at this Post with an handful of men and no other command to a Captain of the Regiment and remaining quite removed from what will in all probility soon become the scene of action if the Rebels are not routed from the Illinois.

I have the honor, etc.,

A. S. DEPEYSTER.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 96, P. 23.

[FROM MAJOR DE PEYSTER TO GEN'L HALDIMAND].

MICHILIMAKINAC, 27th Oct., 1778.

SIR—Soon after my Letter of the 24th Inst. was dispatched by a light canoe, Messrs. Langlade & Gautier arrived here and informed me that they were sent up to attend my orders. I was surprised they brought me no Letter, but they tell me that Your Excellency was at Chamblae and that Lt. Col. Cample sent them off, least the weather should get in, so as to prevent their getting up. I have come to the resolution to send those gentlemen off to give every assistance in their power to Lt. Gov. Hamilton. I have provided them with some goods which I believe with their presents amongst the Indians will do more good than I could have expected by sending dry belts by the hands of Indians. Mr. Langlade is to undertake the Grand River near which the Ottawas and Chippewas from this place winter, and Mr. Gautier is to proceed straight to St. Joseph where he will give orders for the Indians in that neighborhood to assemble, which he endeavors to get intelligence of the route Mr. Hamilton has taken, so as to be able to join him with all expedition. Mr. Hamilton by this means will not meet with any Empediment from want of such assistance as in my power to give him.

Should they find that he is returned to Detroit they then have orders to cross the country to their old station, to keep the Labay and Mississipi Indians in temper, and there wait further orders.

I also send off my interpreter to St. Josephs to bring me back necessary information.

At this present juncture I should have found the benefit of having the sloop Welcome, as I have been obliged to press from some of the Inhabitants their only servants to enable me to make out a canoe to transport them to St. Joseph's, and the winds are rather High.

Mr. Goddard writes me that 20 puncheons of Rum has been sent up for this Post by General Carleton's orders. I have received only 14 and the quantity therein contained would not have filled much more than that number of Tierces, nor did they arrive till after I had purchased Rum.

The goods also are sent off rather late from Montreal so that if I get them the fall they are sent, it is not till after I have been obliged to purchase, which is very disagreeable. I have the name of these things without the use of them in the season most wanted. The reports I have of the little water in the French river for loaded Canoe and of the Canoes being greatly damaged in getting up, makes me fear least they should not arrive at all.

I have the honor, etc.,

A. S. DE PEYSTER.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 96, P. 232.

[BOLTON TO HALDIMAND.]

NIAGARA, Nov. 13th, 1778.

SIR—I have this day received a letter dated November the 8th from Captain Lernoult who informed me that soon after the Gage had sailed, the Felicity arrived from Michilimakinac and brought him a letter from Major De Peyster, in which he acquaints him that the Governor had stole a march which had he been informed of, he could greatly have added to its consequences by sending all the Indians returned from Montreal, but before he received Mr. Hamilton's letter they were all dispersed on their winter hunt. That on the arrival of Langlade and Gotier [two Indian officers] the 24th of Octobre he sent them to assemble what number of Indians could be got, at the Grand River and ordered them to rendezvous at St. Joseph's, having sent his own interpreter to receive them and employ them in such a manner as to assist the Governor's scheme. Capt. Lernoult also informs me that the Hurons and Santuske are much alarmed having lately had a message from Capt. Pipes and the Delawares, that they are in great danger from the Virginians incroachments on their land and have requested an asylum for their women and children, and also assistance from their warriors to prevent the enemy's encroachments, as they say the Virginians are coming in great bodies towards their villages. The Huron messengers acquaint him they have sent of Horses to bring the families and effects of the Delawares to Sanduske and the half-King's brother is gone to reconoitre the truth of this Report. He also observe, should a considerable number come that way they will undoubtedly attempt to destroy that settlement which 4,000 men may accomplish in spite of all the efforts of this Garrison, particularly at this time when they are much weakened by Governor Hamilton's Detachment, which is gone quite another way, however, he will do everything in his power to defeat their purposes.

On receiving the enclosed Letter from Capt. McGee he immediately ordered Capt. Batton [indistinct] to sail with all expedition to Niagara in order to communicate this intelligence that I might furnish him with assistance and advice in this critical juncture.

He further acquaints me that Capt. Grant sent orders for the vessels at Fort Erie to return as soon as possible to Detroit, that no steps may be omitted in securing that post and keeping open the communication on the Lakes as long as possible. He says Capt. McGee must have joined Governor Hamilton some days before he received his letter, therefore imagines he will lose no time in turning his attention to the protection of Detroit.

I have now only to inform your Excellency that in consequence of your orders for a reinforcement to be sent to Captain Lernoult, I ordered some time ago, a captain, two subaltern and fifty-nine men to Detroit, full as many [if not more] as this post ought to spare, considering the present strength of the Garrison, particularly too, at this time of the year, for soon it will be impossible for the vessels to navigate the Lakes and of course we shall be deprived of all hopes of assistance from Canada this winter.

I have the honor to be, &c,

MASON BOLTON.

P. S.—This moment I have received the enclosed Letter from Ensign Twiss, but the reports he has heard I can scarce give any credit to. Its calculated, I suppose, to serve some scheme of the rebels for they have from the commencement of these troubles succeeding merely by cunning and some false piece of news brought by their friends. Some days ago we had a report from Detroit that their Army were to take different routes, two by Seneca Country and Presque Isle in order to attack this Post, and the other by Sandusky to Detroit. I must also observe should Captain Butler fail of success, the Indian country and of course a passage to this post, will be laid opened, besides if I could send even 100 men with officers, it is my opinion it could only serve to weaken this Garrison without materially serving Detroit, were [where] cannon and 4,000 men are expected.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 122, P. 234.

Return of the Militia of Poste Vincenne who were in pay of the Rebels, as also of those who bore Commissions and were enrol'd without pay & who laid down their arms the 17th Dec'r, 1778.

	Major.	Captains.	Lieutenant.	Ensigns.	Ind. Agents.	Adjutant.	Commissary.	Interpreter.	Serjeants.	Rank & File.
In pay of the Rebels.	2	2	2	1	4	36
Enrol'd with officers who bore Com- missions	1	2	1	1	160
Without Commissions	1
Total	1	4	2	2	1	1	1	1	4	216

Officers who were on pay—

Francois Bosseron,
J. Baptiste Cardinal, } Captains.

Timothi Monbrun,
Michael Boulliette, } Lieutenants.

J. B. Vanchese Lajeunesse, Nicholas Perot, } Ensigns.

Hypolite Baulon, Indian Interpreter.

HENRY HAMILTON.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 182, P. 14.

AMERICAN AFFAIRS.

A DECLARATION.

Addressed in the name of the King of France to all the Ancient French in North America.

[TRANSLATED FROM THE FRENCH].

The undersigned Authorized by His Majesty and thence clothed with the noblest of titles, with that which effaces all others, charged in the name of the Father of his Country and the beneficent protector of his Subjects to offer a support to those who were born to enjoy the blessings of His Government.

To all his Countrymen in North America:

You were born French, you never could cease to be French.

The late war which was not declared but by the Captivity of nearly all our Seamen and the principal advantages of which our common enemies entirely owed to the courage, the talents and the numbers of the brave Americans who are now fighting against them, has wrested from you that which is most dear to all men, even the name of your Country.

To compel you to bear the arms of parricides against it must be the completion of misfortunes: With this you are now threatened. A new war may justly make you dread being obliged to submit to this most intolerable law of Slavery. It has commenced like the last by depredations upon the most valuable part of our Trade. Too long already have a great number of unfortunate Frenchmen been confined in American Prisons. You hear their Groans. The présent War was declared by a message in March last, from the King of Great Britain to both houses of Parliament, a most authentic act of the British sovereignty, announcing to all orders of the state that to trade [with America] though without excluding others from the same right was to offend, that frankly to avow such intention was to defy this Sovereignty, that she would revenge it, and deferred this only to a more advantageous opportunity when she might do it with more appearance of legality than in the last war.

For she declared she had the right, the will and the ability to revenge, and accordingly She demanded of Parliament the supplies.

The Calamities of a war thus proclaimed, have been restrained and retarded as much as was possible by a monarch whose pacific and disinterested views now reclaim the marks of your former attachment, only for your own happiness.

Constrained to repel force by force, and multiplied hostilities by reprisals which he has at last authorized if necessity should carry his arms, or those of his Allies, into a Country always dear to him, you have not to fear either burning or devastations, and if gratitude, if the view of a Flag always revered by those who have followed it, should recall to the banners of France, or of the United States, the Indians who loved us, and have been loaded with Presents by him whom they also call their Father, never, no, never, shall they employ against you their too cruel methods of War. These they must renounce or they will cease to be our Friends.

It is not by menaces that we shall endeavour to avoid combating with our countrymen, nor shall we weaken this Declaration by invectives against a brave nation which we know how to respect, and hope to vanquish.

As a French Gentleman, I need not mention to those among you who were born such, as well as myself, that there is but one August house in the universe under which the French can be happy and serve with pleasure, since its head, and those who are most nearly allied to him by blood, have been at all times through a long line of Monarchs, and are at this day more than ever delighted with hearing that very title which Henry IV regarded as the first of his own, I shall not excite your regrets for those qualifications, these marks of distinction, those decorations which, in our manner of thinking, are precious treasures, but from which by our common misfortunes, the American French who have known so well how to deserve them, are now precluded. These, I am bold to hope, and to promise, their zeal will very soon procure to be diffused among them.

They will merit them when they dare to become the friends of our Allies.

I shall not ask the Military Companions of the Marquis of Levi, those who shared his glory, who admired his talents and genius for war, who loved his cordiality and frankness, the principal characteristics of our nobility, whether there be other names in other nations, among which they could be better pleased to place their own.

Can the Canadians who saw the brave Montcalm fall in their defense, can they become the enemies of his nephew? Can they fight against their former leaders, and arm themselves against their kinsmen? At the bare mention of their names, the weapons would fall out of their hands.

I shall not observe to the ministers of the Altars that their evangelic efforts will require the special protection of Providence to prevent faith being diminished by example, by worldly interest and by Sovereigns whom force has imposed upon them, and whose political indulgence will be lessened proportionately as those Sovereigns shall have less to fear.

I shall not observe that it is necessary for Religion that those who preach it should form a body in the States, and that in Canada no other body would be more considered or have more power to do good than that of the Priests taking a part in the Government, since their respectable conduct has merited the confidence of the people.

I shall not represent to the people, nor to all my countrymen in general, that a vast monarchy having the same religion, the same manner, the same language, where they find kinsmen, old friends and brethren, must be an inexhaustible source of commerce and wealth, more easily acquired and better secured by their union with powerful neighbors, than with strangers of another hemisphere among whom everything is different, and who jealous and despotic Governments would sooner or later treat them as a conquered people, and doubtless much worse than their late Countrymen the Americans, who made them Victorious. I shall not urge to a whole people that to join with the United States is to secure their own happiness, since the whole people, when they acquire the right of thinking and acting for themselves, must know their own Interest. But I will declare, and I now formally declare in the name of His Majesty, who has authorized and commanded me to do it, that all his former subjects in North America, who shall no more acknowledge the Supremacy of Great Britain may depend upon his protection and Support.

Done on board his majesty's Ship, the Languedoc, in the harbor of Boston, the 28th day of October, in the year 1778.

ESTAING.

Vigiel de Grandolos, secretary, appointed by the King to the squadron commanded by the Count D'Estaing.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 122, P. 263.

[HAMILTON TO DE GALVIS].

SIR—Mr. Le Comte having desired permission to pass to New Orleans, I embrace the opportunity of kissing your Excellency's hand and at the same time of acquainting you with the circumstance which procures me that honor. The Rebel Americans, having yet footing in the Illinois country and in course having opened communication to the Colonies by taking post there and at this place, I thought it my duty to dispossess them as soon as possible.

For this purpose I set out with a small force from Detroit so late as the seventh of last October, and arrived here on the 17th of December, having a few Chiefs and Warriors of 13 different nations along with me. Having taken possession of the Fort and received the submission of the Inhabitants, who laid down their arms and swore allegiance to his Britannic Majesty, I have contented myself this winter with sending our parties to different quarters.

Your Excellency cannot be unacquainted with what was commonly practiced in the time of your predecessor in the government of N. Orleans, I mean the sending supplies of Gunpowder and other Stores to the Rebels then in Arms against their Sovereign.

Tho this may have been transacted in a manner unknown to the Governor, by the Merchants, I must suppose that under Your Excellency's orders, such commerce will be positively prohibited.

The several nations of savages who accompanied me to this country may [if this traffic be continued] forget the instructions I have given them from time to time, with relation to the subjects of his Catholic Majesty, but the nations, Inhabitants of the banks of the Ohio River, must be particularly jealous of strangers coming thro' their country to supply the Rebels with whom they are actually at War.

At the same time that I mention this to Your Excellency for the sake of individuals who might suffer from their ignorance of the English being in possession of this Post, and of the communication by water to the Mississippi, I think it incumbent on me to represent to Your Excellency that the Rebels at Kaskasquias, being in daily apprehension of the arrival of a body of men from the upper posts, accompanied by the savages from that quarter have declared that they will take refuge on the Spanish Territory as soon as they are apprized of their coming.

As it is my intention early in the spring to take a progress towards the Illinois, I shall represent to the officers commanding several small Forts and posts on the Mississippi for His Catholic Majesty, the impropriety of affording an Asylum to Rebels in Arms against their lawful Sovereign. If after such a representation the Rebels should find shelter in any Fort or post on the Mississippi it will become my duty to dislodge them, in which case their protectors must blame their own conduct, if they should suffer any inconvenience in consequence.

Perhaps I may be favor'd with a letter from Your Excellency before the arrival of reinforcements. I expect next spring at the same time that the officers acting under Your Excellency's orders, may receive notice how they are to act, whether as friends or enemies to the British Empire.

I have the honor to be, Sir, Your Excellency's most devoted and most obedient humble Servant,

HENRY HAMILTON.

St. Vincennes, Jan. 13, 1779.

To His Excellency, Don Bernardo de Galvis, Governor, &c., of N. Orleans.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 122, P. 308.

[KILLBUCK TO MONTOUR].

COOSHOCKING, January 18, 1779.

Mr. John Montour:

I will inform you herewith that I and my Councillors shall be very glad to see you here at Cooshocking. I wish therefore that you would arise and come as soon as possible. I assure you that you shall have nothing to fear or to be doubtfull in anything. You shall be treated very kindly by our brothers the United States..

Colonel Morgan, who is now at Pittsburg, and your friend Mr. Dodge, are much desirous to see you.

As you know and understand matters better than others you will endeavour to explain to the Wyandots and other nations what a strong chain of friendship we have made with the United States, and encourage them to take hold of it likewise. It is not yet too late, it is time yet, if they will accept of Peace. I am your friend,

GALALEMEND.

Capt. John Killbuck to Mr. John Montour.

FORT PITT, January 4th 1779.

[DODGE TO MONTOUR.]

Dear Friend Montour:

It is with the greatest pleasure that I inform you that I made my escape out of Quebec the ninth of October last, the enemy, and am now arrived safe here at this place.

I have said all I could in your favor and you may depend on it that you will be treated by the Americans as a friend now. It is therefore the desire of Colonel George Morgan and also of your friend John Dodge that you might come as soon as possible to this place, where you may depend that you will be treated well and receive an immediate employ, as also good wages.

We also desire you to send for Shaganoba, the young Tawaa Chief Augushawa, the head Warrior of the Ottawa nation, and as many of the Wyandots, Potawetamies and Chibwas as you can send word to, and let them know that I am here and shall be glad to speak to them whenever they come, or may appoint a time when we will meet one another and rejoice with one another. I am impatient to see you and you know we are good friends. Fear nothing, for nobody will hurt you, and you will find it to your advantage.

I am your friend,

JOHN DODGE.

To Mr. John Monture.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 122, P. 311.

OCHI TOWN, Jan'y 19, 1779.

[ZEISBERGER TO GIBSON.]

DEAR SIR—Captain John Killbuck this evening sent messengers here whom he desired me to inform you of the following Intelligence. They had today by two Warriors who came to Cooshocking and were going to war but were stop'd. They told that 13 days ago two companies of warriors, one of seven and the other of 18 men, among the latter is Simon Gistie [Girty?]; were gone to Fort Lawrence in order to get Col. Gibson's scalp. Their scheme is to deceive you by carrying Deer's tails on their heads and by that means to get into the Fort.

Captain Killbuck therefore thinks proper as the enemies have got notice of the Token by which the Friendly Delaware Indians are known at the Fort. Another token should be fixed upon, which you will think on and let me know.

These two warriors which at first was unwilling to tell anything, said it had been forbidden them to make it known at Cooshocking, as they would give you intelligence of it.

They further said that the full moon after the next [which will be about the 2d of March] they intend to attack Fort St. Lawrence with a great number of warriors [and if not white people along with them is a question] at present they were assembling and mustering up their Warriors at St. Dusky and Detroit to be ready at the appointed time. At Mamakossing are now two Warriors, Capt'n with their men, but cannot learn how many in number, nor what they are about; likewise they say that the Enemies intention is to fetch off the Ministers here.

This intelligence we inform you of as we had it. We cannot tell for certain if it is all true, but will give you warning to be upon your guard, and as we suppose Mr. Sample to be on his way hither, who will be in danger, Capⁿ Killbuck resolved to send six men to meet him and conduct him hither, but if they should not meet him to proceed to Fort Lawrence. He desireth you if they come to you to fill their Horns with powder and give them some Lead.

I am exceeding glad and much obliged to you for having our safety at heart, and that you informed the General of it to fall upon some plan for our protection, and you see by this it is necessary indeed of Col. Morgan. I had no letter at all, but a speech to the Council at Cooshoocking of which to mention, time is too short now, as it is late at night and the messengers are to set off very early tomorrow morning.

Mr. Sullivan will go from hence straightway with some Indians to conduct him to Fort McIntosh.

Present my best comp'ts to the Gentlemen officers of the Garrison.

I am, dear Sir, Your most obedient humble servant,

D. ZEISBERGER.

To Jno. Gibson, Colo. Command't. at Fort Lawrence.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 122, P. 309.

[GIBSON TO McINTOSH].

DEAR GENERAL—Yours of the 8th inst. came safe to hand by Capt. Clark of the 8th Pennsyla. Regt. by whom I received 46 suits of clothes, 196 shirts, 11 pairs of shoes and five Caggs of Whiskey, which is but a poor supply for our present wants. Not one of my Artificers came with the Party and Col. Brodhead has order'd all his to join him.

By the enclosed letter from the Rev'd Mr. Zeisberger, you will be informed of the intention of the Savages and what we have to expect from them, you may depend on it I shall be on my guard. I hope if Mr. Gistre comes to pay a visit I shall be able to trapann him. Should the Indians penn us up, we shall be in a very distrest condition, unless timely supplies are sent to us which always should be sent with a strong escort, as they will endeavour to waylay the road. I am greatly surprized [that] the stores which Mr. Sample wrote for, have never been forwarded by the Quarter master. We have not a single nail to make a Sentry Box or a door for the Stores.

Can no method be fallen on to protect the poor Ministers and our Delaware friends? Unless something can be done in a few weeks we must lose them. If Horses can be procured Provisions can be brought from Fort Pitt this month and next, as soon as in the summer which if we had a sufficient quantity of them, then, they might be moved up here. For God's sake, dear General, strain a point to save them; they really merit it. The Medicines I wrote for have never been sent, and those we had are entirely expended. Mr. Berry has never made his appearance. I am determined to call him to account for his conduct. Pray do not let Mrs. Sample know her husband is gone to the towns. The Indians who had their Horses stole are constantly teasing me to pay for them. Please direct me what to do as to Capt. Neal's acct. with the Regt. Capt. Beale can inform you I should be glad he would resign, and as to the Sawyer I think the Regiment would be better without him. Please to hurry up Beale and Harrison as soon as they arrive.

I am, d'r General, your most obed't and humble Servant.
JNO. GIBSON.

I shall write you in a few days by Express and enclose returns, &c.
J. G.

Fort Lawrence, Jany. 22, 1779. To Brigadier General MacIntosh.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 122, P. 314.

If Mr. Sample meets this he is to open the letter and read it.

[GIBSON TO BRODHEAD.]

For Colo. Bolton, Comm't. the Post on the Lakes:

DEAR COLONEL—Your kind letter with the things therein mentioned came safe to hand by Capt. Clarke and am sorry have no other return at present to make you but my bare thanks by the enclosed copy of a letter from the Rev'nd Mr. Zeisberger. The news from Cooshocking and the intentions of the savages will be made known to you. For God's sake try and spurr up old Lac to doe something for the poor Moravians and the friendly Delawares. I have sent by Capt. Clark all the men of your Regt. except the two Sawyers and the Tanner which I hope when you consider the present situation we are in, you will pardon. It is to be hoped Mr. Gen'l will soon be recalled, and things will be pushed with vigour in the Spring. Capt. Clark being only a night with us prevents my writing a longer letter as he will inform you of the Minutia of this place.

I have given him receipts for the different articles he delivered here. Pray write Colonel Morgan to try to get something done for the ministers and the people of Cooshocking. I shall write to you by express in a few days, for shall take the liberty of enclosing some letters for my friends down the country; in the meantime believe me, D'r Colo., with sincerity, your real friend and affectionate humble servant,

JOHN GIBSON.

Please make my best comp'ts to the gentlemen of MacIntosh and to Miss Nancy.

Fort Lawrence, 22nd January, 1779.

To Colonel Brodhead.

[GIBSON TO MORGAN].

DEAR SIR—The enclosed copy is a letter which I received last night from Mr. Zeisberger by which you will be informed of the intention of the savages, and the situation of the Moravians and our friends at Cooshocking. The Messengers inform me that Dan Sullivan will not return till Pekkeland and another Indian who went with dispatches which you sent to the different nations, return. Mr. Sullivan rather trifled his time here in staying five days, altho I pressed him to proceed on. For Heaven's sake push the General to try to save the poor Moravians and our friends at Cooshocking. Could not some of Colo'l. Brodhead's, the new Levies and some militia be sent to their Towns immediately to build a Fort for them, or move them up here. Mr. Girtie has not as yet made his appearance. I hope if he does to prevent his taking my scalp. The militia, or some others, when here stole five horses from our friends at Cooshocking. They have been seizing me for pay. Please mention it to the General, or direct me what to doe. The people who stole them are known, I am informed, to the General.

I expect to hear in a few days from Cooshocking and shall send an express to Fort Pitt, as soon as possible after that. I shall then write you again. Please communicate the intelligence to Major Taylor as I have refer'd him to you for news. I shall be happy to hear from you.

I am, D'r sir, y'r most obed't humble servant,

JNO. GIBSON.

Fort Lawrence, Jany 22, 1779.
Colonel Morgan.

[GIBSON TO TAYLOR.]

DEAR TAYLOR—Yesterday Capt. Clark and party arrived here by whom I received 46 suits of clothes, 194 very ordinary shirts, 11 pairs of shoes and only 5 Cags of Whisky By the copy of a letter which I have inclosed to the General and Col. Morgan, you will be inform'd of the Intentions of the Savages, which if true is bad enough, indeed.

Mr. Berry nor Mr. Ensign Harrison have not made their appearance. Please to let them know from me that it will be necessary for them to repair to this post immediately and also for them to produce something better than a bare sayso for their past conduct. Pray for God's sake hurry up Beale and Harrison as soon as they arrive. The General writes me the honor'ble, the Assembly of Virginia, have complimented the officers and soldiers of our Line with six months' pay. Generous indeed!

If any steps can be taken to get it for the Regiment try to get it done.

Endeavor to collect the stragglers of the Regiment and send them here. There is some at Stewarts' crossing and at Sullivans. What has Campbell done with our cloaths or where are the drest deer skins which he procured for the use of the Regt. Pray write me by every opportunity. I hope Col. Steele has before this time acquitted himself with honor. Present my compt's to him and to Mr. Duncan. Tell them I shall write to them again in a few days.

I am, D'r Taylor, Y'rs most sincerely,

JNO. GIBSON.

Please to send a copy of the articles of war and get a copy of the arrangement of the Virginia line from the General and send it to me. J. G.

To Rich'd Taylor Esqre., Major of the 15th Virginia Regt., Fort Pitt, honoured by Captain Clark.

Endorsed: Copy of intercepted Letters for Col. Bolton, rec'd 17th April, 1779.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 122, P. 266.

[HAMILTON TO HALDIMAND.]

ST. VINCENNES, January 24th, 1779.

SIR—The last packet I had the honor to write to your Excellency was sent off from this place the 30th of December, which was to be forwarded by express from Detroit.

The various reports brought to me by the savages agree in the mean as to the design of the Southern Indians, who were to make four several parties for the ensuing spring, one towards Kaskasquias to attack the Rebels there, another to go up the Ohio to assist the Shawanese, a third to come to this place to make peace with the Ouabash Indians and drive the Americans out of their Country, and the fourth to remain in the mouth of the Cherakee river to intercept any boats coming up the Mississippi or going down the Ohio. The nations latterly mentioned by the Indians to have formed this plan are the Chickasaes, Cherakees Choc-taws and Alibamas. They add that they were to set out in the course of this month and that there are with them four officers who have wintered in the Cherakee river. I had sent down an officer with a few of the volunteers, and a party of savages with a chief, who were to go to Cherakee river to acquaint the savages assembled there of our being in possession of this place and to encourage them to persevere in their design, but they were met by some Delawares and Peorias, who had lately come from thence, who informed them that the Indians were dispersed hunting. 100 leagues up the Cherakee river, on which the Chief I had sent [an Ottawa] determined to go on a decouverte to Kaskasquias.

After his going, a corporal and seven men deserted in the night, taking the Canoe and their officers' baggage with them.

They are probably gone to Kaskasquias, where some of them have relations. The officer returned with some Frenchmen whose Pirogue he had just before seized coming with Flour from Kaskasquias to this place.

The Indian chief, who is not yet returned from Kaskasquias, had nearly taken prisoner Colonel Clarke, the Commandant of the Rebels there, but some Negroes discover'd him and he was obliged to retire without effecting his purpose.

I had informed Your Excellency that I purposed strengthening this Fort by changing its form to triangular, with a Block House in Each Angle, but I have followed Mr. Hays' proposal as less Expensive and more easily defended with a small force, which is building one at the North West Angle and another at the opposite Angle, each scouring two faces of the square, the small saillant angles in each face of the square [as it now stands] to be remov'd. The Oak logs for this work are already squared and brought in, and in about eight days one Blockhouse will be finished. They are muskett proof and will each have five ports. The three prs. we found here will be mounted in them. The other angles will be loopholed and lined, having platforms for musketry.

This afternoon arrived two parties from Kaskasquias, who have failed of success, some negroes at work having given notice of them and put the Rebels on their guard.

I have written to the commandant at the Natchey, a Captain Bloomer, whose principal object is to intercept succours from New Orleans to the Rebels; by the same opportunity I write to the Governor of New Orleans, as I have some suspicion both letters may be carried to the latter, my intelligence to Captain Blcomer is of such a nature as must dispose the Spaniards [if it should chance to fall into their hands] to keep close at home. Of the other I send Your Excellency a copy.

Tho I have no doubt at this minute of the existence of a Spanish as well as a French War yet I have as yet no account by which I may venture to act on the offensive against the subjects of Spain, which I ardently desire as there would be so little difficulty in pushing them entirely out of the Mississippi.

They have had but one Boat from New Orleans this Autumn and that loaded with liquor. The Garrisons in their posts are inconsiderable and our alliance with the Indian nations so extended that the Spaniards can have but a slender influence with them.

The Rebels have had every succour and encouragement from them they could expect, and I believe their hatred and jealousy of the English nothing abated, since their disgraceful check at the Havana.

I impatiently wait your Excellency's orders and instructions, and I hope to see a few Troops here, without which most certainly there will be no hold on the French or Indians, to say nothing of the views of the Americans.

As soon as the season will permit I shall send up to the Miamis for the Provision brought there last November. This place is incapable of furnishing a quantity, and everything is so intolerably dear that I am afraid of incurring more expence than I can possibly avoid.

Our men, off duty, go over the river for wood, but cannot cut enough for their consumption, so that it is purchased from the inhabitants at two dollars—four-fifths of a chord.

Lieut. Du Vernet has desired leave to return to Detroit. I would wish to detain him, but he urges it, and as he came thus far voluntarily, I do not chuse to insist.

26th January. This day some Shawanese who were last year at Detroit and passed this way going to the Southward, delivered me a letter which they had received from Capt. Helm, while commanding here, dated 14th August, 178 [1778], address'd to the Head men of the Creek Indians. As the Chiefs of the other nations were assembled in my room I was glad of the opportunity of communicating to them what the messages reported, the substance of which I send enclosed to your Excellency, and shall forward to Captain Lernout at Detroit, and to Colonel Bolton and Major Butler at Niagara.

Almost all the Indians are returned to their Castles, or on the point of moving off. They most of them promise to return to this place soon or to send others in their room. It is remarkable not a man has died of either Whites or Indians since our setting out, which circumstance has great weight with superstitious people as these are, and ought not to be thoughtlessly passed over by any.

Your Excellency will pardon me if I mention the necessity of a supply of Arms, Ammunition and Cloathing sufficient for keeping in their present disposition such a number of Indians as we wish to have dependent on us, and of course cannot be cloathed, armed or fed but at a very great expense. I have it not in my power as yet to procure an estimate of the numbers which will make their applications at this place, but am humbly of opinion no time should be lost in sending them from below, as the passage of the Miamis is very precarious even in May, from the scarcity of water, which is so great sometimes as not to admit of passing of Pirogues.

However inconvenient and disagreeable my staying at this place may be, I shall content myself so long as your Excellency may judge it necessary, or in any way conducive to the service, and if there should be a call for my going further on this communication, I shall always be ready to act for the best.

27th. The Ottawas came to me this day with their Chiefs, who told me they were determined to stay with me and go wherever I should order them; that if I meant to go to Kaskasquias they would go also.

The Chippoways almost all return, but tell me I may expect a number of them in the Spring.

The Hurus [Hurons] return and promise to give such an account of their treatment here and of what has passed as will induce their people to come this way in the Spring.

The Shawanese are inveterate against the Virginians, a party of them sets off tomorrow towards the Falls of Ohio, which they purpose crossing.

The Delawares hereabout have lost some Relations lately, killed by the Virginians. One of them has a Rebel passport which he makes use of to get thro' the settlement.

The Ouabache Indians are to be expected to act only from the motive of fear of the other Confederate Indians, not having the spirit of either the Southern or Northern Indians. Their situation makes them apprehensive of another visit from the Virginians. Nothing but a force sufficient to protect them will engage them to act steadily.

28th. This day we raised one of the Blockhouses. A party of Shawanese, Delawares and Peaukeshas set off on a scout to the Falls of Ohio; another of Poutcouattamies and Chippoways is to follow them shortly.

Lieut. Du Vernet tells me he shall have the draught of this river ready to send off to your Excellency in a week after his arrival at Detroit.

Endorsed: From Lieut. Gov. Hamilton at Post Vincennes the 26, 27, 28 and 29 January. Rece'd 17th April.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 122, P. 273.

[BY LIEUT. GOV. HAMILTON].

Substance of a Conference with the Indians, St. Vincennes, January 26th, 1779.

The Chiefs of the following nations assembled at Fort Sackville, vizt :

Shawanese, Ottawas, Chippoways, Hurons, Miamis, Peau-kaskaas, Quiquaboos, Ouiattonos, Delawares, and a man from the Creek nation, who are called Mascous by the Indians.

An Ottawa chief rose up and saluted the King, the Great Chief at Quebec, the Lt. Gov't. of Detroit, all the King's Subjects and the several nations of Indians, all in the name of the Chiefs then present.

He then address'd himself to the Shawanese and Delawares in particular exhorting them to exert themselves and be firm in their attachment to their father and all the Indians his children. 'Tis the pleasure of the Great Spirit that we should all meet this day in friendship. Let us then continue in these good dispositions and be of one heart and mind in acting in concert with our father for the defense of our lands. You see our father has it at heart since he is come thus far with that design. You have seen the attempts of the Virginians to dispossess us.

Brethren! You know that the great tree under whose shade we consult together is not planted here but at the Detroit. Let us take care to prop that tree that it may not lean to one side or other; let us keep it well water'd that its branches may shoot up to the clouds. Who is there so daring as to cut the Bark of that tree? No one.

Brethren! You may remember that last spring some Chickasaas and Cherakees came to Detroit to water that tree, be advised by our father. He is doing all he can do maintain us in the possession of those lands on which the Master of life has thought to place us.

A Shawanese then spoke: Father and my brethren—Five months are now passed since we left our own village to go to the Creek Country, from whence we are just returned. On our leaving this place the Commandant of the Fort [Capt. Helm] gave us a letter for the Chief of the Mascous, but as we apprehended it might contain something which would make the Indians uneasy we did not deliver it, but have brought it to our father, sealed.

We met on our road hither Kissingua and a white man [those that were sent to Mr. Stuart by Lt. Gov. Hamilton] on their way to that country. Kissingua desired us to tell the Indians of this river to assemble all the Prisoners they may have belonging to the Creeks, as he designed bringing in exchange any of them which might be in that Country.

The Shawanese then delivered the letter to the Lieutenant Governor, which was addressed to the Chief man of the Creeks, requiring him to keep his people quiet and not to give credit to what he should be told by the English. That the Shawanese and Oubeche Indians were in friendship with the Virginians, and referring him to the bearers for an account of the state of affairs in America.

The same Shawanese then produced a long white belt sent by the Great chief of the Creeks, which he had desired might be delivered at St. Vincennes from that sent up to Oucattoon and thence to the Lake Indians, that all the Indians might know the design of the Creeks, vizt. to be in friendship with them and at war with the Virginians, that by that belt they open'd a road which should be kept free and open that a child might walk safely in it.

He then delivered to the Grande Coite [a Peaukashaa Chief] a roll of Creek Tobacco, for him and his Allies to smoke, adding, in the name of the Creek Chief, that he smoaked of that Tobacco when he thought on good things and had pity on his Women and Children.

The Shawanese then told the Chiefs present that the upper town of the Creeks had not taken up the Hatchet against the Virginians till last spring, but that now they were all join'd, that they had ravaged the Frontiers as far as the old Shawanese villages, that they had taken several small forts, that the English had eight Forts besides the Great Stone Fort [perhaps St. Augustine], that the Rebels had made an attempt on the greatest, but that the Indians had assembled and forced them back, that 800 of the Inhabitants of the Colonies had come for protection to the English, almost naked, that they had quarrelled among each other and several had been killed, that the Indians were taken great care of by Mr. Stuart, that they wanted for nothing, having never before been so well supplied; that the Rebels said they were not alone, the French and Spaniards having joined them.

HENRY HAMILTON.

Lt. Gov. and Superintendent.

29th Jany. The Grande Quoete, the first Chief of the Peaukashaas, delivered to Lt. Gov. Hamilton a String with a Scalp hanging to it and said that he spake in the name of all the Ouabash Indians who had now found their father, that they had received his Hatchet and would use it with all their hearts; that they saw with pleasure the Messengers from the Creeks, Choctaws, Chickasaas, &c., and the belt which they brought would open the eyes of all their people, men, women and children, who might now see an open sky and a clear road; that the Great Spirit certainly had compassion on the Indians, since he brought them together in peace; that he would acquaint the Ouabache Indians of the treaty of peace presented by the Southern Indians and that it might be known to the northward, he delivered their Road Belt to the Miamis.

The Miamis said they would deliver it to their elders, the Ottawas, who would forward it. The string with the scalp was delivered by Lt. Govr. Hamilton to the Chippoways to carry to Detroit to be shown to the Lake Indians.

H. HAMILTON.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 96, P. 25.
No.11.

[FROM MAJOR DE PEYSTER TO GEN'L HALDIMAND].

MICHILIMACKINAC, 29th Jan., 1779.

SIR—I did myself the honour to write to your Excellency on the 27th of October, acquainting you with the steps I had taken towards giving assistance to Lt. Govr. Hamilton, having sent Messrs. Longdale [Langlade], Gautier and Ains, is returned, with the following report, viz.: that they were detained on their way by contrary winds so that they did not reach the mouth of the Grand River till the thirteenth day of November, where Mr. Langdale [Langlade] landed agreeable to his instructions; that on their way to St. Joseph's they spoke with the Ottawa Chief, who declined the Expedition for want of previous notice, but declared themselves ready in the spring; that, detained by a continuation of bad weather he and Gautier did not arrive at St. Joseph's untill the second day of December, when they found Mr. Louis Chevalier, who had been twenty-two days from Mr. Hamilton's little army which had near passed the Pays Plat before he left it; that he, Chevalier, was informed there that Gilbault [Gibault], the Priest, had been at the Post Vincent and at the oliea with a party of rebels and obliged 600 inhabitants to swear allegiance to the Congress, &c., and that by the best accounts he could get the Rebels at the Illinois did not exceed three hundred men, who were ill provided.

The above news of Mr. Hamilton having got so far the start, being told to the Indians at the Grand River, where Langdale had raised about eighty, they declined to follow at so great a distance, on which Mr. Langdale set out for his Post at La Baye, and Gautier, finding that Mr. Chevalier had already taken the few Pottawatamies which could be raised at that advanced season to Mr. Hamilton, set out for his Post on the Mississippi, carrying with them Belts and speeches to exhort the Indians to be ready in the spring if called upon.

Your Excellency's answer to my letter of the 21st Sept. [thro' La. Col. Bolton] is just come to hand.

I have the honour, &c.,

[Signed]

A. S. DE PEYSTER.

P. S.—I should be glad to know if your Excellency will please to allow the Officer any pay for his laying out and directing the route at the Portage.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 122, P. 284.

[HAMILTON TO HALDIMAND].

ST. VINCENNES, Jany 30, 1779 [not 1780].

Tomorrow the Commissary sets out with ten Pirogues to the Miamis for provision and goods sent from Detroit last November. Thirty of the Inhabitants of this place go on the Corvee.

Yesterday the principal Chief of the Peaukashaas gave me a string in presence of the other nations assembled purporting that his nation had entered heartily into the views of their brethren and would act after their example.

This day a party of his nation set off for war to the Falls of Ohio. This day also a Peoria Chief came to give me his hand. I gave him an English medal in exchange for his French one. I may venture to affirm the Indians of this country are as much united as can be expected considering the differences which have subsisted for several years among some of them and which are not easily accommodated.

By the Returns I have the honor to send to your Excellency, of this Garrison, it will appear that regulars are very few in number and need not observe how much I stand in need of the assistance of regular officers. I have such frequent interruptions from the Savages who have no other Council Chamber but my bedroom that I am sensible my letters testifie too great a want of order and method.

I have the honor to be with profound respect, Sir,

Your Excellency's most devoted and most obedient servant,

HENRY HAMILTON.

Fort Sackville, 30th January, 1779.

[Postscript over leaf.]

SIR—The officers appointed to the Volunteer company of Detroit as well as the officers of militia not having Commission under your Excellency, I take the liberty of requesting that Blank Commissions may be sent for them.

Captain La Mothe was appointed in consequence of a letter from Lord George Germaine, but has no other commission than a sort of warrant from me which is a feeble hold for a man at his time of life, with a family. Should your Excellency approve of his appointment and that of two Lieutenants to the Company, it will be a great encouragement to them and to the settlement in general.

His Lordship's letter requiring dispatch, several officers and others were appointed in the Indian department, a list of whom I sent down as soon as possible to General Sir Guy Carleton for his approbation, but there has not any answer been given as yet, tho' the draughts for their pay have been answered.

On the above mentioned occasion I put on pay one Major for the six Companies, one adjutant for the Company in the Fort, consisting of 146 men, and one adjutant for the other five companies in the settlement.

I should be happy to know your Excellency's pleasure on this subject.

[To] His Excellency Lieut. General Haldimand, Governor and Commdr in Chief, &c., &c., &c., Quebec.

From Lieut. Gov. Hamilton at Post Vincennes of the 20th [30th] Jany, 1779.

Rec'd 17th April.

[The following is a portion of the dispatches taken from William Myers, an express messenger of General Clark. It is not complete. Nor is it the original, but a summarized abstract of a part, while it wholly omits much of the original document itself. H. W. Beckwith, Editor].

JOURNAL OF G. R. CLARK.

[FROM CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL, 122, P. 289.]

“What precedes this part of Colonel Clark’s journal is only an account of his setting out, and his march till the 23d of February.”

“Set off very early, waded better than three miles on a stretch; our people prodigious [weak], yet they keep up a good heart in hopes of a speedy sight of our enemies. At last, about two o’clock, we came in sight of this long-sought town and enemy all quiet; the spirits of my men seemed to revive. We marched up under cover of a wood, called the Warrior’s island, where we lay concealed until sunset. Several of the inhabitants were out a shooting, by which was assured they had no intelligence of us yet. I sent out two men to bring in one, who came, and I sent him to town to inform the inhabitants I was near them, ordering all those attached to the king of England to enter the fort and defend it, those who desired to be friends to keep in their houses. I ordered the march in the first division, Captain Williams’s, Captain Worthington’s companies, and the Kaskaskia volunteers, in the second, commanded by Captain Bowman, his own company, and the Cohos volunteers. At sundown I put the divisions in motion to march in the greatest order and regularity, and observe the orders of their officers. Above all, to be silent. The five men we took in our canoes were our guides. We entered the town on the upper part, having detached Lieutenant Baley and fifteen riflemen to attack the fort and keep up a fire to harass them until we took possession of the town, and they were to remain on that duty till relieved by another party. The two divisions marched into the town and took possession of the main street, put guards, &c., without the least molestation. I continued all night sending parties out to annoy the enemy, and caused a trench to be thrown up across the main street about two hundred yards from the fort gate. We had intelligence that Captain Lamotte and thirty men were sent out about three hours before our arrival to reconnoiter, as it seems they had some suspicion of a party being near them. One Maissonville and a party of Indians, coming up the Ohnabadie with two prisoners made on the Ohio, had discovered our fires, and they arrived here a few days before us. I ordered out a party immediately to intercept them and took said Maissonville and one man. They gave us no intelligence worth mentioning.

"24th. As soon as daylight appeared the enemy perceived our works and began a very smart fire of small arms at it, but could not bring their cannon to bear on them. About eight o'clock I sent a flag of truce with a letter, desiring Lieutenant-Governor Hamilton, in order to save the impending storm that hung over his head, immediately to surrender up the garrison, fort, stores, etc., and at his peril not to destroy any one article now in the said garrison, or to hurt any house, etc., belonging to the inhabitants, for if he did, by heaven, he might expect no mercy. His answer was: 'Governor Hamilton begs leave to acquaint Colonel Clark that he and his garrison were not disposed to be awed into any action unworthy of British subjects.' I then ordered out parties to attack the fort, and the firing began very smartly on both sides. One of my men, through a bravery known but to Americans, walked carelessly up the main street, was slightly wounded over the left eye, but no ways dangerous. About twelve o'clock the firing from the fort suspended, and I perceived a flag coming out. I ordered my people to stop firing till further orders. I soon perceived it was Captain Helm, who, after salutations, informed me that the purport of his commission was, that Lieutenant Governor Hamilton was willing to surrender up the fort and garrison, provided Colonel Clark would grant him honorable terms, and he begged Colonel Clark to come into the fort to confer with him. First, I desired Captain Helm not to give any intelligence of Governor Hamilton's strength, etc., being as his parole. Second, my answer to Governor Hamilton was, that I should not agree to any other terms than that Lieutenant-Governor Hamilton should immediately surrender at discretion, and allowed him half an hour to consider thereof. As to entering the fort, my officers and men would not allow of it, for it was with difficulty I restrained them from storming the garrison. I dismissed Captain Helm with my answer. At the time allowed, Captain Helm came back with Lieutenant-Governor Hamilton's proposals, which were: 'Lieutenant-Governor Hamilton proposes to Colonel Clark a truce for three days, during which time there shall no defensive works be carried on the garrison, provided Colonel Clark shall observe the like cessation on his part; he further proposes that whatever may pass between them two, and any person mutually agreed upon to be present, shall remain secret until matters be finally determined, as he wishes that whatever the result of their conference may be, the honor and credit of each may be considered. So he wishes he may confer with Colonel Clark as soon as may be. As Colonel Clark makes a difficulty of coming into the fort, Lieutenant-Governor Hamilton will speak to him before the gate.

“ ‘24th February, 1779. [Signed] H. Hamilton.’

"This moment received intelligence that a party of Indians are coming up from the falls with prisoners or scalps, which party were sent out by Governor Hamilton for that purpose. My people were so enraged they immediately intercepted the party, which consisted of eight Indians and a Frenchman of the garrison. They killed three on the spot and brought four in who were tomahawked in the street opposite the fort gate and thrown into the river. Frenchman we showed mercy, as his aged father had behaved so well in my party. I relieved the two prisoners who were French hunters on the Ohio; after which Captain Helm carried my answer—thus: 'Colonel Clark's compliments to Governor Hamilton, and begs leave to inform him that Colonel Clark will not agree to any other terms than of Governor's Hamilton's surrendering himself and garrison, prisoners at discretion. If Governor Hamilton desires a conference with Colonel Clark he will meet him at the church with Capt. Helm.

" '24th February, 1779. [Signed] G. R. Clark.'

"I immediately repaired there to confer with Governor Hamilton, where I met him and Captain Helm. Governor Hamilton then begged I would consider the situation of both parties; that he was willing to surrender the garrison, but was in hopes that Colonel Clark would let him do it with honor. I answered him: 'I have been informed that he had eight hundred men. I have not that number, but I came to fight that number.' Governor Hamilton then replied: 'Who could give you this false information?' 'I am, sir,' replied I, 'well acquainted with your strength and force, and am able to take your fort, therefore I will give no other terms but to submit yourself and garrison to my discretion and mercy.' He replied, 'Sir, my men are brave and willing to stand by me to the last. If I can't surrender on honorable terms, I'll fight it out to the last.'

I answered: 'This will give my men infinite satisfaction and pleasure, for it is their desire.' He left and went a few paces aloof. I told Captain Helm, 'Sir, you are a prisoner on your parole. I desire you to reconduct Governor Hamilton into the fort and there remain till I retake you.' Lieutenant-Governor Hamilton then returned saying, 'Colonel Clark, why will you force me to dishonor myself when you can not acquire more honor by it?' I told him: 'Could I look upon you, sir, as a gentleman, I would do to the utmost of my power; but on you, sir, who have embued your hands in the blood of our women and children, honor, my country, everything calls upon me aloud for vengeance.'—Governor Hamilton—'I know, sir, my character has been stained, but not deservedly, for I have always endeavored to instill humanity as much as possible to the Indians whom the orders of my superiors obliged me to employ.' Colonel Clark—'Sir, speak no more on this subject; my blood glows within my veins to think on the cruelties your Indian parties have committed, therefore repair to your fort and prepare for battle;' on which I turned off, and the governor and Captain Helm toward the fort. When Captain Helm says, 'Gentlemen, pray don't be warm, strive to save many lives which may be useful to their country, which will unavoidably fall in case you don't agree,' on which we again conferred. Governor Hamilton said: 'Is there nothing to be done but fighting?' 'Yes sir; I will send you such articles as I think proper to allow; if you accept them, well. I will allow you half an hour to consider on them,' on which Captain Helm came with me to take them to Governor Hamilton. Having assembled my officers, I sent the following articles, viz:

" '1st. Lieutenant-Governor Hamilton engages to deliver up to Colonel Clark, Fort Sackville as it is at present, with all the stores, ammunition, provisions, etc.

“ ‘2d. The garrison will deliver themselves up prisoners of war, to march out with their arms, accoutrements, knapsacks, etc.

“ ‘3d. The garrison to be delivered up tomorrow morning at ten o’clock.

“ ‘4th. Three days to be allowed to the garrison to settle their accounts with the traders of this place and inhabitants.

“ ‘5th. The officers of the garrison to be allowed their necessary baggage, etc.

“ ‘[Signed]

G. R. CLARK.

“ ‘Post Vincent, 24th February, 1779.’

“ ‘Within the limited time Captain Helm returned with the articles signed thus, viz.:

“ ‘Agreed to, for the following reasons: Remoteness from success; the state and quantity of provisions, &c.; the unanimity of officers and men on its expediency; the honorable terms allowed, and the confidence in a generous enemy.

“ ‘[Signed]

HENRY HAMILTON,

“ ‘Lieutenant-Governor and Superintendent.’

“ ‘27th. The Willing [a boat] arrived at three o’clock. She was detained by the strong current on the Ouabache and Ohio. Second lieutenant and forty-eight men with two iron four-pounders and two swivels on board The Willing. 1st.”

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 122, P. 297.

[HAMILTON TO LERNOULT.]

SIR—As Mr. Cournailler proposes to go to Detroit for his private affairs I request of you to permit him to return when he shall have transacted his business. I believe him to be deserving of this indulgence, or should not have given you this trouble.

I have the honor to be, Sir, your most obedient humble servant,

HENRY HAMILTON.

By permission of Col. Clark.

At St. Vincennes, March 8th, 1779.

Capt. Lernoult, commd't at Detroit.

Endorsed: Copy of Gov. Hamilton's and Jehu Hay's letter in favour of Mr. Cournailler, who brought them to Detroit.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 122, P. 298.

This certifies that the bearer, Mr. Piere Cournailler, was very obliging and kind to all the officers who were taken prisoners with Lt.-Gov. Hamilton at Fort Sackville, for which reason I recommend him to the notice of those of my acquaintance wherever he may meet them.

JEHU HAY.

Post Vincennes, 8th March, 1779.

N. B.—This was enclosed in Gov. Hamilton's letter in favor of Mr. Cournailler.

R. B. L.

Endorsed: Certificate by Mr. Hay in favor of Mons'r. Cournailler.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 122, P. 304.

[G. R. CLARK TO GOVERNOR HENRY.]

DEAR SIR—By William Moiers You wrote to me if possible to procure you some Horses and Mares. Nothing could give me greater pleasure than to serve, but I doubt at present it is out of my power as my situation and circumstances is much altered as pr Letter. There being no such horses here as you request me to get and I have so much publick business to do, especially in the Indian departm't, that I doubt I shall not be able to go to the Illinois for some time. I find that you have conceived a greater opinion of the horses in this country than I have. The Pawnee and Chicasa horses are very good and some of them delicate, but the common breed in this country is trifling, as they are adulterated. The finest Stallion by far that is in the Country—I purchased some time ago and rode him on this Expedition and resolved to make you a compliment of him, but to my mortification I find it impossible to get him across the drown'd lands of the Wabash as it is near three leagues across at present and no appearance of its falling shortly, but you depend that I shall by the first opportunity send him to you. He came from New Mexico three hundred leagues west of this. I don't think it in my power to send you such mares as you want this spring, but in order to procure you the best can be got, I shall contract with some man of the Spanish government by permit of the command't, to go to the Pawnee nation two hundred leagues west, and get the finest mares to be had of the true blood. They will be good as they are all so; if they are handsome they will please you. I shall give such instructions as will be necessary and am in hopes that you will get them by the fall.

I could get five or six mares soon, at the Illinois, very fine, but I think they are hurt by hard usage as the Inhabitants are barbarous Horse Masters, but shall do it except I can execute my other plan. I thank you for your remembrance of my situation respecting lands in the Frontiers. I learn that government has reserved on the lands on the Cumberland for the Soldiers.

If I should be deprived of a certain tract of land on the river which I purchased three years ago, I have been at a considerable expence to improve, I shall in a manner lose my all.

It is known by the name of the great French Lick, on the South or West side containing three thousand acres. If you can do anything for me in saving of it, I shall forever remember it with gratitude.

There is glorious situations and bodies of land in this country formerly purchased. I am in hopes of being able in a short time to send you a map of the whole. My comp'ts to your Lady and family.

I remain, sir, your humble Servant,

G. R. CLARK.

Fort Pt. Henry, March 9th, 1779.

To His Excellency Pat. Henry, Esq., Governor of Virginia, Williamsburg.

Pr William Moires [Myers].

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 122, P. 307.

[CLARK TO HARRISON].

FORT PT. HENRY, St. Vincent, March 10th, 1779.

D'R. SIR—I received your kind letter with the thanks of the House inclosed. I must confess, sir, that I think my country has done me more honor than I merited, but may rest assured that my study shall be to deserve that Honor they have already conferr'd on me.

By my publick letters you will be fully acquainted with my late successful expedition against Lt.-Govr. Hamilton, who has fallen into my hands with all the principal Partizans of Detroit. This Stroke will nearly put an end to the Indian war. Had I but men enough to take the advantage of the present confusion of the Indian nations I could silence the whole in two months. I learn that five hundred men is ordered out to reinforce me. If they arrive, with what I have in the country, I am in hopes will enable me to do something clever.

I am with respect, Sir, your very humble servant,

G. R. CLARK.

Col. Harrison, speaker of the House D., Williamsburg.
Pr William Moires [Myers].

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 122, P. 303.

Copy taken by a party of Hurons at the Falls of the Ohio.

[BOWMAN TO GOVERNOR HENRY].

ST. VINCENT, March 12th, 1779.

SIR—I take the opportunity to return my thanks for your kind remembrance of me and the honor you have conferr'd on me in appointing me to a Majority. I hope my future conduct will be such as to discharge with honor the trust reposed in me by my country, and satisfaction to you.

I am, Sir, with the greatest esteem and regard your most obed't and very humble servant,

JOS. BOWMAN.

To His Excellency, Pr. Henry, Gov'r Virginia, Williamsbourg.

Pr express William Moiers [Myers].

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 122, P. 302.

WILLIAM MOIRES, EXPRESS,

A WARRANT

TO WILLIAM MOIRES.

Sr, as the Letters you have at present contain matters of great consequence and requires a quick passage to Williamsburg, this is to empower you to press for the service anything you may stand in need of. If you cannot get it by fair means, you are to use force of arms. I request you to lose no time as you prize the interest of your Country.

I wish you success, &c.

G. R. CLARK.

Fort Pt. Henry, March 13th, 1779.

Endorsed: No. 1. Copy of a warrant taken with the letters.

Residence of Gen. John Edgar, Kaskaskia.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 122, P. 301.

Received by Mr. Corneiller the 7th April.

[CLARK TO LERNOULT].

FORT P. HENRY, St. Vincent, March 16th, 1779.

SIR—As many of the gentlemen that fell into my hands at this Post left letters at their departure for their friends at Detroit I have enclosed them to you, hoping that you will expedite them to the persons directed to. As a few of the Inhabitants of this town, with a number of our own people have permits to go to Detroit on their lawfull business, I hope you will not detain such as should want to return, as you may be assured that I want no Intelligence from them.

You have one Mr. Bentley, Inhabitant of the Illinois, a prisoner among you. I would fondly exchange one for him of equal rank if agreeable. I learn by your letter to Gov. Hamilton that you were very busy making new works. I am glad to hear it as it saves the Americans some expences in building.

My comp'ts to the Gentlemen of yr Garrison.

I am yours, &c.,

G. R. CLARK.

To Capt. Lernoult:

The officers of Fort Post Henry solicit Capt. Lernoult to present their compliments to the officers of his Garrison.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 122, P. 299.

FORT P. HENRY ST. VINCENT, March 20th, 1779.

[BOWMAN TO LERNOULT.]

SIR—In justice to my Countryman, Mr. Thomas Bentley, who has been detained in Canada almost two years a prisoner, to the ruin of his business and distraction of his family, I hope you will therefore consider the lenity shown to the Prisoners that fell into the hands of Colonel George Rogers Clark at this Post, who upon application obtained permission from the Colonel to return to his familys at Detroit and that you will also apply to the Command'r in Chief in Canada, to obtain the permission for the said Thos. Bentley in order that he may once more return to his family, which suffer much by his absence.

I am Sir, yr most humble servant,

JOS. BOWMAN

Major in Col. Clark's Battallion.

On public service: Capt. R. B. Lernoult, Esq., Command't at Detroit.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 122, P. 300.

FORT P. HENRY, St. Vincent, 21st March, 1779.

[GIRAULT TO LERNOULT.]

SIR—Gratitude obliges me to address you these lines to represent to you the case of one of my benefactors, Thomas Bentley, Esq., who has been detained either in Canada or on the way these two years almost, and that on mere suspicion. Hoping that in consideration of Colonel Clarke's humane treatment to those he took here, who we found in arms against us, notwithstanding which the Colonel sent them to their respective homes to join their families without detaining them one moment, you will if in your power, procure the said Thos. Bentley, Esq., liberty to return to his family. It is impossible to express the losses he has sustained by this absence, having no one to look to his Interest. I shall not be tedious, as you are a sufficient judge of his sufferings. I rest assured that your generosity and humanity will not allow you to look over this, but in compensation to Colo. Clark's kind treatment to so many of your people, you will certainly obtain Mr. Bentley's liberty as soon as you possibly can and send him to his distressed Family and confused affairs, by absence. This will ever be acknowledged as a most particular favor granted to, Sir, your very obedient and humble serv't, JOHN GIRCIULT [GIRAULT].

Lt. in Col. Clark's Batalion.

On public service: Capt. Lernoult, Comm'd't. Detroit.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 96, P. 27.

No. 12.

[From Major De Peyster to Gen'l. Haldimand:]

MICHILIMAKINAC, 29th March, 1779.

SIR--I did myself the honour to write to your Excellency the 29th January, when I informed you that Langlade had failed in his attempt to move the Indians from their hunting grounds as they heard that the Lieut'n. Govr. Hamilton had got so much the start of them since which I received a letter from Mr. Louis Chevalier of St. Joseph's informing me that the Pottawatamies were returned home to pass the winter, that they brought him a letter from the Lieutn. Governor informing him that he intended not to leave Post Vincent till the spring. I should have been glad to have had a line at the same time. However, in compliance with your Excellency's Orders to give every assistance in my power, I again ordered the Ottawas and Chippewas to march and send off Express to Mr. Gautier requiring him to move down with a body of sabres, Foxes & Wesnippigoes, and he by this time should be on the March, joined by some active Canadians.

A few days ago arrived an Express from Captn. Lernoult, which gives me reason to imagine that an attempt will be made upon Detroit this Spring. I have therefore thought it most prudent to send to stop the Ottawas and Chippewas least I should be left without either to assist here or to send to Detroit if occasion should require it, and I am confident that it would be attended with very bad consequences if I suffered the Indians to go so far in search of the enemy when I hear that so formidable Body is advancing towards Detroit. Besides, from the repeated messages sent to Lieut. Govr. Hamilton, I have reason to suppose he will return to take up his government. Should it not be the case, he will still have as many Indians as he can manage. Gautier is to proceed at all events, who will be sufficiently strong to harass the Rebels should they attempt to follow Mr. Hamilton in his retreat.

The Indians properly called Grand River Indians I have advised to go directly to Detroit, as it is but a short cut across the country, and I send the Chief Matchigrins with his band from Thunder Bay, also to hearten the Indians about Detroit, as the eyes of most nations are upon him. He will serve as an Earnest of further assistance from this quarter when the Indians arrive if required.

Thus, Sir, I have endeavoured to act as appeared to me would be most conducive to the good of His Majesty's Service, which I hope will meet with your approbation.

I have the honor to be, &c.,

[Signed]

A. S. DE PEYSTER.

P. S.—I hope your Excellency will excuse the liberty I take in requesting of you to forward the enclosed in your packet to New York, where my affairs are greatly suffering, and I fear my letter never got there.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 96, P. 258.

NIAGARA, 2nd April, 1779.

[BOLTON TO HALDIMAND WITH ENCLOSURE].

SIR—I have received an express from Capt. Lernoult by the felicity a copy of his Letter I beg leave to lay before your Excellency.

[LERNOULT TO BOLTON].

DETROIT, March 26th, 1779.

SIR—I had just received copies of the several Letters taken by the Indians near Fort Lawrence and the Extracts of Governor Hamilton's and Mr. Hay's Letter when one Isidore Chaina [an interpreter] and two Hurons arrived from Post Vincent with the unfortunate news of that place having been retaken by a Colonel Clarke, the Governor and whole Garrison made prisoners, except himself, who made his escape with difficulty. This most unlucky shake, with the approach of so large a body of Virginians advancing towards St. Duskie has greatly damped the spirit of the Indians.

The Chiefs from St. Duskie [Sandusky] are come in here with John Montaine to claim Governor Hamilton's promises to assist them. They declare if a large detachment of [Troops?] with cannon are not sent without delay from below, they must go out of the way, being not able to fight the enemy alone. As the loss of this Post opens a new Road for the Virginians to this place by the Miamis River, I hope a strong reinforcement will be sent here from Niagara by return of the Vessels, at least what they can convey. As the new Work is not yet defencible, requiring many hands, the Canadians exceedingly assuming on our bad success and weakness, not one of them will lend a hand. Spades, shovels, &c., are much wanted, also ammunition as per inclosed return, above 30,000 lbs. of flower [flour] of last year's allowance not as yet sent here, with other species in proportion, and the enormous quantity consumed in the last unfortunate expedition has reduced us greatly, pray forward it, for the Indians insist on having provisions sent to them or they must starve. The loss of Governor Hamilton is a most feeling one to me. I find the burden heavy without assistance, it requires I must confess superior abilities and a better constitution. I will do my best, however.

I beg leave to repeat to you the necessity of a reinforcement being sent, as the consequence may be fatal.

I send the Felicity with this paquet, which with the Angelica already down will convey part of the Troops of the Indian Chiefs [who] wait the return of the vessels to see if any notice is taken of their distress, or prove me a liar. A letter to His Excellency's address I send you. It came some days before the unfortunate affair from Post Vincent by Lieut. Du Vernet, who is reduced. All the Canadians are Rebels to a man. I shall wait your orders with great impatience, and am, &c.,

R. B. LERNOULT.

Lt. Col. Bolton :

As the service absolutely requires, an immediate reinforcement should be sent from Detroit; I have ordered 100 men from this Garrison, with officers in proportion; 50 from the Kings's, and the same number of the best men from the Rangers, which I hope Your Excellency will approve of. At the same time I must acquaint you that if I had double the number of men in this Garrison there is work enough for them all, for this Fort is really in a ruinous state, as the inclosed Letters from Capt. Mathews, acting Engineer, will inform you. Therefore hope Lieut. Twiss will be ordered up as soon as possible, and that a strong reinforcement may be sent at the same time, otherwise the Upper Posts [I am afraid] will be in danger, and the Indians obliged to observe at least a Neutrality. This is the ninth Letter I have wrote since I received the honor of your last favour, which was dated the 12th of November, therefore am apprehensive your Letters have been intercepted.

We have received an account that the Rebels have sent a strong party to erect a Fort at the Le Bœuff near presque Isle in my neighborhood; however there is another strong party gone out to find them some other amusement.

April 8th. The Caldwell is just arrived with your Excellency's Letter dated the 25th Decembre, but as the Haldimand is preparing to sail I have only time to inform you that I shall [as far as my bad state of health will allow me] do everything in my power to obey your commands. At the same time I hope Capt. Andrews may have the management of the Naval accounts. He is very capable and one you may depend will strictly observe Your Excellency's orders; for my part, I am not able to attend to all the business of this complicated command, having been near four months confined to my room. Colonel Butler will write by this opportunity in regard to Indian affairs.

I have the honor, &c.,

MASON BOLTON.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 122, P. 330.

CANTUCKY COUNTY, THE FALLS OF OHIO,
April 4th, 1779.

[SQUIRE BOON TO COL. CAMPBELL?]

SIR—I received your letter dated Decr. 20th, for which I return you grate thanks, but in regard to seling the Horse I would much rather I could get him out hear, for the Indians has took my Horses and they are very dear to buy hear, and humbly beg you would send to the Gentlemen that has him to send him to me by William Moires and you will much oblige your humble servant, SQUIRE BOON.

Nevertheless if the Gentleman sees cause to keep him and send me two hundred pounds let him use his pleasure.

To Col. Arthur Comble [Campbell?]
these

Endorsed : No. 6. A copy of Squire Boon's letter.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 122, P. 337.

[BY LIEUT. GOV. HAMILTON.]

Acct. brought in from Post St. Vincents by Capt. Chene: Mr. Francois Maisonville, having been sent after two deserters fell in with four people from Fort Pitt, who were going to Kaskaskas, two of whom he took with a Pacquet of letters, and on his return to the Post about six miles distant, he saw the remains of fifteen fires. On his arrival he informed Lieut. Gov. Hamilton of it who demanded of the Prisoners if they could give him any further information. They answered not, and the Governor immediately concluded they were some of Capt. Helm's men, who were coming to join him at the Post, not knowing any King's Troops were there. The Governor then ordered Capt. La Motte with 20 of his company to hold themselves in readiness, and they were sent off a little time afterwards with Mr. Frans. Maisonville as a guide.

Two hours after their departure the Rebels entered at the lower end of the Village with a drum beating and a White Colour flying, and proceeded immediately to the Houses of Major Legras and Capt. Bosson. They then marched up to the Fort which they immediately invested. Capt. Chene, who lived in the Village, not being able to get into the Fort, made his escape to the Wood, together with Egnseway, Chamintawa, Chiefs of the Ottawas, and the Sastaritsi, King of the Hurons, from the wood, which he supposes distant from the Fort a mile and a half. He heard a smart firing all night, and now and then a great gun from the Fort. About 11 at night he with Sastaritsi and Egnseway attempted to enter the Village, but not finding it practicable they returned again to the wood, and in the morning were joined by the Petit Gres, chief of the Miamis, and three of his people. About 8 or 9 o'clock in the morning the firing ceased on both sides, and Capt. Chene, a little time afterwards, met with a frenchman who told him Govr. Hamilton desired to Capitulate, the purport of which was to march out with the honours of War and return to Detroit. This Col. Clarke [he said] would by no means agree to, returning for answer that he would not again leave it in his power to spirit up the Indian nation and scalp the women and children. Egnseway, who had been about the Fort, returned with the same acct. as the frenchman. The firing began again on both sides about 12 o'clock, and about 3 in the afternoon Capt. Chene met with the Messrs. Bolons, who had just come from the Village with their families, and confirmed what he had before heard concerning the Capitulation, telling him at the same time that Capt. LaMotte had got into the Fort that morning with the loss of one man, who was made Prisoner. Capt. Chene with the Indians, retired a little further into the wood, and towards sundown Egnseway once more set off for the Fort in order to get further information, he returned with an account he had got from an Indian and a Frenchman, that seven of his nation was killed. The firing continued all night, and again ceased about 7 or 8 the next morning. About 3 or 4 o'clock in the afternoon Monsr. Chene and the Indians heard 9 Cannon shot, and a Pioria came to them some time afterwards and told them the Fort was taken. This was confirmed by a Frenchman and a Miamis Chief and Egnseway, who had been on the decouverte, arrived some time afterwards with a Pontawatamis, the latter of whom saw the Virginians drawn up on each side of the Fort Gate, to the number, he thinks, of 60, that after a talk of some time the Gate was opened, that they all went in, and a little time afterward he heard 9 great guns fire. This account was confirmed by a number of Indians and French people to Egnseway, who likewise told him that only five of his people were killed. They further said that six soldiers were killed in the Fort and particularized the Master Gunner.

Capt. Chene, who narrowly escaped being taken, the Virginians passing within 15 yards of him, says their number could not have exceeded 60.

The Indians who were killed had just returned from War, had made two Prisoners at the Fort upon the Falls on the Ohio, and not knowing the enemy were in the village, were there surpriz'd and killed. He further adds that 30 of the enemy were Creols of the different villages on the English and Spanish sides of the Illinois.

The master of the Felicity spoke with the Wellcome returning from the Miamis River with goods on board intended for Post St. Vincent. They report that the Enemy amounted to 500 men, with 60 Riflemen, Virginians.

Endorsed: Acct. brought in from Post St. Vincents by Capt. Chene.

Reed 17th April, 1779.

Copy of this taken for Sir Henry Clinton.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 122, P. 336.

[BIRD TO LERNOULT.]

SANDUSKY, March 13, 1779.

DEAR SIR—Tho the situation I am in deprives me of power to detain the Vessel, yet it appearing necessary for your information and the good of the service that I should do it in the present case, I have taken upon me that authority at Oruntundis [the name by which the Hurons called Sandusky] and the Chief's requests who are return'd from Warr and by the message sent [by one of their Chiefs] to me, they seem to have something of importance to communicate or resolve upon. They promise positively to be here on the 11th. Capt. Graham has been so anxious to return, ever since the first day of his arrival that it is with the utmost difficulty I have prevail'd with him to remain. 13 March. The Chiefs arriv'd yesterday; have considerably reinforced the Fort at Tuscarawas. The savages are very uneasy, would fain Council. I refus'd anything to do with the affair and beg'd they would send their determinations to you, which they conclude to do. Knives, flints, fuzees, and tomahawks are wanting.

H. BIRD.

To Captain Lernoult, Command't of Detroit, Etc.

Endorsed: Extract of Letters from St. Duski [Sandusky] from Lieut. Bird to Capt. Lernoult. Rect 17th April, 1779, for Col. Bolton.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 181, P. 167.

PORT ST. VINCENNES, 18th April 1779.

DEAR FRIEND—You will excuse me for being so long silent, but you must consider how I have been tossed about since I had the pleasure of seeing you last, that together with the distance and uncertainty of any Letter getting safe, made me let it drop, you must know that Colo. Clark has taken this place the 24th Febr'y last and relieved me, who was then Prisoner in the Fort and was pleased to confer on me some little employment in the Indian Department. Its therefore my Duty to inform you, that there has been some misunderstanding between some of our people and the Delawares in which three of them was killed and two wounded. This happened in the Colonel's absence from Kaskaskias. Would be very glad you would use your endeavours to reconcile matters as far as in your power lies; the particulars you will see at large in a Letter to the Commanding Officer at Tuscarawas.

I had the pleasure, after being relieved, to be sent on an expedition up the Wabash to meet a certain number of Boats, that were coming to the place with stores and Merchandize [which I took together with the Chief Judge of Detroit who was sent with Gov. Hamilton and the rest of his officers to Williamsburgh], the which I hope to be of infinite benefit to your Expedition against Detroit, as all the Indians on the Wabash are our Friends.

I am, D'r Sir, your most obedt

H. S.

[HENRY TO GIBSON.]

D'R SIR—I must entreat you to let me know something concerning my family, whether my mother is yet living or not, as also my friends and old acquaintances; and any other news that may occur or that has happened since my departure. Robin George has arrived at Kaskaskias from Orleans with 40 men of Capt. Willing comp'y. Mine and my Wife's complm'ts to you and all Friends, &c., &c., I am, Sir, your most obed't humble servant,

MOSES HENRY.

To Colo. John Gibson.

Copies of Rebel Letters recd the 10th July, '79.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 122, P. 342.

[CLARK TO NANALOIBI.]

[Translation.]

To Nanaloibi, Pout. Chief, 20th April, 1779.

I have always heard it said that Indians have no ears. I think that it will be to the purpose that I should make a sally upon them to give them some. However, I dare not complain again of you nor of your youth because of what has been told me, that you did not wish to go to war with the Big Knives. It is this which decided me today to extend to you my hand and to say to you as your father, to remain quiet on your mat as you have done up to the present, and to advise all Indians who are your friends to be no longer foolish and to charge themselves to maintain their women and children rather than to meddle with war.

Tell them on my behalf that I am also a good father as well as a good warrior, and that if they push my patience to the limit they will know. If there are any who still wish to be fools I bid them be cautious of solid arms because they would be unhappy if they missed.

I have some soldiers who have no fear but who are also foolish and I might not perhaps be able to stop them myself, for they are only seeking war and ask only to fight. Thus I repeat once more for the Indians to remain quiet. I do not wish to see them fighting nor to fight myself against you. If they have bunged ears let them have them pierced.

Have them told, or tell them yourself, that for a long time I have advised them and that I am beginning to get tired of all Indians and I only write to you to Mech-

Kigie because I believe a party of others my enemies, who will know me on the first folly they commit. Do not listen to wicked birds that come into your village to take your young men. Look on the French always as your allies who does them harm. Let me know if anyone goes to your village to raise young men for the English. I order you, if you wish to be my friend, to take all means that may bring them to me or divide them equally in your village.

Those who invite you to war are your worst enemies, so believe me and be peaseable. You do not wish to make your families unworthy of pity.

This is my last advice.

LT. CLARK.

Endorsed: From Major de Peyster received the 1st July, 1779. Rebel Col. Clark's speech to the Poutawatamies Indians.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 96, P. 29.

No. 13.

[From Major de Peyster to Genr'l Haldimand.]

MICHILIMAKINAC, 2d May, 1779.

SIR—I am sorry to acquaint your Excellency that on the 24th of April I received a letter from Captain Lernoult dated the 21st of March informing me that Lt.-Govr. Hamilton and his whole party had fallen into the hands of the Virginians.

Since the arrival of this trading Batteau I have waited with the greatest anxiety for further intelligence, but finding none arrive with a series of fine winds, I have come to the resolution to send to enquire what is going on at Detroit. I flatter myself that there are orders for me to go and take the Command there, for which purpose I hold myself ready at a moment's warning.

The season here has been very open, so that we had reason to expect arrivals from the Grand River in the Lake Michigan some time past, but as yet can neither hear of trader or Indian being at hand.

Some squaws who went at about forty miles from hence to visit their friends, returned with the news that the Virginians were buolding boats near Milwaukee and that they had sent belts which were accepted by the Ottawas and Chippawas, requesting of them to remain at the Grand River till they, the Virginians, had taken this Fort and delivered it into the hands of the Indians old Friends, the French, and that Siggenake, the disaffected Milwaukee Chief, was to lead the first division. Yesterday arrived a man from the same place who relates that he was informed from the Chief Gicee who wintered at the Grand Traverse about forty leagues from this, did not believe it, and sent the Person who brought it back to the Grand River to get further information. He further said that he understood that the Virginians were at Chicagow.

I have dispatched people to make all possible enquiry relative to this news. Should they come that way, I think there is hopes of their repenting their voyage, as I cannot be persuaded the Indians have so soon forgot their promise, but on the other hand if Detroit falls, it must be expected that their friendship will fall with it.

The provisions at this Post turn out very bad, great quantities of the Pork appearing evidently to have been condemned before sent up here, the pieces being much cut and scarcely packed over and that with dry salt. What Pork we serve as good is frequently so rusty that the soldier scarcely gets half his allowance.

I have the honor, etc.,

[Signed]

A. S. DE PEYSTER.

P. S.—I have taken the liberty to enclose a copy of the last Condemnation for the month of April.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 122, P. 345.

[MONFORTON TO LERNOULT.]

[Translation.]

To Mr. Belanger Larnoult, Commandant at Detroit.

HURON VILLAGE, 7th May 1779.

SIR—I had the honor of informing you some time ago that I have at my house a Virginian prisoner for 18 months, with the Hurons and adopted by them. I learned from him that an officer of Congress has sent a letter to the men of this village, that he had read it and that being unable to bring it to me he comes to tell me the contents nearly in these terms. “Sit down and read with attention the speech of your ancient father, the King of France, with whom the Americans are allies.

“The King of England is bound at present, and is sorry for what he has done. It is on his part he speaks to you this parole, and I invite you to come to see me with three or four of your Chiefs and the Indians, your neighbors. Say to the inhabitants of Canada that they enjoy much more advantages than they do with the French.”

A man named Douillanter, a chief of the Hurons, replied to this letter that he had the Virginian write, saying he had been at war, forced there in the time of the reign of his father, the King of France, when he was required to fight, he did what he believed was his duty, and would do the same under the King of England, but that not knowing the consequences, would at present ask Governor Hamilton. The fear of the other nations hindered him making war. He had accepted the casket [casse-tette] that he laid down now. The Indians held council for four days, when they assembled to make peace [the Virginian said] with the Americans, and to speak at once, to stop as much as possible all their savages and those of other nations; they departed yesterday. The Virginian said he thought they had some dealings with one Montour who carried three Collars.

He told me Montour was a man well instructed and speaking good English, that he arrived soon after little Concarquin, who had been introduced into the fort and had a long interview with the Commandant and that since his arrival the savages were always in council, with the result that they would send him again with three collars to conclude the peace. That he was not sure he would go, but that had he any news to send he would go there. Do not hope that the savages will let him go willingly. I asked him what that old tent ment which I had seen on the Point of the Hurons. He replied that it is a party of Sauteux who were going to war, but whom the Hurons persuaded to return home where they sent some Collars of Peace. They were to continue the road assuring the Hurons of their return.

Devotion, Sir, by duty and inclination, towards the service of the King, I will neglect nothing that I believe to have any to report, and if that information is not of great consequence, you will receive it as a proof of my disposition to manifest my zeal should a better occasion present itself.

I have the honor to be with profound respect your very humble and obedient servant,

GULLE MONFORTON.

I have just learned that a Huron has arrived from Sandusky, where he reports that the Wolfs [Loups] have divided between the King and the rebels and are fighting, and four are killed.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 96, P. 32.
No. 14.

[From Major De Peyster.
To Gen'l Haldimand.]

MICHILIMAKINAC, 13 May, 1779.

SIR—I did myself the honor to write to your Excellency on the 2d instant, a copy of which letter I now enclose.

The Chippawas of the Island of Michilimakinac arrived here the 8th from the Grand River and reports that the Ottawas and Grand River Traders are on their way. They declare that the news of the Virginians building boats on the Lake Mitchig was the invention of some evil minded Indians, at that neither themselves nor the Ottawas would listen to the Rebels' Belt.

Mr. Langdale [Langlade] arrived last night and informed me that on his arrival at Labaye he received an order from Lt. Govr. Hamilton acquainting him that he had wintered at Post Vincent, therefore required of him and Gautier to join him early in the spring by the Illinois River. That he accordingly set out with some Indians and reached Milwaukee where he received accounts of Mr. Hamilton's being taken, when the Indians disheartened, would proceed no further. The enclosed letter from Gautier will give your Excellency an account of his expedition. Mr. Langdale assures me that a Canadian named Renelo, at the head of twenty horsemen, is travelling thro' the Iowa and Sakis country to purchase horses from [for] Mr. Clarke, telling the Indians that they will be with three hundred men at Labaye soon. But Mr. Langdale rather believes that they mean to transport themselves to Detroit. The Indians were so much divided that it was not possible to take Renclo and his party.

He was informed by a man who came from the Illinois, that the Virginians then did not exceed sixty men; that they were mostly in bed, the last Fall with the maladie du pays but were talking of a great reinforcement.

The Canadians who want to return to this Post have leave, on taking the oaths not to serve against the United States. Clarke assures them that he will be here nearly as soon as themselves. None are yet arrived.

I don't care how soon Mr. Clarke appears, provided he come by Lake Michigan, and the Indians prove staunch, and, above all, that the Canadians do not follow the example of their brethren at the Illinois, who have joined the Rebels to a man. I am, however, in hopes that their connection at Montreal will be a check upon them.

If I had armed vessels I could make them constantly coast Lake Michigan to awe the Indians and prevent the Rebels building Boats. There is a small sloop here as already reported, but no sailors, nor will my present garrison admit of any detachment, it not being by the one half sufficient to do the necessary duty here. I shall allow the Traders to come to this post, but if things do not greatly alter, I will not allow one to go the Labaye road.

The Sakis and Reinards seems to be easy about the matter as appears by Gautier's letter, but they will soon open their eyes, if it is possible effectually to restrain that trade. On that head, as well as how I am to act in case Detroit is taken, is what I hope I will receive your full instructions about, by a light canoe. If Detroit should be taken it is evident we have but a dismal prospect. However, what can be expected from the subdivisions shall be done. I think I may with propriety call my hand full by that name, when a part are employed at the Cannon, having nine Pieces of Ordnance and only two Artillerymen.

I have sent to Saginaw to endeavor to secure six hundred bushels of corn for the Indians, without which our flour will run short by the fall of the year.

I have the honor to be, &c.,

[Signed]

A. S. DE PEYSTER.

P. S.—Give me leave to assure your Excellency that nothing can be expected from the Indians without troops to head them.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 96, P. 92.

No. 10. ,

QUEBEC, 20th May, 1779.

[HALDIMAND TO DE PEYSTER.]

SIR—In my letter of this morning I informed you of the principal object that I had in view in regulating the merchandize for the upper posts, notwithstanding this be delivered to you by Mr. C. Paterson whom I have permitted to go express to your Post or neighborhood, would assist government in securing the Indians and at the same time run no risk of falling into the hands of the enemy. You will immediately write me the particulars by express. I wish just to mention to you that Governor Hamilton, a few days before he was taken, sent about 300 corvee men for some provisions and presents, which he had left at Miamis and which consequently fell into the hands of the rebels and would be very usefull to them in any expedition they may form by the River Chichagow against your Posts.

In one of your former letters you reported some merchants having passed Michilimakinac contrary to your orders, with goods which they probably arrived to the Rebels. I beg you will inform me of their names, by whom employed or with whom connected; also the time this happened, that I may use my endeavours to punish all who are concerned in such villainous practices, and should anything of the sort happen in future, I beg to have the earliest and the most minute information concerning it.

As it is possible my letter of the 6th inst. may not yet have reached you, I repeat here, that if any merchant whatever arrives at or near your post with any kind of goods without my particular passport, that you immediately seize all such goods and either detain them at Michilimackinac or send them to Detroit, as you may judge best for His Majesty's Service.

I have had repeated application from Lt.-Col. Campbell, Superintendent of Indian affairs, to grant a Passport for the Sieur Calvert [Calvet] to carry merchandize into your neighborhood, which I could not comply with consistantly with the Impartiallity I am determined always to observe respecting Traders. Nevertheless if you find the Sieur Calvert to be the steady friend to government, with the influence Lt.-Col. Campbell reports him to have amongst the savages, I should be glad you found out some line to employ him in, that might reward his Fidelity.

Notwithstanding I have granted no pass for Michilimackinac, I have enclosed for your information Copy of my answer to the merchants trading to the northwest of the Upper Country.

F. H.

Quebec, May 20th, 1779.

No. 11.

[HALDIMAND TO DE PEYSTER.]

SIR—Having no occasion to doubt but my several letters of April 8th and 18th, also of May 6th will be with you before you receive this, I have only now to inform you that no ships are yet arrived from England and that the various accounts I have received from different parts respecting the Magazines and Provisions which the rebels are forming in the upper Country together with the many artfull and designing letters, which they have found means to distribute in several of the Indian Villages, calls upon you to use every exertion to preserve the Savages in our Interest, and effectually secure the post of Michilimakinac from any insult which the Rebels may meditate against it. In this situation of affairs I have thought proper to prohibit all Merchants from carrying their goods to your parts, allowing them only to take such Provisions and Cloaths as may be sufficient to support their servants during the year, and to prevent the trade from being lost to the Province.

I shall continue to pay every attention in my power to the support of the upper posts and whenever Indian presents arrive they shall be forwarded without delay, and an apartment of which is now on their way to Michilimakinac, and I hope will arrive within a few days of this letter. In the meantime I am pushing forward provisions and Rum with all possible dispatch by the way of Lake Ontario, and when I inform you that I would reinforce most of the upper Posts, if I imagined I could send provisions for their support, I am sure you will conceive the anxiety I must feel to have that article distributed with justice and Economy, and how much pleasure it would afford me to hear that the industry of the Troops made the natural produce and resources of the place and situation where they are, help to maintain them and to reserve the other provisions for cases of emergency. F. H.

Copies of Letters from His Excellency, Frederick Hamilton [Haldimand] to Major De Peyster.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 122, P. 348.

[CHEVALLIER TO LERNOULT.]

[Translation]

Copy of Mr. Chevallier's letter from St. Joseph, received the 5th of June:

ST. JOSEPH, the 29th May, 1779.

SIR—I have few opportunities of receiving letters from you and still fewer for sending you my very humble thanks. The son of Grand Louis furnishes me with an opportunity of doing so today.

I am delighted to assure you of my gratitude to the honourable person to whom Calumny has not made me contrary.

The chief who takes this letter is a deputy of the first village which was gained over [that is to say] I do not speak of the chief, but of the village, by the bad people of their seeming indecision on the part they should take. The miracles that the rebels have performed by letter put in the balance against my advice and solicitations cannot weigh in the face of the rumors spread of the taking of your Fort and those of all Canada, which some hidden enemies have circulated, notwithstanding all my efforts to prove the contrary. In fact the news that 1,500 Americans are ready to come to Illinois, which is discussed in this village puts me outside of the chance to assure them of their duty. You alone, Sir, are able to reanimate their courage, which neither infidelity nor Perfidy, but fear, has dejected the Indians. You can more easily than I inform them with satisfaction that your Post has been reinforced by 300 men of the troops [indirect news] but which will revive them. I beg you, Sir, at once to help me with your advice, and let me know the means of maintaining them in the interests of the Prince. Let me know, I beg of you, the designs by which you hope to overcome the projects of the Rebels. I am much interested in their nation, that for that reason alone I should merit the favor that I ask you. A favor equally useful to my own interests, as to that of the nation in which I am interested.

I will bring this letter to a close, informing you that I have executed the order which His Excellency has sent me to the Post ordering me to Cloathe eleven Poutawamies who were attached to his suite. I have conformed to the orders with the exception of four bottles of Rum which I did not give; however, I have put them where when they are needed they can get them. I will obtain payment from Mr. McComb, but having to send my accounts to Mr. Du Peyster, I enclose the bill for the Lieut. Governor. I tell you of this in order that so loci penman may ask something that you cannot refuse.

I hope you will receive it well satisfied and determined not to change the resolution that you took, and I flatter myself to conduct them according to your orders, by the execution of which I will prove anew my zeal.

I am, Sir, your very humble and very obedient servant,
LOUIS CHEVALLIER.

Capt. Lernoult.

Endorsed 1779: Copy of Mr. Chevallier's letter from St. Joseph, 29th May. Recd the 10th July, inclosed in Captain Lernoult's letter of the 26th June.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 54, p. 85.

No. 18.

QUEBEC, 7th June, 1779.

[HALDIMAND TO LORD GEORGE GERMAINE.]

Lord George Germaine [i. e. Lord George Sackville].

MY LORD—On the 29th of May I did myself the Honor of writing a short letter to your Lordship by Halifax, and with it transmitted you a copy of what I wrote to General Clinton of that date, but from the probability this dispatch has not yet arrived, I enclose another copy as it contains a general sketch of our present situation during the winter. The Rebels have constantly threatened invading this Province, and this Spring seem to be taking serious measures for attempting in every part by which there is a possibility to approach.

I do not wish to alarm Your Lordship with imagining Danger and Difficulties, but it appears to me of the highest importance to His Majesty's Service that our state should be clearly understood. I shall try to convey to Your Lordship a correct state of our situation.

The enclosed copies of Lieut. Governor Hamilton's Letters as well as those from Michilimakinac, Detroit and Niagara will show your Lordship the unfortunate end of the expedition undertaken by that Gentleman in the month of October, upon which subject I have already had the honor of writing to your Lordship in my dispatches of last November. Within the interval of a very few days I learned the account of his arrival at Vincennes, and of himself and party being made prisoners there, small as this check will appear to those in a remote situation, it is natural enough to expect disagreeable consequences may arise from it, for previous to this the Canadian Inhabitants, both above and below, were become adherents to the United cause of France and the Americans, and many of the Savages imagining we are become the weakest side, were grown luke warm and some even had shewn a Disposition to join our Enemy. So situated it will require great judgment and temper to preserve the Indians in our interest after so glaring and recent a proof of our want of strength, or want of conduct.

I do not wish to throw any blame upon Lieut. Governor Hamilton, because he may have had reasons for undertaking his late expedition which I am not acquainted with, but at present it is to me astonishing and unaccountable how an Officer of his Good Character could remain at Vincennes when he knew the impracticability of my supplying him with Provisions, or assistance, and after he must have received notice of the Rebels approaching towards Detroit.

*EXPENSES OF INDIAN DEPARTMENT.

The great desire I have to furnish your Lordship with every possible information, has induced me to enclose Copies of every Paper I have received respecting Governor Hamilton, and also of those which respect the Savages in the Upper Country, and I have, only that however I wish to retrench the enormous expenses of the Indian Department, my zeal for the public service will not allow me to give positive orders concerning it, fearing least it might detach the Indians from our cause, and knowing that whenever they do quit us, the valuable Fur Trade will immediately be lost to Great Britain, and this Province will, notwithstanding, require a greater force than ever to defend it.

* This sentence heading the paragraph is a marginal note in the reference book.

*NECESSITY OF SUPPLYING THE UPPER POSTS IMMEDIATELY.

Herewith, your Lordship will also receive the present exhausted state of our Provinces. I am obliged to forward the supplies destined for the Upper Country with all possible Dispatch. If I permitted the least delay in this Service, the Duration of our Transport thither is so short, that I should be obliged to weaken, if not abandon, some of the Upper Posts during the Winter, and at a time when it is absolutely necessary to reinforce them, and yet, after all my endeavors, I cannot continue this necessary Transport more than a few weeks longer, unless some Provisions arrive; for altho I risk leaving the Lower Country so bare of Provisions as to prevent the possibility of forming sufficient Magazines so to defend our extensive Frontiers to advantage, yet I dare not expose the Troops stationed here to want, or reduce myself to the necessity of taking Provisions from the inhabitants, who are already disaffected, and all the beef that the country could conveniently afford has been purchased and delivered to the Troops during the winter.

“ *AN EXAMPLE—SUPPLY DEMANDED FOR THE ENSUING YEAR.”

Permit me, therefore, to Entreat Your Lordship's particular attention to this essential article in order that our supplies even this summer may be very ample, for after all my care, much Provision is spoiled in the Transport, and I apprehend the Demand from the Upper Posts will be this summer double the last, owing to the great number of Savage Families who have been driven from their Habitations and obliged to take protection at the King's Posts, Particularly at Niagara, and who consequently must be fed.

It shall be my study to counteract the present temper

*Marginal Note in Reference Book.

and Disposition of the Canadians with all the Prudence and mildness, the critical situation of the Province requires.

* "MARTIAL LAW TO BE PROCLAIMED IF NECESSARY."

But should the Rebels attempt to penetrate amongst us in force, the Martial Law shall be proclaimed; small parties have already been in the Province and have remained several days unperceived and hitherto when notice has been given of them, it has always been too late to apprehend them.

Your Lordship will most likely be informed by the present conveyance, of my having refused Licences to several Indian Traders to go to the Upper Country, but the amazing supply of Arms and Ammunition they were taking up, exclude of a quantity which still remains indisposed of, from the importation of last year determined me not to hazard even the possibility of such articles falling into the Hands of our Enemies.

* "PROHIBITION OF EXPORT OF WHEAT AND FLOUR."

Those who have speculated upon the Amazing Price of Wheat and Flour in other parts of America are, I suppose, equally out of humor at the Prohibiting the exportation of these commodities until the 1st of Jan'y next, which has been done by Public Proclamation.

* "CONFINEMENT OF MESPLET AND JAUBARD—REASONS FOR SO DOING."

The turbulent and seditious Behaviour of a Cabal at Montreal, has also laid me under the necessity of confining two Frenchmen there, who names Mesplet and Jaubard, the former a Printer sent here by Congress in 1774, to Publish and Disperse their letters; the latter has been an attorney and is an unprincipled Adventurer. So soon as their papers have been examined Your Lordship shall have a circumstantial account of their affairs, and if this does not in some measure check the Licentious Spirit the [that] was beginning to rise, I shall not hesitate to make more examples. I heartily lament that those Who misbehaved in 1775 and 1776 were not severely punished. It was easy then but now difficult, nevertheless my endeavors shall not be wanting to promote the King's interests, serve the Public and secure the Province. Objects which engross all my attention and which always have been and ever shall be the sole aim of all my actions.

I have the Honor to be with the Greatest respect and Regard, your Lordship's most obedt Humble Servant,

FRED. HALDIMAND.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 66, P. 137.

[HALDIMAND TO DE BUDE (?).]

[Translation].

QUEBEC, the 17th June, 1779.

I profit, my dear General, of the first occasion that presents itself to write to you on account of the subject in the letters that I have written by Halifax, have been received. I hope you have been pleased to hear that I am entirely cured of my cough and that I am marvellously well. Of myself I will say no more.

The death of Capt. Foy, my secretary, gives me an excuse. I see myself overwhelmed with work. It increases each day and the least negligence throws all my affairs into a confusion that it pains me to behold. I have taken Capt. Matthews of the 8th Regt. to succeed Capt. Foy. They say great things of him, and I hope he will fulfill my expectations; but it is necessary to straighten a service so complicated, and if you could see the labyrinth into which I am plunged, you would have pity on me.

Behold a year has almost gone since my arrival in this country without knowing exactly what has passed on your continent. I see myself surrounded with enemies, and little hope from the Province, since France has made alliance with the rebels and are not ashamed to make it public by the Count of Estaing's [d'Estaing] declaration to incite this people to revolt by the most seductive motives for the French. Added to this unhappy expedition of Lt. Gen'l Hamilton on the Illinois side, undertaken without my orders and which, however, might have been useful, had he had the prudence to retire in time. This is between ourselves. The second volume of Burgoyne and that appeared to have a sorrowful result. It appears that there is some fatality following all your enterprises; if we still had the two companies of the 14th Regiment which I left at Illinois when I commanded at N. York, we shall be assured the possession of this country, and overcome all the misfortunes that will follow, &c., &c.

I wrote you, my dear, the 30th of May by Halifax, to inform you that I had written to Lord North to pray him to give me a place that is vacant in this province and which they say is in his nomination. I send you a copy of the letter that I wrote him, lease he should want your advice to hire me the service. The Nephew whom I recommend is older than the one who is my aide de camp and is also a lieutenant, but he had the misfortune to fall from his horse that caused him frequent hemorrhage which will not allow him to take violent exercise. The position that I ask for him is not of consequence, and has hitherto, been filled by a deputy, but it would serve as a little retreat which would allow him to leave the service, for which he is no longer suitable, and he could establish himself in this province where there is need of honest men.

There are two places vacant by the death of Capt. Foy. I have given one of them to Capt. Brehm and the other to Major Holland, two officers which by their knowledge and their activity can be of great use in the service of the King, which is the object that always determines my choice and from which I never depart. However the best of Princes can be surprised, and I pray you it is necessary not to loose time.

Adieu, my dear General; be assured of my respect. Give my compliments and my friendship to those whom you see and believe me, I am all yours for life. F. H.

My domestic troup has a very bad turn; his pride has taken a leap and caused me much expense and sorrow. I count on sending him away as soon as I can be accommodated.

There is a Mr. Montrose in the Regiment of Erlack in France, brother to him whom we know, who asks for one of my nieces in marriage. If you can acquaint me of what is his character and his conduct, you would oblige me infinitely. Perhaps we might be able to coax him to this Country, as I repeat to you, it is very necessary to attract subjects on which the Government can count. Adieu, again; remember me to your family.

F. H.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 97, P. 224.

LOUISVILLE, Sept. 23, 1779.

[CLARK TO JEFFERSON.]

DEAR SIR—I am happy to find that your sentiments respecting a Fortification at or near the mouth of the Ohio is so agreeable to the Ideas of every man of any judgment in this Department. It is the spot that ought to be strong and Fortified, and all the Garrisons in the Western Country Dependant on it, if the ground would admit it, but the misfortune is, there's not an acre of ground near the Point than four miles rise the Ohio, but what is often Ten feet under water. About twelve miles below the Point there is a beautiful situation, as if by nature designed for a Fortification by every observation that has been taken, lays a quarter of a degree within the State of Virginia. Its elevation is such that a small expense would render it very strong and of greater advantage than one four miles up the Ohio. In case you have one built, a few years will prove the propriety of it. It would immediately become the Key of the whole Trade of the Western Country and well situated for the Indian Department in General. Besides many Salutory Effect it would render During the War, by awing our Enemnies, the Chickesaws, and the English Posts on the Mississippi. The strength of the Garrison ought not to be less than Two Hundred men, when built. A Hundred families that might easily be Got to Settle in a Town would be a great advantage in promoting the place. I am sensible that the Spaniards would be fond to settle a Post of Correspondence opposite to it, if the ground would admit. But the country on their side is so subject to inundations, that it is impossible. For the want of such a Post I find it absolutely necessary to station an armed boat at the Point so as to command the navigation of both rivers, to defend our Trading Boats and stop the great concourse of Tories and Deserters that pass down the River to our Enemies. The Illinois, under the present circumstances, is by no means able to supply the Troops that you Expect in this department with provisions, as the crops at Vincennes was so exceedingly bad that upwards of Five Hundred Souls have to depend on their Neighbors for Bread. I should be exceedingly glad that you would commission some Person to furnish the Troops in this Quarter with provisions, as the greater Part must come from the Frontiers for the ensuing year, as I can't depend on the Illinois for supplies more than will be sufficient for two hundred and fifty men. There is an easy conveyance down the Tennessee River and Provisions more plenty on Holston than in the neighborhood of F. P. M. Colonel John Campbell, who promised to deliver this letter to Yqur Excellency I believe would undertake the task at a moderate salary, and a gentleman of undoubted veracity. But pray, sir, order as much Provisions Down as will serve the Troops you intend sending out, at least six months.

I am, Sir, with the greatest respect, your humble servant,

GEO. CLARKE.

[CLARK TO JEFFERSON.]

His Excellency Thos. Jefferson.

N. B.—By my letter of the 24th August you'll be made acquainted that I have been disappointed in my intended Excursion up the Wabash. I have now a Detachment of about Two Hundred and fifty of French Volunteers, Indians and a few Regulars on their march to attack a British Post at St. Joseph's, near Lake Michigan, commanded by a Lieutenant and party, where there is considerable stores deposited for the use of employing savages. The Party is commanded by Captain James Shilby. There is no doubt of his success as their route is such that there is but little Probability of the enemy's being apprised of them Before it is too late. His orders is to demolish the Fortifications and Return with the Stores.

I am with respect,

G. CLARK.

N. B.—Sergeant Chapman reports that when Mr. James Shilby endeavoured to raise his troops for the above Expedition the men complained that they had no shoes and therefore would not go to St. Joseph's.

AR. S. DE PEYSTER, Major.

CANADIAN ARCHIVES, SERIES B, VOL. 122, P. 478.

[Translation]

To all it may concern, Greeting. Know ye! That Jean St. Germain, gentleman of the city of Paris, lately commissioned as Interpreter for the Chequitas, Chichas, &c., nations of the West, which to abridge the route and to tranquilize the restless mind of the Indians who are incessantly tormented by the subjects of the English King to take up arms, which said Mr. St. Germain, having passed by that town of Cascaskias in which by chance he found himself considered by the Pous and Saults [Pottawatomies and Ottawas] to whom he spoke publicly and before us the undersigned, that which was to be [reported] carried to their nation and to their neighbors. Know ye! That the King of France makes it known to all red men that the French and the Spaniards and Americans at present are one, that he invites all to remain quiet in order that they may live with their wife and children and not meddle in any war which may prove fatal to them if they do. To support their misfortunes with patience as we do ourselves, but that it will not be long until they have happiness. It was only six months since he left Europe; where he had the honor of seeing the King, they could assure their brothers and neighbors that six months should not elapse without they having all the help that would be necessary for them, whilst on the part of the French, Spanish and of those Americans, they could add faith to these words, as their brothers the French and Americans of which the principal have taken the oath to serve everywhere they may be needed.

[SIGNED]

J. N. MONTGOMEN, [Montgomery]
S. CATO, RICH'D WINSTON, Commad't Civil.
JEAN ST. GERMAIN.

Given at Cascaskias the 6th day of May, 1780.

Enclosed No. 3. A French proclamation at the Cascaskias, 6th May, 1780.

1

1

1

1

1

1

1

1

1

1

APPENDIX.

*CLARK'S CAPTURE OF KASKASKIA.

Nothing more is needed than Clark's own account to show that he did not take the so-called Fort Gage. If this was otherwise, why should he have "crossed" the Kaskaskia "river" at all, "to the town"? Why did he "divide his little army into two divisions," order "one to surround the town" while "he with the other broke into the fort and secured the governor, Mr. Rocheblave"?†

Later, [January, 1779] when an attack by the British was feared, why does Clark say "the enemy would set the adjacent houses on fire which would fire the fort," it "not being known that I intended to burn them myself as soon as the wind changed"? He did "fire them," but says "the houses being covered with snow had [as he intended] no effect only those it [the fire] was set to."‡

But enough has been quoted to make us look amid the resident holdings of Kaskaskia for the fort which Clark "broke into and secured the Governor, Mr. Rocheblave."

* This matter was prepared by the editor too late to be used in its logical place in the volume. See Clark's Conquest of the Illinois, this volume, pp. 171-289.

† This is not a new or original thought. It was discussed by the writer with the late Edward G. Mason and Professor W. F. Poole a number of years ago while the latter had charge of the free city Library of Chicago. The result of Professor Poole's research was given in his paper on "The West" in Winsor's "America." It also appears in John Moses' "Illinois Historical and Statistical." Meanwhile the writer has unearthed new matter in this connection which appears further.—H. W. B.

‡ Clark in the "Mason letter." See also the "Memoir" for a fuller detail of this burning of houses, a barn, etc., near the fort.—H. W. B.

Again, the so-called Fort Gage was built in the hope of saving the extreme west at a time when the war in America had turned strongly against the claims of France. We find that in April, 1760, Captain Mackarty, Commandant of the Illinois at Fort Chartres, writes M. de Vaudreuil, the Governor General of Canada, that "The Fort which he [Mackarty] had ordered built at the Kaskaskias was up to the parapet, that he had made all the arrangements considered necessary, according to his strength, to receive the enemy."*

The so-called Fort Gage, says another writer, "was burned down in October, 1766. It stood on the summit of a high rock opposite the village, and on the other side of the river, and was built of very thick squared timber, dovetailed at the angles." When this was written, in 1767, "An officer and twenty soldiers were quartered in the village, and govern the inhabitants under the direction of the Commandant at Fort Chartres."†

There is no authentic hint that the so-called Fort Gage was ever rebuilt or occupied. In less than five months after Mackarty wrote that it was "up to the parapets," the country was ceded to Great Britain, so the work could hardly have been completed within that time. Nor is it any

* Mackarty to Vaudreuil, April 12, 1760. In Paris Documents. An invader posted on that height would have easily taken or destroyed Kaskaskia across the river. Early the same year Mackarty also ordered the Fort Massac [Massiac] to be built on the lower Ohio to check the flood of English conquest. These precautions did not avail, and a few months later, September 8, 1760, France yielded the country to Great Britain.—H. W. B.

† "The Present State of the European Settlements on the Mississippi," etc., by Capt. Philip Pittman, London, 1770. Pittman was a civil engineer of the British Army and as such made a survey and map of the Mississippi from its mouth at the "Balise" to Fort Chartres. In his volume he also produces a "plan" of Kaskaskia drawn by the native American, Thomas Hutchins, then an Ensign in the British service, afterwards to become the noted Geographer and Surveyor General of the later United States.—H. W. B.

more certain that it was ever duly named, or even officially referred to except by Mackarty as "the Fort at the Kaskaskias." Taken as we find it, it is the best military earthwork of French remains in all the Mississippi valley. Illinois ought to own and preserve them. They with their adjacent grounds would make a splendid park, easy of access by river or rail.

Besides the "principal buildings" and "church" in Kaskaskia was "the Jesuits house and small Chapel adjoining it; these as well as some other houses in the Village, are built of stone, and, considering this part of the world, make a very good appearance."* While France still owned the country, its order of the Jesuit Fathers was suppressed, and their "House," along with "their farm, cattle, brewery," and other "holdings" were sold for the crown [of France] by the French Commandant [at Fort Chartres] after the country was ceded to the English. Mons. Beauvias was the purchaser, and is the richest English subject in this country."†

This Mons. Beauvias was Vitol ste Geme, a native of Kaskaskia, who, with his six brothers, were sons of Jean Baptiste Ste Geme and called Beauvias after his native place in France. His son Vitol became a Judge of Court at Kaskaskia under John Todd, Jr., Governor for the Commonwealth of Virginia. Vitol Ste Geme Beauvias later in life left Illinois for Ste Genevieve, Missouri, where he lived at ease to a very ripe old age. It was no doubt his family with whom Henry M. Brackenridge lived three years when a lad, and he graphically described the old Frenchman and his household in his "Recollections of Persons and Places in the West."

To proceed, in 1763, General Thomas Gage succeeded General Jeffery Amherst as Commander in Chief of the * Pittman's Volume.—H. W. B.

† Pittman as above.—H. W. B.

British forces in North America. Two years later, on October 10th, Fort Chartres was duly turned over to a British force in command of Captain Thomas Stirling. The latter had with him a proclamation addressed by General Gage to the "inhabitants of the Illinois" as to their rights, liberty and government as subjects of "his Britannic Majesty," etc.

The Mississippi swept more nearly to Fort Chartres until 1772, when the current tumbled down the shore walls of the structure and made it no longer tenable. Hence we find the order of Gen. Gage that "Fort Chartres be abandoned and the troops stationed at Kaskaskias." He also writes "about building batteries and block-houses."*

From now on we hear no more of Fort Chartres in official letters to or from the Illinois. Instead, "Fort Gage" now becomes the headquarters of all such correspondence. The first instance the Editor here finds, is a letter of Captain Hugh Lord, dated Fort Gage, April 20, 1772, in which he asks "for instructions as to the Fort."†

The second reference is from the old archives at Kaskaskia, transcribed and thus preserved in an early western newspaper.‡

It is an old style writ of feri facias, still in use in this country as well as in Great Britain, directed to Andrew Hoy, the Provost or Military Sheriff at Kaskaskia, to execute. It was "Given at Fort Gage the 19th day of December, 1772, [by] Hugh Lord, Commandant of Illinois," and required the Provost "to have you the money before us [the Commandant] at Kaskaskia as soon as the sale of the

* Gage to Gen. Haldimand. N. Y., March 16, 1772. Canadian Archives.—H. W. B. See page 290 of this vol.

† Hugh Lord to General Gage. Fort Gage, April 20, 1772. In the Haldimand Collection Canadian Archives.—H. W. B.

‡ And reproduced by Edmund T. Flagg, Editor of the Knickerbocker Magazine at that time, in his work on "The Far West," etc.

Old Jesuit House, Kaskaskia.

said effects [of the defendant] shall admit," etc. It is a strange instance of the common law of England, without courts of justice in its colony, being enforced by a purely military tribunal.

There is no doubt but that Fort Gage in Kaskaskia was so named in honor of General Thomas Gage. And an official letter written at a time when General Clark held it, leaves no less a doubt that the Fort in question was the "stone house of the Jesuits" with some changes to make it a military structure. The letter referred to says: "The Kaskaskia is in no way fortified. The fort being still a sorry picked enclosure around the Jesuite College, with two plank-houses [block-houses put there by Captain Lord acting on General Gage's "instructions" as already noted] at opposite angles, mount two four-pounders, each on the ground floor, and a few swivels [two-pound grass-hoppers] mounted in Pigeon houses."*

A cut of the old Jesuit house, herewith produced, is from an engraving found by W. R. Brink. of Edwardsville, a noted Illinois author, and produced by him in one of his County histories in that section of the State. It appears with its shingle covering the same as years before when Rocheblave wrote that "the roof of the mansion of the fort was of shingles and very leaky, notwithstanding his efforts to patch it, and [that] unless a new roof be provided very soon, the building, which was constructed twenty-five years ago [in 1753] and cost the Jesuits forty thousand piasters, will be ruined," etc.† It is a precious historical relic of "the Illinois," when a domain of France, Great Britain,

* Arent S. De Peyster in command at Mackinac, to Gen. Haldimand Michillmackinac, June 27, 1779. At this time so much of the more direct route to Detroit was under the sway of General Clark and his friendly savages that it was safer to dispatch news of his doings around to De Peyster. His letter quoted above is among the "Haldimand Collections" in the Canadian Archives.—H. W. B.

† Rocheblave to Sir Guy Carleton. Fort Gage, Feb. 8, 1778. In the Canadian Archives.—H. W. B.

Virginia and the United States, as well as now when a leading State of the Federal Union.

Further east in 1775 the tide of war for Independence was against the British and the next year that power massed its distant troops nearer to where the most danger threatened. Haldimand, while stationed at New York, still had two companies of the 14th Regiment quartered at Kaskaskia under Captain Lord. And now early in the spring of the next year, 1776, Sir Guy Carleton ordered Captain Lord to leave Kaskaskia and take his troops to Detroit. Captain Lord put Rocheblave in command on the recommendation of Sir Guy Carleton, who says Rocheblave "was a Canadian [a titled native of France] formerly in the French service. His abilities and knowledge of that part of the country recommended him to me as a fit person, and I thought such a one necessary since the posts [troops] which have been held on the Mississippi have been withdrawn."* His name and title in full was "Philippe Francois de Rastel, Chevalier de Rocheblave." And on April 11, 1763, he married Marie Dufresne, a native girl of Kaskaskia.†

Thus was the Illinois left without a British soldier to defend it, and the native French residents had no liking at all for them. Placed in charge of Rocheblave, like Vincennes in the hands of Jean Baptiste Racine, alias "ste Marie," all this country was open to attack.

George Rogers Clark, with the foresight of a skilled warrior, took in the state of affairs. His spies had kept him posted, and he put this, that and the other thing he learned, together. When the time was ripe he went to Williamsburg and laid his purpose secretly before the authorities of Virginia. He alone was full of hope. The result of his daring plan needs not here, again, be told.

* Carleton to Sackville. Quebec, August 13, 1777. The Canadian Archives.—H. W. B.

† The Marriage Register of the Parish Records of Kaskaskia which the writer has examined.—H. W. B.

INDEX

Compiled by Jessie Palmer Weber, Librarian Illinois State Historical Library, assisted by Georgia L. Osborne.

The compiler acknowledges indebtedness to Burrows Bros.' edition, the Jesuit Relations, edited by R. G. Thwaites; Shea's translation of Hennepin's Travels, and Charlevoix's "New France;" the writings of O. H. Marshall; English's Conquest of the Country Northwest of the River Ohio; the Canadian Archives; Thwaites' edition of Wither's Border Warfare; Wisconsin Historical Collections and other authorities of a like character.

1. Index to Marquette's Narrative, and explanatory notes thereto 3-40
2. Index to French plans of Conquest, Hennepin's narrative from his "La Louisiane"..... 41-105
3. Index to "The Proces Verbal"..... 106-113
4. Index to the Will of La Salle..... 114
5. Index to the Memoir of La Salle..... 114-125
6. Index to La Salle's Letters Patent..... 126-127
7. Index to Tonty's Memoir..... 128-164
8. Index to the Aubry Manuscript and explanatory notes thereto 165-170
9. Index to Gen. George Rogers Clark's Conquest of the Illinois; to Letters from the Canadian Archives; and index to Appendix—Clark's account of old Fort Gage.....171-464
10. General Index 1-464

INDEX TO FRENCH EXPLORATIONS IN THE MISSISSIPPI VALLEY.

INDEX TO MARQUETTE'S NARRATIVE AND EDITORIAL AND EXPLANATORY NOTES THERETO.

- Accault Michel }
 Accau Michle } one of La Salle's party of explorers.
 Ako, Michael }
 mention 103
 remains in America, marries an Indian girl at the Peoria Mission 105
 Akamsea (Indian village)—Mention..... 36, 39
 Akansa }
 A'kansas } a Siouan tribe.
 Arkansas }
- Indian tribes driven from the Ohio river (Gravler)... 92
 Algonquin (Indian language)—Illinois language similar to;
 mention 25
 Algonquin tribes—
 The principal Algonquin tribes were the Delawares, Miami, Shawnese, Ottawas, Ojibways, Sacs, Foxes, Crees, Pottawattomies and Illinois.
 Alloues,) Allouez, { Father Claude, Jean—
 Jesuit Priest, born (probably) Province, Toulouse, France, 1620.
 died Fort St. Joseph, 1690.
 mention of, in Father Marquette's narrative..... 14, 15
 Alton, Ills.—
 mention in note accompanying Marquette's description of the paintings on the rocks on Mississippi river. 30, 31
 Arkansas (Akamsea, Indian village)—Mention of..... 36, 39
 Atlantic Ocean—Mention 4
 Baptism—Marquette baptizes a dying child of the Peoria tribe of Indians..... 40 Bays—Mentioned by Marquette.
 Fetid bay (Green bay)..... 11, 12, 13, 40
 Salt bay (Fetid bay)..... 13
 Beckwith, H. W.—Editor this volume, signs editorial chapter. 7
 Black Gown—Term used by the Illinois Indians when addressing Marquette and all Jesuit priests..... 23 Blessed Virgin—Mention..... 9, 10, 11, 17, 35
 Buffalo—American buffalo described..... 19, 20
 Cabins—
 of Illinois Indians, mentioned..... 19, 20
 Maskouten Indian village described..... 15, 16
 Cairo, Ills.—
 mentioned in note accompanying description of rapids above; superstition connected with, by the Indians 32
 California—Mention 39

- California, Gulf of—Mention.....4, 38
 California Sea—Mention5, 8, 31, 32
 Calumet Dance—As performed by Illinois Indian tribe....27-29
 Calumet pipe—
 great danger avoided by the presentation of, to Indians by Father Marquette..... 35
 pipes for smoking, used by the Indians as symbols of war, peace, alliance, and in religious ceremonies..... 21, 22, 23, 26, 27, 35, 36, 38
 Canada—Great extent of, mentioned in letter of Talon to Colbert..... 3
 mention 8
 Cane Brakes, or Reeds (arundinaria macrosperma)—Described by Marquette..... 33
 Canoes—Illinois Indians ignorant of use of; statement made by Marquette 4
 Cattle (wild)—mention19, 35, 37, 38
 Châouanons (original spelling of Shawnees)—Algonkin name, meaning people of the south; Indian tribe; mention... 33
 Chicago Portage 7
 Child—Of Peoria Indian tribe baptized by Marquette..... 40
 China Sea, mention..... 8
 Chippewa (Ojebway language)—
 most classical speech of western Algonquin tribes;
 "Meegah" (big), "Seebee" (river), words from;
 probable origin of the name Mississippi..... 4
 Colbert, Jean Baptiste—
 Born Rheims, France, 1619, died Paris, 1683; French minister of the marine.....3, 5, 6 Colbert, Jean Baptiste (2nd) Marquis de Seignelai—son of Great Colbert, born Paris, 1651, died 1690, succeeded his father as French minister of the marine.
 Colbert River 7
 Conception Mission—In the Illinois country established by Marquette 10
 Conception River—Name given by Marquette to the Mississippi 10
 Cross—In Maskouten Indian village described by Marquette.15, 16
 Dablon, Father Claudius F.—
 Jesuit missionary and writer, born Dieppe, 1619, died Quebec, 1697; superior of the Jesuit missions in N. Amer.
 Appoints Father James Marquette to accompany Joliet on his voyage..... 5
 Marquette sends report to 26 prepares for publication, original manuscript of Marquette, 1678..... 6
 foot note..... 8
 Dacotas (Indian tribe)—Mention of; peculiar customs of..26, 27
 Dancing—A religious and social ceremony among Illinois
 Indians, described.....27, 28
 Demon—Supposed by Indians to be near the mouth of the Ohio river, near present Cairo, Ill.; description..... 32

- Des Plaines branch of the Illinois River—Portage at, mentioned in explanatory note..... 7
- Discoveries and Explorations of the Mississippi, Shea's—Translation of Marquette's document and map..... 7
- Divine River, mention of in note..... 7
- Dogs—Used as food by Indians, mention..... 4, 37
- Erie, Lake—Mention..... 5, 7
- Fetid, Bay of the (Green Bay)—Marquette's description of.. 13 meaning of name..... 13
 mention of, in Father Marquette's narrative.. 11, 12, 13, 40
- Fire-arms, mention 37, 39
- Fire Nation (Machkoutens)..... 11, 14
- Fish of Mississippi River—Described by Marquette..... 18
- Florida—Mention of..... 3, 39
- Fol-Avoines } (wild oats)—(Indian tribe)—French name;
Folles-Avoines } mention of 11
- Fort Frontenac (now Kingston, Canada)—Mention..... 5
- Fox River—Description of; name given in note..... 13, 14
- France—Mention 5, 29, 31
- French, Prof. Benjamin F.—
 American historian, born Richmond, Va., 1799, died
 New York, 1877.
 discovery made by, at St. Mary's College, Montreal, of Marquette's narrative and map of his and Joliet's voyages 5, 6
 translation of Joliet's journal in historical collections of Louisiana; mention of..... 6
- French Department of the Marine and Colonies..... 4
- French—Desire for conversion of savages of New France;
 mention 6
- Frontenac—Mention 5
- Frontenac Fort—See Fort Frontenac.
- Frontenac Lake (Lake Ontario)—Mention..... 3, 5, 7
- Frontenac, Louis de Buade, Count de Frontenac—governor and lieutenant-general of New France, born in France 1620, died in Quebec 1698. governor of Canada, Sept. 1672, to Sept. 1682.
 again governor, Oct. 1689 to Nov. 1698, died in office.
 appreciates importance of discoveries in Mississippi valley 8
 by letter advises the prime minister, Colbert, of the return of Joliet, and of his discoveries..... 5 secretary of, mention..... 7 selects Sieur Jolliet for voyage of discovery in Mississippi valley..... 8, 9 sends to prime minister, Colbert, map of Joliet; tells of shipwreck and loss of Joliet's journal..... 6
- Furs—Trade in furs with Indians of Mississippi valley, discussed by Talon in letter to Colbert..... 3, 4
- Gold Mines—Probable location of; mention..... 8
- Gourds—Used as receptacles for grain by Indians..... 38
- Grand River (Mississippi)—Mention in editorial 5
- Great Manitou—Name given by Indians to Deity; mention of 16

Great River (Mississippi)—Mention.....	4, 12
Great Spirit—Mention	23
Green Bay (Bay of Fetid)—Mention.....	11, 12, 13, 40
Gulf of California—Mention	4
Gulf of Mexico—Mention.....	5, 7, 31, 38, 39
Historical collection of Louisiana, part 2, published Philadelphia, 1850, by B F. French.....	6, 7
Joliet's official report of his voyage published in.....	6
translation of Joliet's journal in.....	6, 7
Holy Ghost, mission of— at La Pointe, Lake Superior; mention.....	4
see La Pointe.
Huron; Lake—Mention	11
Huron Language—Used by Marquette	34
Huron Squaws—Mention.....	34
H. W. B.—Initials of H. W. Beckwith, editor of this volume; signs notes	14
Illinois—
Illinois Country—Fertility and beauty of land described by Marquette	4, 24, 40
Illinois Indian Tribes—Cabins of, mention.....	23
calumet, its use and importance, described.....	26
characteristics of, their manners and customs.....	27, 23
give slave to Marquette.....	23
Illinois, meaning of, in the language of the Illinois Indians	25
Marquette's description	25, 29
Marquette particularly desires conversion of.....	10
marriage customs of.....	25
mention	4, 18, 19, 21, 29
mission of the Conception established among the Illi- nois Indians by Marquette.....	10
sachem makes speech to Marquette.....	23
sickness among, how treated.....	26
trade at the Point; mention.....	4
town of the Great Sachem visited by Joliet and Mar- quette; description of.....	21, 22, 23
women of, dress, etc.....	26
Illinois Lake (Lake Michigan)—Mention.....	7, 39, 40
Illinois River—Ease of navigation described.....	40
Illinois River—Mention.....	3, 7, 39
Illinois village— visit to, of Joliet and Marquette.....	18, 20, 22
visited by Marquette.....	40
Indian Corn—Number of crops sown a year by southern In- dians; method of preparation as food by Indians....	37, 38
Indian Tribe—Of the Mississippi river, name not given, de- scribed by Marquette.....	34
Indian Tribes—Mentioned by Father Marquette— Chauanons	23
Dacotas	26, 27
Huron	34

- Illinois10, 14, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29
 Iroquois 33
 Kikabous 15
 Machkoutens (The Fire Nation) 15
 Me-nom-o-nees (or the "Fol-Avoines") 11
 Mitchigameas 35, 36
 Miamis 15
 "Mush-Kooda-uh-ke" (The Fire Nation) 14, 15
 Nadouessi (Sioux or Dakotas) 26, 27
 Peouarea 25
 Sioux 26
 Uh-Ke 14
 Wild Oats (Me-nom-o-nees or the "Fol-Avoines") 11, 12
 Indian Turnip (Triphylum)—Used to prevent Snake Bites, description of, by Father Marquette 14
 name given in foot note 14
 Indian Village—Of the Illinois near Mississippi River... 20, 21, 22
 Indian Villages—Mentioned by Father Marquette—Akamsea (Arkansas) 36, 39
 Chaouanous 33
 Illinois Village 20, 21, 22
 Kaskaskia (Below Ottawa, Ill.) 40
 Maskoutens 15, 16
 Mitchigamea 35
 Peouria 25
 Indians—Of the Southern part of the Mississippi River, manners, customs, etc.; climate of the country, &c.. 36, 39 Infidelity—Among women of the Illinois Indians—how punished 25
 Iron Mine—Mention of 33
 Iroquois (Indian tribes)— enemies of the French 4 their barbarity toward the Chaouanons described 33 Joliet, Louis—
 Joliet—
 Jolliet—
 French Canadian explorer, born Quebec 1645, died in Canada, 1700.
 companion of Marquette. chosen to lead explorations 5 expert topographer 5
 Indian trader 5
 journal of 3-40
 journal and map abridged translation of, published by Jared Sparks in 1844, in "Life of Marquette,"
 mention 4, 5, 6
 personal characteristics of 9
 Joliet and Marquette's Travels—Journal of their voyage... 3-40 Jesuit Relations—Quotation from Marquette's description of the great river 4 quotation from, in reference to the meaning of the word Miss-i-sipi 4

- Kaskaskia—Illinois Indian town, located near present town of Ottawa, Ill..... 40
- Kikabous (Indian tribe)—Description of personal appearance of 15
- Kingston, Canada—Site of old Fort Frontenac, mention..... 5
- La Chine rapids (near Montreal)—
Joliet loses his journal in shipwreck at..... 6
Site of La Salle's first trading post..... 6
- Lakes—Mentioned by Marquette.....
Huron lake..... 11
Illinois lake (Lake Michigan)..... 39, 40 lake of the Ottawas (Superior)..... 8
- La Point—
La Pointe—
La Point du St. Esprit; Mission of the Holy Ghost, (Holy Spirit). one of the first two chief Indian missions of the French Jesuit priests, called La Pointe du St. Esprit, situated near western extremity of Lake Superior, near site of modern city of Ashland, instituted 1665 by Allouez; mention..... 4, 8, 10
- LaSalle's—
Discoveries, mention 5
Louis, Sault St. (see Sault St. Louis)—Mention..... 9
- Louisiana Historical Collections, part 2, published Philadelphia, 1850, by B. F. French; mention..... 6, 7
- Machkoutens (fire nation)—
"Mush-Kooda—Uh-ke" or Prairie Land Tribes—Mention..... 14 fire nation (Algonquin interpretation of)..... 15 tribes gathered at village of..... 15
- Manitou—Indian name for Deity..... 16
mention 16, 28
- Maps—
Joliet's maps, mention..... 6, 7
map, published by French and Shea..... 6, 7 map, published by Thevenot, mention 6, 7
- Marquette, Father James (Jacques)—
Jesuit priest, born Laon, France, 1637, died 1675 on eastern shore of Lake Michigan, on St. Joseph river, near present Ludington; remains removed to St. Ignace, 1676, and finally buried there.
French explorer and missionary in Mississippi valley and north-west. appointed by Father Claude F. Dablon to accompany Joliet on voyage to explore Mississippi valley.... 5 departs with Joliet from the mission of St. Ignatius on voyage of discovery..... 8, 9 describes calumet dance of Illinois tribe of Indians. 27, 29 describes the paintings on the rocks near Alton, probably the Piasa bird..... 30, 31 happiness at being permitted to make the voyage..... 10 particularly desires conversion of Illinois Indians.... 10 journal of travels in Mississippi valley..... 3-40

- life of, by Jared Sparks, published 1844, mention.... 6 makes report as Jesuit missionary; quotation from his relation..... 4 manuscript translated by Shea, foot note 8 original manuscript edited and prepared for publication by Father Dablon, 1678, mention..... 6 saintly character of, mentioned in editorial..... 5 Maskoutens (Indian tribe)—Description of.....14, 15, 16 village composed of three nations; mention..... 15
Mascoutens River (the Wisconsin)—Mention..... 16
Mechah—Ojebway word, meaning "big" name, Mississippi probably derived from this word and the word
 "seebee," which means "river"..... 4
Medicine Man—Among Illinois Indians; mention..... 25
Me-nom-o-nees—Wild Oats (Indian tribe)—mention of..... 11
Miskousing River—Mention11, 18
Mexico—Mention 3
Mexico, Gulf of—Mention.....5, 7, 31, 38, 39
Miamis (Indian tribe)—
 Twigtrees, Algonquian tribe—description of, personal appearance of..... 15 two given to Marquette as guides, accompany him..16, 17
Michigan Lake—lake of the Illinois, mention in explanatory note.....7, 40 early names for Lake Michigan: Lake of the Algon-quins, Lake of the Illinois, Lake St. Joseph, Lake Dauphin, Lac des Illinois, Lac Missihiganin, Magnus Lucus Algonquiorum.....
Michilimakinac—Marquette starts from, on expedition of exploration of the Mississippi valley..... 10
Mission of St. Ignatius—starting point of Father Marquette on expedition to Mississippi valley..... 10
Mission of the Holy Ghost—
 La Pointe du Esprit, near present site of Ashland, Wisconsin 4
 see La Pointe.
"Miss-i-sipi" River—
Mississippi River—Description of by Marquette.....
 4, 18, 19, 30, 31, 32, 33, 39, 40 fact of this river known to the French from early date; editorial mention..... 3
 first entered by Marquette..... 17
 Indian tribes on banks of.....30, 39
 Missipi river, Indian name for the Mississippi, mentioned in editorial.....4, 9
 references to in Jesuit relations; meaning and derivation in various Indian dialects..... 4
Mississippi River—Mention.....16-18, 34-39
Mississippi Valley—Mention in foot note..... 8
Missouri River—Mention in explanatory note..... 5
Mitchigamea (Indian tribe)

- Mitchigamea (Village of same name)— Indians of, attack Marquette's party.....35, 36 language of, not known by Marquette..... 36
 mention 37
- Monsters—Painted on rocks of Mississippi river, described by Marquette30, 31
- Montreal, Canada—Mention.....6, 9
- "Mush-Kooda Uh-ke" (Indian tribes)— prairie land tribe; mention by Marquette..... 14
- Music (see singing).
- Musquitoes—Indian methods of defense against, described..33, 34
- Nadouessi (Sioux or Dacotas, Indian tribes)—Account of a peculiar religious custom among.....26, 27
- New England—Mention in editorial..... 3
- New France—Early name of Canada; French desire the conversion of the savages of..... 5
- New Mexico—Design of Marquette to explore the country leading to 8
- New Netherlands—Mention 3, 9
- New Sweden—Mention 3
- Niagara Falls—Mention of, in editorial..... 5 carrying place, or portage, at..... 5
- Nuts—Found near Mississippi River, described by Marquette 30
- Oabaskigo River—Mention 33
- Oats, Wild (wild rice)—Zizania aquatica.....11, 12 principal article of food of Indian tribe of same name.11, 12
- Ojebway (or Chippewa language)—
 most classical speech of western Algonquin tribes;... 4
- Old Men—Deputed by Illinois Indian tribe to confer with Marquette; mention.....21, 35
- Ontario, Lake—Mention of, in editorial..... 3, 5
- Ottawa Country—Mention of..... 9
- Ottawa, Ill.—Present site of; mention in explanatory note... 40
- Ottawas, Lake of the—Mention..... 8
- Ouaboukigou) Wabash river, as the Ohio was early called; Waboukigon (mention32
- Painting—On rocks of Mississippi river, described by Marquette 30, 31
- Parkman, Francis—
 American historian, born Boston, 1823, died, Boston.
 1893, describes Joliet' map..... 7
- Parrot—Killed by Marquette's party, described..... 35
- Pekitanoui—Muddy river, Indian name for Missouri river....
29, 30, 31
- Peoria (Indian village)—Marquette visits Indians there; Indian child baptized by Marquette..... 40
- Peourea (Indian tribes; Indian village)—Mention of, in Marquette's narrative..... 25
- Philadelphia—Mention 6
- Piasa Bird—Paintings described; probably the Piasa bird..30, 31
- Pipe (see calumet).

- Pisikious (wild cattle)—Algoquin name for buffalo, or wild cattle; description.....19, 20
- Point, The (see La Point)—
 mention 4
- Point St. Ignace, mention..... 10 place from which Marquette embarked on expedition to the Mississippi valley 10
- Polygamy—Practiced by the Illinois tribes of Indians..... 35
- Portage—
 at Niagara Falls, mention..... 5
 (the) Chicago, editorial mention..... 7 of the river Divine, mention..... 7
- Portage City, Wis.—Mention of present location of, in explanatory note 16
- Portages—Beyond lake Ontario, mention..... 3
- Presents—Given by Marquette to Illinois Indians..... 22
- Productions of Mississippi Valley—Described by Joliet, in address to Frontenac, mention..... 7
- Puants-Winnebagoes—
- Quail—Mention 35
- Quebec—Mention of 3, 5, 7, 17....
- Quivira, kingdom of—Thegualro and Quivira, probably the present New Mexico and Texas..... 8 mention of reputed gold mines of..... 8
- Red Sea (California Sea)—Mention of by Marquette in narrative 31, 32
- "Relations," (The)—See Jesuit relations.
- Rivers, mentioned by Father Marquette—
 Great river (Mississippi)..... 12
 Illinois river..... 40
 Mascoutens (Wisconsin)..... 16
 Meskousing river..... 17, 18
 Miskousing river..... 18
 Mississippi (Great River)..... 9, 12, 16, 17, 18, 30, 31
 Oabskigo river..... 33
 Ouaboukigon (Wabash or Ohio) river..... 32
 Pekitanoui (Missouri) river..... 29, 30, 31
- Sachem of the Illinois Tribes—Marquette visits..... 22, 23, 24
- Sagamiy—A preparation of cooked Indian corn; description of method of preparing..... 24, 37
- St. Esprit, La Pointe du St. Esprit—See La Point; mention. 8, 10
- St. Ignace—
 mission (Jesuit); station on main and opposite Missilamakinac, founded by Marquette 1670; mention.. 10
- St. Ignatius (the Point)— starting point of Father Marquette on his expedition to explore the Mississippi valley; mention..... 10
- Saint Lawrence river—mention of, in editorial..... 3-5
- St. Marie du Sault—
 one of the two first principal Jesuit missions on the upper lakes, founded by Raimbault and Jogues in 1640; mention..... 6

Ste. Marie, Sault (see Sault Ste. Marie)—
mention	6
St. Mary's College, Montreal—
Marquette's narrative and map of his and Joliet's voyage, discovered in, by Prof. Benjamin F. French	6
Salt Bay (Fetid bay; Green bay)— name given by the Indians to bay of Fetid.....	13
Sault Ste. Marie—
Joliet leaves copies of his journal with the fathers
there	6
one of the two first principal Jesuit missions on the upper lakes.....	6
Saut St. Louis—
Sault St. Louis—
(near Montreal)	9
Joliet loses men and papers by upsetting of canoe in waters of.....	9
Seas—
Red or California sea.....	31, 32
South sea.....	31
Seebee—
Ojebway or Chippewa word meaning river.....	4
see Mechah-seebee.
Shea, John Gilmary D.—
American historical writer, born New York 1824, died Elizabeth, N. J., 1892.
translates and publishes Father Marquette's document and map; "Discoveries and Explorations of the Mississippi," etc.....	7
translation of "The Voyages and Discoveries of Father
Marquette in the Valley of the Mississippi.....	8-49 Sickness—
among Illinois Indians, how treated.....	26
Singing—Illinois Indians sing as part of ceremonies of the calumet dance	28
Sioux (Indian tribes)—
mention of, by Father Marquette.....	26
peculiar customs of.....	26, 27
Slave—
given to Marquette by Illinois Indians.....	23
Smoking—practiced by Indian tribes; mention.....	21, 22
Snake bites—
antidote for, flower (Indian turnip).....	14
described by Marquette.....	14 serpent a sonnettes, French name for flower described by Marquette as a remedy for snake bites..	14
Southern Indians—
mention	3, 34
of the Mississippi river, their manners and customs, climate, crops, etc.....	34, 35, 36, 39
Spaniards—
mention of, in Father Marquette's narrative.....	39

- Sparks, Jared—American historian, born Willington, Conn. 1789, died Cambridge, Mass., 1866. President Harvard College.
author of an abridged translation of Jollet's journal and map, published 1844, in "Life of Father Marquette," mention of..... 6
- "Spoon bill"—
a large fish described by Father Marquette..... 18 (mentioned in note as probably the spoon-bill.)
- Sun—
honors paid to it by Illinois Indians..... 22
- Superior lake—
(Lake of the Ottawas) mention in editorial..... 4
- Talon, Jean Baptiste—first intendant of justice, police and finance of New France, afterwards Count d' Orsainville, born Picardy, France, 1625, died subsequent to 1680, in Canada.
(Wallace, "Illinois and Louisiana," gives date of death, Versailles, 1691).
Intendant, Sept. 1665, to Sept. 1668, again Aug. 1669, to Aug. 1675. forestalls the missionaries, and orders explorations to be made in the Mississippi valley..... 4 letter to Colbert 3
mention, foot note..... 4
mention 3, 4, 5, 8, 9
selects Jollet to make explorations..... 9
- Theguaio—
Kingdom of Theguaio and Quivira, probably the present New Mexico and Texas..... 8 mention of reputed gold mines, in..... 8
- Thevenot, Melchiseds—
copies of Jollet's Journal and maps, secured, printed and published in Paris by, 1681..... 6
- Tides—noticed in Bay of the Fetid, causes discussed by Marquette 13
- Tobacco pipe or Calumet—ceremonies attending the smoking of; its significance.. 25, 26, 27, 28, 29
- Trees of the Miss. Valley..... 17
- Triphylum—
Indian turnip, antidote for snake bite, described by Marquette, as a remedy for snake bites..... 14
Serpent-a-Sonnettes—French name for flower described by Marquette as a remedy for snake bites..... 14 name supplied in foot note..... 14
- "Uh-Ke" (Indian Tribes)—(Mush-kooda—Uh-ke). prairie land tribes, mention of by Marquette..... 14
- Utensils (domestic)— used by Illinois Indians, mention..... 26, 27
- Valley of the Mississippi, mention in foot note..... 8

Vermilion Sea—
Gulf of California, mention in editorial.....	5
Virgin, see Blessed Virgin.
Virginia	4
“Voyages and Discoveries of Father James Marquette in the Valley of the Mississippi”— title of MS. prepared for publication by Father C'laudius Dablon in 1678. Translated from the French by John G. Shea; mention, foot note.....	8
Wabash River (Ouaboukigon River)—
mention of, in Father Marquette's narrative.....	32
Watermelons—
mention	38
Wild Cattle (Pisikious)—
description of, by Father Marquette.....	19, 35, 38
Wild Oats (Zizania Aquatica)—
description of.....	11, 12
Wild Oats (Me-nom-o-nees, or the Fol-Avoines)—
Indian tribes, mention of, in Marquette's narrative.....	11, 12
Wild Oats—
manner of gathering, and preparation of, for food, by the Indians, Father Marquette's description of..	11, 12
Wisconsin River (Mascoutens)—
mention	16
Women of Illinois Indians—
dress of, customs, relating to, etc., mention.....	25, 26

INDEX TO HENNEPIN'S NARRATIVE, AND EDITORIAL AND EXPLANATORY NOTES THERETO.....41-105

Ako, Michael (Accault)—One of La Salle's party of explorers, mention	103 remains in America, marries an Indian girl at the Peoria mission, mention note.....	105
Algonquin { Indians. The principal tribes of the Algonquins
Algonkin { were the Delawares, Miamis, Shawnese, Ottawas, Ojibways, Sacs, Foxes, Crees, Pottawatamies and Illinois, mention.....	20
assure La Salle that River Colbert is navigable.....	92
party of, visit Illinois Indian village to trade with the French	92
Akansa— { Indian tribes; Algonquin name for the Quappas, Arkansas— { a Dakota tribes driven from the Ohio river Arkansas— { (Gravier).
America—Hennepin never returns to America; fact mentioned in explanatory note to Hennepin's narrative....	89, 92, 105

- Angelus—religious observance of, by Hennepin and party..... 100
- Animals—
of plains of Louisiana..... 75
- Aquipaguetin (Sioux)—
chief of the Nadouession Indian tribe, angered by Hennepin's party 104
- Artizans—
employed by La Salle, mention..... 44, 55
- Atlantic Coast—
British Colonies on, mention..... 41
- Aguel, Anthony (Auguelle)— member of La Salle's party and ennobled for his services in; called "The Picard," as a nickname..... 103 and ennobled for his services in..... 103 mention of, in explanatory note to Hennepin's narrative 105
- Autray, John Francois Bourdon—
Sieur d'Autray, companion of La Salle, born Quebec, 1647; mention..... 68
- Axes—used as articles of trade, or as presents in dealing with Indians; mention..... 53, 80, 82, 92, 101
- Bare Feet—
name given by Indians to priests of St. Francis, a'so called Greygowns; mention..... 92 Hochitagon, Seneca Indian name for bare-feet, Hennepin so called by Senecas.
- Bay of the Puans
Puants
mention of, in Hennepin's narrative..... 98, 99
- Bays—
mentioned by Hennepin, Puants, Bay of..... 98, 99 Sakinam, Bay of..... 49
- Beads—
used as articles of trade, or as presents in dealing with Indians 59
- Bear Feast—
mention of, as given by Illinois Indians..... 91
- Bear Meat—
La Salle's party subsist on, while waiting the arrival of his boat 67
- Beckwith, H. W.—Editor of this vol..... 46
- Belgium—
Franciscan priests, known as Recollects, active in..... 45
- Black River—mention 98
- Blacksmith—
services of, highly prized by Indians at Creve Coeur; mention 80, 88
- Boat (Bark)—
building of, at Fort Creve Coeur..... 89
- Bourbon, de, Royal Family of France. See Conde; Conti; and Louis XIV.

- Breviary—
 Michael Ako, warns Hennepin to discontinue reading of before his Indian captors..... 103
 mention 104
- British Colonies—
 French plans of conquest involve the hemming in of the British Colonies of the Atlantic coast..... 41
- Broedelet, William—
 publisher of the Utrecht edition of Hennepin's travels,
 1697; mention 45
- Buade Lake (Mille Lake, or Lake of the Issati)—
 mention of, in Hennepin's narrative..... 99 situation of, mention..... 100
- Buccaneers (French—
 mention by Hennepin..... 76
- Buffalo (American)—
 description of; Indian manner of hunting; uses of.. 72-75
- Buffalo River—
 named by the Indians on account of the number of buffaloes found there 98
- Cabin—
 Cabin—built at the mouth of the Miamis by La Salle's party. 67
 Recollect missionaries' cabin at Fort Creve Coeur used as a place in which to say mass..... 88
- Cabins—
 Indian manner of using and division of, by Illinois tribes 77
- Calumet Dance—
 the Miamis Indians dance the Calumet to the Isinois and make an alliance with them against the Iroquois 92
- Calumet of Peace—
 danced by Indian nations with La Salle's party..... 92 Nadouessins refused the Calumet of Peace..... 102 presented to La Salle by Poutawatamies of the Island. 57
- Calumet (Pipe)—
 description of, in Hennepin's narrative..... 57, 58 displayed as a token of peace, mention in Hennepin's narrative 101, 102
 Isinois Indians present to La Salle's party..... 79
 mention..... 57, 58, 59, 94, 104
- Canada—
 mention of..... 42, 43, 45, 55, 75, 89
- Canadians—
 party of, accompany La Salle..... 45
- Canoemen—
 accompanying Hennepin, account of capture of by Indian tribes..... 100-105
- Carpenter (The)—
 companion of Hennepin in small boat; mention... 55, 57
- Carpenters (Ship)—mention 62
- Carpenters—
 engaged by La Salle for his expedition..... 44

- Casquin—
 Indian tribe; mention..... 81
- Casse-tetes (Skull-breakers)— clubs used by Poutouatamis Indians as weapons in war; mention 58
- Cataract—
 the Falls of St. Anthony of Padua, name given by Hennepin in honor of his patron saint..... 99
- Caudebec—
 comparison of the fury of the waters of the three great lakes, Conty, Orleans and St. Clare to the bore before Caudebec 48
- Cavaller. See La Salle.
- Chabaodeba (Indian Tribe)—mention 98
 Sioux name for Black River.
- Chabaoudeba (Indian Tribe)—..... 98
- Chassagoac {
 Chassagouasse { most important chief of Illinois tribes.... 83
- Changaskethon (Indian Tribes; Dog or Wolf Tribe)— mention of, in Hennepin's narrative..... 100
- Church—to be erected by La Salle at Fort Frontenac, mention.. 43
- Cibola—
 Spanish name for American buffalo, foot note..... 44
- Cibola Skins (Buffalo)—
 La Salle and his associates given the exclusive trade in. 44
- Ciccaca (Indian Tribes)— inform La Salle's party that the River Colbert is navigable 92
 mention of, by Hennepin in narrative..... 81 party of, visit Illinois Indian village to trade with French 92
- Coal—
 Illinois Indian warrior traces with coal a map of the river Colbert for La Salle..... 91
- Colbert, John Baptiste (The Great Colbert)—
 French Minister of the Marine and Colonies. Born, Rheims, France, 1619, died Paris, 1683.
 Confers with La Salle in regard to explorations.... 43, 44
 Talon writes letter to, explaining his plans for extending French Colonial possessions..... 41, 42
- Colbert River (Meschisipi)— beauties of the great river told by Indians..... 90 described to La Salle by Illinois Indians..... 81, 82
 description of 97
 distance from Fort Creve Coeur; mention..... 87 Indian tribes inform La Salle that the river is navigable to the sea..... 92
 Indian warrior (Illinois tribe) describes Indian nations living along the river Colbert..... 91 Indian warrior (Illinois tribe) traces with coal a map of the river Colbert 91
 mention.. 81, 82, 86, 87, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 101

- Conde, Louis de Bourbon—The "Great Conde" born in castle of Vincennes, 1621, died Chantilly, 1686; earlier known as the Duke d' Enghien.
- Conde, Lake (Superior)—Mention of.....50, 51, 52, 98, 100
- Conti } Louis Armand de Bourbon, Prince De Conty, nephew Conty { of the Great Conde, born 1661, died 1685; patron of La Salle.
- Conti, Prince de (Conty)—Introduces Henri de Tonty to La Sa'le 44
- Conty, Fort..... 54
- Conty Lake (Erie)—Mention 46
- Corn (Indian)—Principal article of food of Indian tribes of Mississippi Valley; La Salle takes twenty bushels from Indian cache 77 makes payment for it..... 80
- Crevecoeur—Fort built by La Salle in the Illinois Country; means in French, broken heart; but the fort was probably named for fort Crevecoeur in the Netherlands near Bois le Duc; captured by Louis XIV of France in 1672.
building of.....87, 88, 89 La Sa'le and Hennepin select the site of..... 87
mention92, 93
Tonti left as commandant at..... 93
- Daminoia (Indian tribe)—Mention..... 81
- Dauphin Lake (Lake Michigan)—Lots of the Griffin, LaSalle's boat, in..... 55
mention of.....53, 56, 60, 66, 89
- Dautray John Francois Bourdon (d'Autray)—Sieur d'Autray born Quebec, 1647; companion of LaSalle's voyages.
mention 68
- "Description de la Louisiane"—Title of Hennepin's narrative. 45
- Deserters—From La Sa'le's party arrested by him..... 53 list of names of, foot note..... 53
mention77, 78, 86
- Detroit (Strait)—Description of.....47, 48 distance from Niagara river, mention..... 47
- Dogs—Used for food by Indians with Hennepin; mention.... 96
- Du Gay, or Antoine Auguel—Mention of..... 105
- Du'ud } Daniel Greysolon Duluth—Noted French officer, Du Lhut { born St. Germain en Laye, France; died 1710. Cousin of Tonti. rescues Hennepin and companions from Indians; explanatory note, mention..... 105
- Du'uth—See Dulud105
- Dutch of New York—Mention 47
- Editor (The) Beckwith, H. W.53
- Erie Lake 46
- European Nations—French the favorite of by North American Indians..... 42
mention.....72, 75, 76, 81, 90

- Falls of St. Anthony (of Padua)—Described; named for the patron saint of Hennepin..... 99
 mention of 97
- Fevre, Rev. Father Hayacinth, Le—Hennepin mentions having served as King's Chaplain under..... 63
- Fillibusters (French)—Mention 76
- Firearms—Mention 41, 47, 62, 65, 105
- Fish (white)—Indian manner of fishing for..... 51
- Flatboats—Mention 97
- Florida—De Soto's travels in, mention..... 81
- Forge—for blacksmith at Fort Creve Coeur 88
- Fort Conty—Place appointed by La Salle to receive supply of goods, etc..... 54
- Fort Creve Coeur. See Creve Coeur—Built by La Salle..... 87-89
 mention of 92
- Fort Frontenac—Situated where the city of Kingston, Canada, now stands.
 built as a check to Iroquois Indians..... 42 consideration given by La Salle for the grant of..... 42, 43
 description of..... 42, 43
 inducements offered to Indians to locate at..... 43
 La Salle petitions for the grant of..... 43
 La Salle replaces the wooden structure with a fort of stone 43
 mention of 42, 44, 45, 54, 89
 Recollect friars to be entertained at..... 43
 seigniory of granted to La Salle..... 42
- Fort of Miamis—Arrival of Tonty at; no news of Griffin; fears of its loss..... 68
- Fort erected by La Salle at mouth of Miamis river..... 67, 68 La Salle decides to set out from..... 68
 mention 71
- France—Climate of compared to that of America; mention.. 89 Franciscan priests active in; known as Recollects..... 45
 mention 55, 75, 89, 91, 105
- Franciscan Friars—Religious order of the Roman Catholic church, known in France, Belgium and Holland as Recollects, zealous in missionary work among N. Amer. Indians 45
- French Plans of Colonization—La Salle's letters patent, etc.. 41-46
- French Trade with Savages in America—Magnitude and importance of 41
- Frontenac, Count de—Governor of Canada, mention..... 43
- Frontenac, Fort—See Fort Frontenac.
- Frontenac Lake—Hennepin proceeds to the Fort by way of the lake 45
- Frontenac Lake (Lake Ontario)—Mention..... 42, 46
- Fruits of Mississippi Valley—Mention of..... 60
- Furs—Purchased from Indian tribes by French traders; great profit in; mention..... 41, 54, 64
- Gabriel (de la Ribourde) Jesuit—Familiarly called Father Gabriel. See Ribourde.
 cheerful disposition of..... 57

- Begs the Sieur de La Salle to stay with party..... 70 cabin at Fort Creve Coeur used as chapel in which to say mass 88
 desires to remain with the Illinois Indians at Fort Crevecoeur 92, 93
 encourages La Salle's party to continue explorations.. 78 exhorts men to patience..... 68 killed by Indians..... 135 marks trees with crosses to serve as guides to La Salle 71 weakness of, from hunger; administered to by Hennepin 59, 60
 Game—Abundance of, along the river Colbert..... 60, 101
 Gay, Picard du (Auguelle)—See You.
 Gourds—Used by La Salle's party as vessels for carrying and preserving wine 60
 Grafton, Ill.—Mention of rocks on banks of the Mississippi river near site of present Grafton, Ill., in note..... 96
 Grapes (Wild)—Used as food by La Salle's party..... 60, 61
 Great Bay (near Lake Orleans)—Place where the Recollects had instructed the Hurons..... 48
 Green Bay—Mention..... 53, 105
 Grey Gowns (Recollects)—Mention of..... 64, 65, 92
 Grey Gowns (or Grey Friars)—Name given the Franciscan Friars, a religious order of the Roman Catholic church 45
 Griffin (Griffon) (La Salle's vessel) Named in honor of Count Frontenac, on whose escutcheon "two winged griffins were emblazoned as supporters." First vessel built on the "Upper Lakes."
 mention 51
 no tiding of, mention..... 89 theory as to the loss of..... 55 value of cargo 55
 Guay, Picard du—See You.
 Guide—Indian in La Salle's party; mention..... 70
 Gulf of Mexico—Mention 44
 Guns—Manza, Quackange, Indian name for European guns;
 mention 105
 used by French as articles of exchange in trade with Indians 41
 Hennepin, Father Louis—Franciscan (Recollect) priest, born Belgium about 1640, died Utrecht about 1720, French explorer; companion and historian of La Salle's travels in Mississippi valley.
 accompanies La Salle to select site of Fort Creve Coeur 87 account of capture of by Indians..... 100-105 begs the Sieur de La Salle not to leave party any more 70
 cabin of, at Fort Creve Coeur, used as a chapel in which to say mass 88
 chosen to accompany La Salle's expedition..... 45 editions of volumes of his voyages, where issued, translated and published; mention..... 5, 46

- exhorts men to patience while awaiting the arrival of
 La Salle 68
 Follows the route taken by Joliet and Marquette; explanatory note; mention 105 historian of La Salle's expedition 45 not familiar with language of the Indian tribes by whom captured 101, 102
 leaves Fort Creve Coeur for further discoveries 89 map of, showing location of Fort Creve Coeur; mention in explanatory note 87
 meets La Salle 45 mention of his second volume of "Discoveries" 91 narrative from his "La Louisiane" of 1683; mention 46, 105 Offers to take the Mission of the Illinois 93
 personal characteristics of 46
 reliability of his historical statements 46 returns to France and publishes his "La Louisiane" in 1683; mention in explanatory note to Hennepin's
 narrative 105
 Sioux captors take him down the Mississippi; explanatory note; mention 105
 Holland—Mention 43, 45
 Hunter—Indian hunter with La Salle; mention 56, 60, 66, 70
 Hurons or Wyandots; Tobacco or Petuns, allied with Hurons.
 Hurons (Indian tribes)—Make alliance with the Outtaouactz, against the Iroquois; mention 52
 mention 48, 51
 Hurons (Indian village)—Description of 51 salute La Salle's ship 51 Hyacinth—Confection of, used by Hennepin to restore aged priest when ill 59, 60
 Illinois Country (Illinois, Isinois)—La Salle in the Illinois country; description of the country and Indians 76-96 La Salle's men discouraged as to reaching the Ills. 52, 53
 mention 42, 97
 severity of climate of 89
 Illinois Indian Mission—In charge of Father Zenobe Membre 93
 Illinois (Present)—La Salle's influence in development of 42
 Isinois Indian Tribes—One of the principal Algonquin tribes. Caution given against, by Outouagamis Indian tribes to La Salle's party 65 false impressions given by the Isinois Indians to the French, disabused by Indians who tell La Salle of the beauties of the River Colbert 90 La Salle expects to gain confidence of, by kind treatment 66
 make alliance with the Miamis against the Iroquois. 92
 mention 65, 66, 77, 78, 80, 81, 82, 86, 91, 93, 101 warrior of, traces a map with coat, of the River Colbert for La Salle's party 91
 Isinois River—Mention 69
 Isinois (Indian Village)—Manners and customs described 77-80
 mention 87

near present site of Ottawa, Ill; visited by La Salle; described	76, 77
visit of La Salle to	92
Indian Corn—Mention	56, 57, 59, 60, 66, 77, 80, 91
method of preserving for winter	77
quantity taken by La Salle from Illinois Indians	74
Indian Girl—Marriage of Michael Accau to, mention in ex- planatory note to Hennepin's narrative	105
Indian Hunter—Accompanies La Salle, mention	56
Indian Tribes—Mentioned by Hennepin:
Akansa	92
Chabadeba	98
Chabauodeba	98
Chongaskethon	100
Ciccaca	81, 92
Hurons	48, 51, 52
Iroquois	48, 51, 52
Islati	98
Illinois	65, 66, 86, 91, 92, 101
Issati	100
Kiou (or Nadouessons)	98, 100-105
Maroa (or Tamaroas)	96
Maroha	101
Miamiis	72, 92, 101, 104
Nadouession (or Sioux)	98, 100-105
Ouadebathon	100
Outaouacs, Outtaoutetz, Ottawas	51, 52
Poutouatami	53
Sioux (Nadouessions)	98, 100-105
Tamaroa (or Maroa)	96
Tinthonha	100
Indian Villages—Mentioned by Hennepin:
Illinois	76, 87, 92
Mascoutens	71
Miamiis	71
Olatinon	71
Poutouatami	53-57
Iron—Indians anxious to obtain	104
Iroquois (Indian Tribes)—Five nations, later six nations; the principal tribes of the Iroquois were the Mohawks, Oneidas, Onandagas, Cayugas and Senecas, and later, Tuscarawas.
carry intelligence between different nations	47
La Salle decides to fortify the French against; mention	42
mentioned as subjects of France	80, 81
mention	47, 62, 65
Miamiis and Illinois Indians make alliance against	92
Talon uncertain of sympathies of, mention in letter to Colbert	42
trade in furs with the Dutch of New York; mention	47
waged war against Illinois tribes	65
Islati (Indian Tribes)—Mention of	98
Issati (Indian Tribes—Prairie men)	100

Issati Lake—Mention.....	99
Issati River (or Nadoussion)—Mention of.....	99
Joliet, Louis—Explorations of, mention.....	44
mention of.....	105
Jesuit Priests—Writings important in history of Mississippi Valley; mention.....	45
zealous in missionary work among North American Indians.....	45
Kankakee River—Mention, note.....	69
Kettles—Mention.....	82
Kingston, Canada—Present city of, the site of old Fort Frontenac, mention in editorial description of La Salle's plans for conquest in America.....	42
Knives—Used by the French as articles of exchange in trade with Indians.....	41
Lakes mentioned by Hennepin:
Buade (Mille) Lake.....	99
Conde (Superior) Lake.....	50, 51, 52, 98, 100
Conty (Erie) Lake.....	46
Dauphin (Michigan), Lake.....	53, 55, 56, 60, 66, 89
Issati (Buade), Lake of.....	99
Orleans (Huron), Lake of.....	47
Pepin (Lake of Tears).....	98
St. Claire.....	47, 48
"La Louisiane"—Hennepin returns to France and publishes his "La Louisiane," in 1683; mention of in explanatory note to Hennepin's narrative.....	105
La Rousseliere—Deserter from La Salle's party, arrested; foot note.....	53
La Salle, Rene Robert, Cavalier, Sieur de La Salle—French explorer in Mississippi Valley, born Rouen, France, 1643 killed in Texas, 1687, by the treachery of Duhaut and Liotot, members of his own party.
conditions on which he received the seigniority of Fort Frontenac.....	42, 43, 44
fears the loss of the "Griffin".....	68
determines to set out on foot for Fort Frontenac.....	89
first meeting with Henri de Tonty.....	44
leaves Fort Crecoeur for Fort Frontenac.....	93
leaves France for Quebec.....	45
letters patent, etc.; editorial.....	41-46
license from the king, mention.....	44
losses very heavy.....	55
makes present to Oumahouha, Illinois Indian chief....	93
makes presents to Illinois Indians.....	80
makes presents to the Illinois and Miami Indians....	92
obstinacy of, unwillingness to receive advice, mention..	66, 70
permit granted to, by the King of France "to find a port for the king's vessels in the Gulf of Mexico".....	44
petitions the King of France to grant him the seignior of Fort Frontenac.....	42, 43
Poutouatamis of the Island present Calumet of Peace to La Salle.....	57

- visit of La Salle to village of Poutouatamis.....53, 51 proposes to build a fort at the mouth of the river of the Miami 67
 return of, to party from explorations by land along the river Miami 69, 70
 sails for Paris, where he and Colbert mature plans for further discoveries 43
 theft of the coat of La Salle's lackey by Indians, mention 61
 LeFevre—See Fevre.
 Letters Patent—Granted to La Salle by the King of France..41-44
 License—Granted to La Salle by the King of France..... 44 Liquors—Used extensively by French as article of exchange in trade with Indians 41
 Louisiana—First chapel in, to be dedicated to St. Anthony of Padua 50
 climate and resources of.....75, 76
 Hennepin's description of.....41-105
 Luke (Luc)—Pilot of La Salle's vessel, the "Griffin", lost with the vessel47, 55, 68
 two of La Salle's men sent to Missilmakinac as guides to 68
 Mackinac—Mention 105
 Mambre—See Membre.
 Manza Ouackanze (Maza Wakande)—Means "Iron that has understanding," name given by Sioux (Dakota) Indians to European guns; mention..... 105
 Map—Illinois warrior traces a map of the River Colbert for La Salle 91
 Maps—Hennepin's and Membre's, location of Fort Crevecoeur 87
 Marne River—Of France, compared to River Seignelay of the Illinois (Kankakee River)..... 71
 Maroa (or Tamaroa, a tribe of Illinois Indians)— mentioned by Hennepin..... 96
 Maroha (Indian Tribes)—Mention 101 Marquette, Father James—Explorations of, mention..... 44
 mention of..... 105
 Mascoutens (Indian village)—Mention..... 71
 Maskoutens—Sacs, Foxes or Outagamies, really one nation, the Musquakkiuk (Red Clay Nation).
 Membre, or Mambre, Father Zenobius—Recollect priest, companion of La Salle, born Bapaume, France, about 1645, died Texas, 1689.
 a Franciscan Friar chosen to accompany La Salle's expedition 45
 map of, showing location of Fort Crevecoeur..... 87
 mention88, 93, 107, 116, 133, 135, 137
 Mechasipi River (River Colbert)—Beauties of the great river told by Indians..... 90 described by Illinois Indians to La Salle 81, 82
 Mexico, Gulf of—La Salle to find port for French vessels in. 44
 Meskonsing River—Earliest French name for Wisconsin river.
 Miami, Fort of—See Fort of the Miami.

- Miamis (Indian Tribes)—Tribe of the Algonquins; make alliance with Illinois Indians against the Iroquois..... 92 manner of hunting buffalo described..... 72
 mention 101, 104
- Miamis (Indian Village)—Mention 71
- Miamis River—The St. Joseph of Lake Michigan.
 channel of, marked by La Salle as guide to pilot..... 68
 La Salle builds a Fort at the mouth of; description of fort 67 La Salle's party ascends; await the arrival of La Salle. 69
 mention 71
 place of rendezvous for La Salle and party..... 66
- Mille Lake (Lake Baude)—Mention of..... 90
- Mines—Coal, slate, iron and copper, mention of..... 76
- Misconsin (Wisconsin River)—Mention of..... 98
- Missilmakinac (Point Ignace)—Arrival of La Salle's party at description of 50
 mention 53, 54
 one of the important passes for all the Indians of the west and northwest..... 52
 Tonty brings news that the "Griffin" has not reached.. 63 two of La Salle's men sent to as guides to the pilot.... 68
- Mississippi River (River Colbert)—Hennepin's captors (1680) take him down the river..... 105
 mention 96
- Mississippi Valley—La Salle's influence on development of; mention 42
 Recollect missionaries and Jesuit fathers prominent in missionary work in; mentioned editorially..... 45
- Monso—Miami Indian chief (Monso—Deer) in Chippewa language, mons means moose. "Nouvelle Decouverte" calls him a Mascouten.
 called by Hennepin, Chief of the Miamis..... 82
 mention 90
 sent by Frenchmen, secretly visits the Illinois Indian tribes; attempts to prevent further travels of La Salle 82, 83, 84, 85
- Muskrats—Animals resembling muskrats killed by La Salle; mention 69
- Nadouessans (Indian tribes)—
 Nadonessions—
 Nadouessious—
- Nadouessioux (or Sioux)—From an Ojibway word, meaning enemies.
 Hennepin's account of the taking of himself and two canoemen by 100-105
 mention 98
 Prairie-men, mention of..... 100 outrages committed against Hennepin's party by..... 104
- Nadoussion River (Issati)—Mention..... 99
- Narrhebota (Chief)—Captain of one of the Indian tribes by whom Hennepin was captured..... 103
- New France—Mention of, in La Salle's petition..... 44

Niagara—Visited by La Salle and party.....	46
Niagara (great fall of)—Mention.....	54
Niagara River—La Salle's difficulty in ascending, mention..	47
Nicanape—Illinois Indian, brother of Chassagoac, the most important chief of the Illinois Indians; anecdote of his visit to La Salle.....	83, 84, 85, 86
Nimissakouat River—Mention.....	98
North-west,—La Salle's influence on development of; mention	42
Ojatinon (Indian Village)—Mention	71
Omaouha } Illinois Indian chief, gives secret information
Oumahouha { to La Salle.....	82
mention	93
On-an-ghis-se—Chief of the Poutouatamis of the island, name means "him with a medal"; mention in note.....	54
his affection for Frontenac, anecdote of.....	54
entertains La Salle.....	54
Onisconsin River (Misconsin or Wisconsin River)—So written by Hennepin.....	97, 98, 99
Onnotio—
Onontio—Means in Huron and Onondaga "beautiful mountain"; first given by the Indians to Montmagny, governor of Canada, and afterwards given to all governors of Canada, mention	54, 64
Opossum—Description of an animal resembling.....	69
Orleans Lake (Huron)—Mention.....	47, 48
Osage (Indian Tribes, Siouan Family)—Make known to La Salle's party that the River Colbert is navigable.....	92 neighboring tribe to the Illinois Indians.....	80
party of, visit Illinois Indian village to trade with the French	92
Ototenta River—Mention by Hennepin as a tributary to the River Colbert	97
Onisconsin River (or Wisconsin River)—Mention.....	97, 98
Ottawa, Ill.—Illinois Indian village situated near present site of, mention in explanatory note	77
Ouadebathon (Indian Tribe)—Means River People.....	100
Oumahouha } or Wolf (Omaha)—Illinois Indian Chief, La Salle
Omaouha— { makes present to.....	93
meaning of name	93
mention	82
Outaouacs } (Indian Tribes)—An Algonquin tribe.
Outtaoutetz } Alliance of, with the Hurons against the Iroquois; mention	52
Ottawas {
Ottawas—Alliance with the Hurons against the Iroquois; mention	52
Ottawas (Indian village)—La Salle and party attend mass in chapel at	51
Outouagamis (Indian Tribes—Fox Indians)—Attitude toward La Salle and party.....	62, 63
Indian tribes located near the Bay of the Puants.....	61
La Salle takes one prisoner.....	62
mention	61, 63, 64, 65

- visited by La Salle 61, 62, 63
 steal coat of La Salle's lackey 61 urge priests to remain with them 64, 65
- Parrakeets (Piroques of wooden canoes)—Used by the Illinois Indians; mention 78
- Peoria Mission—Michel Accan marries an Indian girl at, remains in America; explanatory note; mention 105
- Peoria Lake (Upper)—Mention of 78
- Periagua (Wooden canoe)—Used by Illinois Indians 91
- Petition—Of La Salle to King of France for permission to explore the western parts of New France; mention .. 44
- Petun—French tobacco; mention 101
- Picard du Gay—See Auguelle; mention 94 begs Hennepin to conceal his devotions from the Indians 103
- Picard (The)—Nickname given to Anthony Auguelle by La Salle's party 103
- Pilot (Luke)—Of La Salle's vessel, the "Griffin;" mention 47, 55, 68
- Pilots—Engaged by La Salle for his expedition 44
- Pepin or Pipin, Lake—Lake of Tears, why so called 98
- Pisikious (Buffalo)—Described by Hennepin 72, 73, 74, 75
- Pit-sawyers—Desertion of from La Salle 85, 88
- Piagiarism—Hennepin accused of, in his historical writings; mention; and foot note 46
- Point (Great Point)—Mention 49
- Point Ignace (Misillimakinac)—Arrival of La Salle's party at description of 50
- Portage—At the Sau't Ste. Marie; mention 50, 51
- Pottawattomie Indian Chief, mention in explanatory note... 53
- Pottawattomie Island—Mention of in explanatory note 53
- Poules d' Inde (Wild Turkeys)—Mention of 60 used as food by Indians and explorers, great numbers of, etc. 60
- Poutouatamis (Indian Tribes)—Mention 53
- Poutouatamis (Indian Village)—Poutouatamis of the Island visited by La Salle and party 53, 54, 56, 57, 58, 59
- Prairie Men—Issati Indians 100
- Presents—Always used in trading or treating with Indians; Indians make presents to La Salle 64
- Presents—Made by Monso, Mascouten chief to Illinois Indians, mention 84
- Provence, France—Climate of compared to that of Illinois.... 89
- Puans }
 Puants } Bay of, (Green Bay)—Mention 53, 61, 99
- Rattlesnake—Indian killed by 98, 99
- Recollects—Reformed Fathers of St. Francis.
 a branch of the order founded by St. Francis of Assisi, about 1210.
 called Recollects or Recollets from their desire for retirement.
 Franciscan Friars, known as such in France, Belgium and Holland, mention 45

join La Salle's expedition.....	47
known as "Grey Friars" or Grey "Gowns," mention....	45
Recollect Mislonaries—La Salle makes provisions for in case of desertion by others of his party.....	66
mention	92
mention of, as accompanying La Salle's party.....	46
writings important in history of Mississippi Valley....	45
Ribourde, Father Gabriel de la—Recollect priest, companion of La Salle, born in Burgundy, France, about 1615; died in Illinois; killed by Kickapoo Indians.
a Franciscan Friar chosen to accompany La Salle.....	45 advises Hennepin to continue voyage of discovery.....	94
death of, killed by Indians.....	135 gives blessing to Hennepin and party as they leave Fort Crevecoeur	95
mention
57, 59, 60, 62, 68, 70, 71, 78, 87, 88, 92, 93, 94, 133, 135.	137
Rice (Wild)—Mention	99, 100
Rivers Mentioned by Hennepin—Black River.....	98
Buffalo River	98
Colbert River
.....81, 82, 86, 87, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 96, 97, 98, 99,	101
Issati or Nadoussion River.....	99
Meschasipi (Colbert River)	81, 90
Miamis River	66, 67, 68, 69, 71
Niagara River	47
Nimissakouat River.....	98
Onisconsin or Misconsin River.....	97, 98, 99
Ototenta River	97
St. Francis (Rum) River	99
Seignelay River or Illinois.....	69, 98
Tomb River	98, 100
Rouen (France)Mention	48
Roman Catholic Church—Religious orders of prominent in missionary work in N. Amer.....	45
Rum River—Mention of, in note.....	99
Sagamity (Cooked Indian Corn)Method of preparation by the Indians for food, Hennepin's account of.....	52
Sailors—Engaged by La Salle for expedition.....	44
St. Anthony of Padua—Born Lisbon 1195, died Padua 1231, one of the early leaders of the order of Franciscan Monks.
adopted at desire of Hennepin as the protector of La Salle's enterprise, and the first chapel erected in Louisiana to be named after him, if expedition was successful	50
mention of	99, 100
St. Anthony Falls—Named by Hennepin.....	99
St. Bonaventure—Mention	100
St. Claire—Founder of order of Franciscan nuns. Clara Scifi d'Assisi, born 1194, founder of female order of the Clarisses, 1212, Cordeliers or Gray Sisters and other orders. Died Aug. 12, 1253.

- St. Claire, Lake of—Named for saint, entered by La Salle and party on that saint's day, Aug. 12; named in honor of.. 47
 mention 48
 see Michigan Pioneer Collections, vol. 3, pp. 650-651.
 description of 47
 description of neighboring country 47, 48
- St. Croix River—Mention 105 mention of in explanatory note..... 98
- St. Francis of Assisi (Francis Bernardone)—Founder of the Franciscan order of priests of the Roman Catholic church, founded about 1210; born at Assisi 1182 (or 1181), died 1226.
 missionary of, care by Hennepin; rescue of..... 57, 60 missionaries of (Recollects); religious order called "Grey Gowns" or "Bare Feet" by the Indians.... 92
- St. Francis River (Rum River)—Name given by La Salle.... 99
- St. Joseph's River of Lake Michigan—Mention..... 66
- Saint Lawrence—Feast of, mention..... 47
- Sainte Marie du Long Sault—Indian tribe near, called Saulteurs 52
- Sakinam Bay—Mention 49
- Sault Sainte Marie—Described 50 deserters of La Salle's party arrested at..... 53 one of the important passes for all the Indians of the west and north; mention..... 52
- Saulteurs—Name given to Indian tribes of Sainte Marie du Long Sault 52
- Schouten, Antoine—Publisher of Utrecht edition of 1698 of Hennepin's travels 45
- Seignelay River (Illinois River, Kankakee)—Channels deep enough for large flatboats; mention..... 97
 description of 71, 72
 mention 69, 76, 98
- Seignlory of Fort Frontenac—See Fort Frontenac..... 42, 43
- Seine River (France)—Compared by Hennepin with the river of the Illinois 77
- Shea, Dr. John Gilmary D.—Translation of Hennepin's "Description de la Louisaine" of 1683. Mention..... 45
- Ship Building—The first on Upper Lakes, at Crevecoeur in the Illinois; mention 88, 89
- Sickness—Among men of La Salle's party; mention..... 60
- Singing—Indian tribes fond of..... 104
- Siouan (Sioux)—Indian family; tribes beyond the Mississippi.
- Sioux Indians—Hennepin and party captured by..... 100-105
- Soto, Ferdinand de—Spanish explorer in Mississippi valley born about 1500, died 1542. The relation of his voyage mentioned by Hennepin. 81
- South Bend, Indiana—Site of the present city of, mentioned in explanatory note 69
- South Sea—Mention 44
- Spirits—Indians so styled the French; mention..... 65
- Squashes—Used as article of food by La Salle's party..... 56
- Stockade—Placed around Fort Crevecoeur..... 88

Superior Lake—Mention	105
La Salle restricted in his trade with the savages about the outlets of	44
Talon, M. Jean Baptiste—Letter to the great Colbert at Paris giving views as to French colonial policy.....	41, 42
Tamaroa (or Maroa, a tribe of the Illinois Indians)—mention by Hennepin.....	96
Tears, Lake of (Pepin)—Mention.....	98
"Te Deum"—Custom relating to; chanting of.....	47, 48
Thieving—Among Indians, anecdotes of.....	61, 62, 63, 64
Tinthonha (Indian Tribes)—Prairie-men, mention.....	100
Tobacco—Used as article of exchange by traders with Indians, as present to Indians, etc.; mention....	80, 95, 101, 102, 103
Tomb River—Skeleton of an Indian found near; mention....	100
why so called.....	98
Tonti (Tonty), Henri de—Italian explorer and soldier in French service; La Salle's lieutenant; commandant in the Illinois; born in Italy, probably Naples, 1650; died at Fort St. Louis, Mobile, 1704.
accompanies La Salle and party from France.....	44, 45
arrival of at Fort of the Miamis.....	68 arrival of awaited by La Salle and party.....	67
devotion to La Salle.....	44
first meeting with La Salle, enters the service of.....	44
left by La Salle as commandant at Fort Crevecoeur....	93
loses guns and baggage by upsetting of canoe.....	69
meeting with Hennepin.....	45
mention	88
personal characteristics of	44
sent by La Salle to arrest deserters.....	53
Tula—Indian nation mentioned in "Relation of the Voyage of Ferdinand de Soto," reference to by Hennepin.....	81
Turkeys (Wild)—Used as food by Indians and explorers; mention	60, 101, 102, 104
Upper Peoria Lake—Mention	78
Vespers—Singing of on holidays and Sundays at Fort Crevecoeur, mention	88
Villages (Indian)—Miamis, Mascoutens and Ojatonon, mention	71
West India Islands—French Colonies in, might be supplied with food stuffs from the Mississippi valley; opinion of Hennepin	76
White Fish—Description of manner of catching by Outtaouactz Indians.....	51, 52
Wild Cattle (Pisikious or Buffalo)—Described.....	72, 73, 74, 75
mention	97
Wild Rice—Growth of; its uses by the Indians.....	99
Wild Turkeys (Poules d'Inde)—Mention of.....	60, 101, 102, 104
Wine—Made from wild grapes by La Salle's party for celebration of mass, mention.....	60, 61, 88
Wisconsin River—Mention of in note.....	98
mention of in explanatory note to Hennepin's narrative	105

Women—Of the Miamis Indians, spin wool of buffaloes.....	74
manner of curing buffalo meat.....	74
Wooden Canoes (Parrakeets or Piroques)—Used by Indians	78
You, Pierre "The Picard"—Pierre You d'Youville de la De-couverte; his real name was Anthony Auguelle (called the Picard).
all of La Salle's party were ennobled on account of participation in the expedition.
Zenobius, Father—Father Zenobius Membre, Jesuit; see Membre.
Zenoble, Father—Zenobius Membre, Jesuit; see Membre. cabin of, at Fort Crevecoeur used as a chapel in which
to say mass	88
encourages La Salle's party to continue explorations..	78
mention	79, 93, 133, 135, 137

INDEX TO THE PROCESS VERBAL—PP. 106-113.

Akansa—Siouan tribe of Indians.
Akansas Indians—Conduct La Salle to village of the Talusas, villages of mentioned.....	109
Aïgonquin—See Ilgonquines.
Alighin River—Early name given the Ohio River.....	111
Autray, Sieur de—Title of nobility given Jean Bourdon, foot note	113
Autry, Sieur de (Jean Bourdon)—Signer of the "Proces Verbal"	113
Barbie, Gabriel (Barbier or Minime)—Captures two Indians of the Chikacha nation; mention.....	108
Boisrondet, Francois de—Signer of the "Proces Verbal".....	113
Bourdon, Jean Francois (Sieur d' Autry)—Companion of La salle; signer of the "Proces Verbal".....	113
Canes in marshes along Mississippi river; mention.....	110
Cauchols, Jaques—Signer of the "Proces Verbal".....	113
Chaouans (Indian Tribes)—Mentioned by La Salle as among the tribes with whom he had formed alliance.....	111
Chepontias River—Mention	109
Chekagon River (Chicago)—Ice in, arrests progress of La Salle and party; mention.....	107
Chicago Portage—Mention, foot note.....	107
Chicago River—Mention, foot note.....	107
Chikacha (Indian Tribes)—Presents given to by La Salle; La Salle angry with them on account of their deception..	108
capture of two of this nation by Gabriel Barbie.....	108
Chikachas (Indian Tribe)—Fog prevents La Salle's finding place of rendezvous with.....	109
Chikachas (Indian Tribes)—La Salle forms alliance with....	111
Chikachas River—Early name given the Ohio River.....	111
Christian Religion—Cross the symbol of.....	112-113 to be established in all countries annexed by the King of France; mention	112
Colbert River (or Mississippi)—Indian tribes dwelling along; mention	111
La Salle and party first reach.....	107
La Salle reascends the river; prepares a column and a cross, to which the arms of France are affixed, with an inscription	111
mention	106, 107
mouth of the river discovered and explored.....	110, 111
three channels of, discovered by La Salle.....	110
Cross—A symbol of the Christian religion erected by order of the King of France in all new countries.....	113
cross and column erected by La Salle on bank of Mississippi river, to which the arms of France were affixed, with an inscription; mention.....	111
Desplanes River (Chicago River)—Mention in foot note....	107

"Discovery of the Mississippi"—Falconer's "Discovery of the Mississippi," mention in note	106
Domine Salvum Fac Regem—Chanted by La Salle's party at the erection of the column on taking possession of Louisiana	111
singing of, mention	113
Drums—Beaten by Indians when preparing for war	110
Duignon, Jean—Signer of the "Proces Verbal"	113
Edwards, Ninian W.—Illinois author; first state superintendent of public instruction; born Kentucky 1809, died Illinois 1889.
Edwards History of Illinois—Reference to in foot note	107
Exaudiat—Chanted by La Salle's party at the erection of the column on taking possession of Louisiana	107
Falconer, Thomas—Author of "Discovery of the Mississippi," mentioned in explanatory note	106
Firearms—Salutes of firearms on the erection of the column by La Salle in Louisiana	111, 112
France—Arms of, affixed to cross erected by La Salle on the taking possession of Louisiana	111
"Arms of France" engraved on leaden plate with Latin inscription buried at the foot of the tree to which cross was attached by La Salle on the taking possession of Louisiana	112
French, B. F.—Historical Collections of Louisiana, Part 1; mention of in explanatory note	106
French—Members of La Salle's party; numbers of	107
Frenchman (Pierre Prudhomme)—Of La Salle's party lost in the woods	108, 109
Gift Giving—See presents.
Gulf of Mexico—Mention	106, 112
Historical Collection of Louisiana, Part 1 (French's), mention of in explanatory note	106
Huronnes—Women of the tribe accompany La Salle	107
"H. W. B."—Initials of H. W. Beckwith, editor of this volume, signed to descriptive and explanatory notes	106, 107, 112, 113
Ilgonquines (Indian tribes)—Women of the tribe accompany La Salle	107
Illinois Indian tribes mentioned by La Salle as one of the tribes with whom he had made alliance	111
Illinois, History of—By Ninian W. Edwards, mention foot note	107
Illinois, village of—Mention	107
Imaha (Indian Village)—One of the largest villages of the Akansa nation	109
peace treaty made there by La Salle	109
Indian Tribes—Mentioned in the "Proces Verbal:"
Akansa	109
Akansas	109
Chickasaws	108, 111
Chikachas	108, 111
Huronnes	107

Ilgonquines	111
Illinois	111
Imaha	109
Kious (or Nadouessions).....	111
Koroas	111
Mascoutens	107
Mesigameas	111
Motantees	111
Nadouessions (Kious)	111
Natches	109, 111
Otchipolises	107
Taensas	109
Talusas	109
Indian Villages—Mentioned in the "Proces Verbal:"
Akansas	109
Illinois	107
Jason	109
Kapaha (of Akansa).....	109
Koroas	111
Kouera	109
Maheouala	110
Maroa	107
Oumas	109
Tourika	109
Jason (Indian Village)—Mention.....	109
Kapaha (Indian Village)—Of Akansa, mention	109
peace treaty made there by La Salle	109
Kious (or Nadouessious)—Indian tribe, mentioned by La Salle among the tribes with whom he had formed al- liance	111
Koroas (Indian Tribe)—Southern tribe; mentioned by La Salle as among the tribes with whom he had made al- liance	111
peace made with the Koroas, whose chief accompanied La Salle to his village; peace treaty again made....	109
villages of	109
Kouera—Indian Village	109
Lake (The)—Lake Michigan, mentioned in foot note.....	107
La Salle, Nicholas de la—Signer of the "Proces Verbal".....	113
La Salle, Rene Robert, Sieur de—Account of his discoveries, etc.	106-113
"Arms of France" erected in Louisiana by.....	111
buries leaden plate with arms of France and Latin in- scription, at the foot of the tree to which cross was at- tached	112
requires an instrument signed and delivered to him, known as the "Proces Verbal".....	113
takes possession of the country of Louisiana in the name of the King of France	111
translation of Latin inscription, foot note.....	112
witness and signer of the "Proces Verbal".....	113
Leaden Plate—Buried by La Salle at foot of tree to which cross was attached; inscription, translation, foot note	112

- Louis XIV of France—Louis de Bourbon, King of France and of Navarre, reigned 1643-1715. Born 1638, died 1715. called by La Salle "the eldest son of the church."
- La Salle takes possession of Louisiana in the name of. 111
- mention 106, 107
- would annex no country to his crown without making it his chief care to establish the Christian religion therein; mention 112
- Louisiana—Extent of described 111
- taken possession of by La Salle, ceremonies attending, etc. 111-113
- Maheouala—Indian village of the Tangibaos nation, mentioned in "Proces Verbal" 110
- Marine Department of France, at Paris—Copies of documents from archives of, mention in foot note 106
- Maroa (Indian Village)—Arrival of La Salle at 107
- Mas, Jean—Signer of the "Proces Verbal" 113
- Mascoutens (Indian Tribe)—Country of mentioned 107
- Membre, Father Zenobius—Recollect missionary, accompanies La Salle; mention 107
- Mesigameas (Indian Tribe)—Mentioned by La Salle as among the tribes with whom he had made alliance 111
- Metairie, Jacques de la—Notary of Fort Frontenac; notary during voyage of La Salle to Louisiana 106, 107
- notary, signs the "Proces Verbal" 113
- Metsigmeas (Indian Village)—Mention 108-109
- Meucet, Gilles—Signer of the "Proces Verbal" 113
- Mexico, Gulf of—Mention 106
- Miamis Country—La Salle departs to join Tonty in 107
- Michel, Jean (Surgeon)—Signer of the "Proces Verbal" 113
- Michigan (The Lake)—Mentioned in foot note 107
- Mississippi River (River Colbert. See Colbert)—Mention of Indian tribes dwelling on 111
- Motantees (Indian Tribe)—Mentioned by La Salle as among the tribes with whom he had made alliance 111
- Natches (Maskoki Tribe)—La Salle forms alliance with 111
- mention 109
- New England Savages—Accompany La Salle on voyage down the River Colbert 107
- Nobility—Titles of nobility were conferred on the members of La Salle's party who were present at taking possession of Louisiana; foot note 113
- North Pole—Mention 111, 112
- Ohio River—Early names given it, mention by La Salle 111
- Otchipois (Indian Tribe) Women of the tribe accompany La Salle down the River Colbert 107
- Oumas, Louisiana Tribe (Indian Village)—La Salle's party pass in fog without knowing it 109
- Pa'ms, River of—Mention 112
- Presents—Given by La Salle to Chikachas 108
- "Proces Verbal"—An account of the taking possession of Louisiana by La Salle in the name of the King of France 106-113

- historical document, translation of.....106-113 reprinted from Sparks' "Life of La Salle," published in Boston, 1844; mention in note..... 113
 Pimiteoui (Upper Peoria Lake)—Mention..... 107
 Portage—Chicago portage mentioned in foot note..... 107
 Recollect Missionary—Accompanies La Salle, mention..... 107 Rivers—Mentioned in the "Proces Verbal":
 Alighin river 111
 Chekagon river 107
 Chikachas river 111
 Colbert river 106, 107, 110, 111, 112
 Ohio river 111
 Palms, river of 112
 St. Louis river..... 111
 Sipore river 111
 Sledges—Used to convey luggage..... 107
 St. Germain en Laye—One of the palaces of the Kings of France; birthplace of Louis XIV.; town of France about 13 miles from Paris; palace now a museum of national antiquities.
 commission given to Metairie at, to act as notary during the voyage of La Salle..... 106
 St. Louis River—Early name given the Ohio River; mention 111
 Sipore River—Early name given the Ohio River; mention... 111
 Southern Indians 110
 Sparks, Jared—Note by, on the publication of the "Proces Verbal;" foot note 106
 Taensas (Southern Indian Tribe—La Salle's party, well received by, and peace concluded with..... 109
 Talusas (Indian Tribe)—Allies of the Arkansas Indians, La Salle conducted to their villages by Arkansas Indians.. 109 Te Deum—Chanted by La Salle's party on the taking possession of Louisiana..... 111 Titles of Nobility—Conferred on La Salle and party for their discoveries in Mississippi valley..... 113
 Tonty, Henri de—Examines the middle channel of the River
 Colbert; mention 110
 La Salle departs to join Tonty in the Miamis country. 109 passes the night at the village of the Taensas..... 109 precedes La Salle to Miamis country..... 107 signer of the "Proces Verbal"..... 113
 Tourika (Indian Village)—Mention..... 109
 Upper Peoria Lake—Mention 107
 Vexilla—Singing of, on the taking possession of Louisiana... 113
 Village of Southern Indians—Name unknown to La Salle
 (probably the Quinipissa); mention..... 110
 Vive le Roi, Cries of—Mention 111, 112
 You, Pierre—Signer of the "Proces Verbal"..... 113 name adopted by Anthony Auguel'e, the Picard, on being ennobled for accompanying La Salle on voyage 113 Zenoble, P., Recollect Missionary—Signer of the "Proces
 Verbal 113

INDEX TO THE "WILL OF THE SIEUR DE LA SALLE".. 114

La Salle, Robert Cavellier, Esquire, Sieur de la Salle.—Seigneur and governor of the Fort Frontenac in New France, will of.....	114
Fort Frontenac—Seigniory and property of, given to his cousin, M. Francois Plet by La Salle's will.....	114
Frontenac—Fort	114
Illinois, Country of—Mention.....	114
Miamis, Country of—Mention	114
Montreal—La Salle's will made, and signed at, 11th Aug., 1681	114
Niagara—Property at; mention	114
Plet, Francois—A merchant of Paris, later came to Canada; cousin of La Salle and beneficiary under his will.....	114
Property—Illinois country, rights to land in; lands, etc.....	114
Miamis country, rights to land in.....	114
Niagara, rights in, rents, lands, buildings, etc.....	114
seigniory of Fort Frontenac, etc.....	114

INDEX TO THE "MEMOIR OF THE SIEUR DE LA SALLE."
.....115-125

Animals—Large numbers of in Mississippi val'ey.....	119
Anthrophagi—Barbarous and cannibal nations, mention in explanatory note	115
(Antropohages) explanatory note	115
Barbier, Gabriel (Minime)—Companion of La Salle, descends middle channel of the mouth of the Mississippi	116
Barre, Antoine Joseph le Fevre, M. de la—Governor of Canada 1682-1685; succeeded Frontenac; died 1688; sends Vital to collect information regarding La Salle.....	116 writes Colbert of the importance of establishing Ft. St. Louis of the Illinois as a check against the Iroquois	123
Bapaume, France—A town now in the department of Pas de Calais, France; then in the Spanish Netherlands.—(B. F. French.)
Father Zenoble, guardian of, mention.....	116 in 1682 Father Membre became warden of a religious house at Bapaume, his birthplace.
Beavers—Killing of by the Illinois Indians; mention.....	122, 123
Bourdon, Jean (Sieur d'Autray) Mention.....	116
Buffaloes—Large numbers of in the Mississippi valley.....	119
Canibal Nations among North American Indians; mention..	115
Canada—Advantages to, to be derived from the discoveries of La Salle	117
mention	116, 117
Cavaller—See La Salle.
Christian Religion—Establishment of, among Indian nations; mention	118
Climate of Mississippi Val'ey—Mention.....	119
Colbert, Jean Baptiste—Marquis de Seignelay, son of Colbert the elder; mention	115
Red River (Seignelay), so called in honor of, mention in explanatory note.....	120
Colbert, Monseigneur (Jean Baptiste)—La Salle addresses petition to	115
mention	117
permits La Salle to build Ft. St. Louis of the Illinois, and grants it to him as a property; mention.....	123
"Proces Verbal," document signed by La Salle and companions, addressed to and placed in the hands of; mention	116
thinks it important to discover a port for vessels in the Gulf of Mexico; mention	115
Colbert River—Capable of receiving ships of every description, etc.	119
one post, established toward the lower part of the river, sufficient to protect territory against invasion	120

- probable reason why the Spaniards neglected the exploration of the River Colbert; mention..... 120
- provinces which adjoin the river, rich in silver mines; mention 118
- Colony—Established by La Salle..... 115, 116
- Conquests, of the French Nation—By land and sea; La Salle's predictions; mention 118
- Dutch newspapers—Mention 122
- Falconer, Thomas—Reference to his work on the "Discovery of the Mississippi," see foot note..... 116
- Fort St. Louis of the Illinois—La Salle hopes to continue in the title (proprieté) and government of..... 116
- Fort St. Louis of the Illinois; mention..... 116
- mention of in foot note 122
- Colbert permits La Salle to build it, and grants it to him as a property; mention 123
- the only source of satisfying La Salle's creditors; mention 116
- Fort Frontenac—Building of..... 122
- Forts—In Mississippi valley; mention..... 124
- France—Advantages to, to be derived from the discoveries of La Salle; mention..... 117
- immigration from, effect on population; mention..... 124
- Frontenac, Count de—Effect of his departure on Indian allies; mention 123
- official instrument (Proces Verbal) placed in the hands of Colbert by the Count de Frontenac; mention.. 116
- Furs—Indians dispose of their furs at Montreal..... 122
- Indians of the Mississippi valley ignorant of value of furs 119
- Fowls—Mention 120
- Gulf of Mexico—Mention 115, 117
- Hides—Mention 119
- Horses—Mention 120
- Hudson Bay—Mention of in La Salle's Memoir. 121
- "H. W. B."—Initials of H. W. Beckwith, editor of this volume, sign notes..... 115, 116, 122, 123
- Illinois (Indian Tribes)—Illinois Indians and allies traffic in beavers; mention 122, 123
- Illinois River—Starved Rock on the Illinois River near Ottawa, Ill.; mention in explanatory note..... 124
- Iron—Possibility of its discovery along the River Colbert.... 119
- Iroquois (Indian Tribes)—Defeated at Fort St. Louis of the Illinois 123
- mention 122
- feared by other nations..... 123
- La Barre. Le Fevre de—See Barre.
- Lagny, M. de—Intendant-general of commerce and foreign affairs of France; foot note. (H. W. B.)..... 123
- proposed in 1678 the establishment of a fort to keep the Iroquois in check..... 123
- La Salle, Nicholas de—Companion of La Salle, mention in explanatory note; (not a relative)..... 116

- La Salle, Rene Robert, Sieur de—Account of his voyages, and the country traversed, etc. 115 agrees to complete enterprise within one year, asks support for one year 118 conquests for the King of France predicted by 118 Fort St. Louis of the Illinois, the only source of satisfying La Salle's creditors 116 grant made to him by letters patent of May 12, 1678; mention 115 hopes to continue in the title (propriete) and government of the Fort St. Louis of the Illinois 116 memoir of the Sieur de la Salle reporting to de Seignelay the discoveries made by him under the order of His Majesty 115-125 offers to descend the River Colbert and establish fort nearer the sea; mention 123 offers to undertake voyage of discovery at his own expense, if seigniorly of forts be granted him 115 permitted by Colbert to build Fort St. Louis, of the Ills. and the fort granted him as property 123 perseverance of; mention 115 plans to return to the country of his discovery by the mouth of the River Colbert, in the Gulf of Mexico. 116 statement with regard to the profit to be gained by France by the enterprise of La Salle 117
 Levees de Terre—Hard soil covered with large trees, following regularly the banks of the River Colbert 124, 125
 Louis XIV, King of France—Mention (his majesty) 115, 117
 Louisiana—Great natural resources of 118, 119 Memoir of La Salle—Reporting of M. de Seignelay the results of his voyage 115-125 submitted by La Salle while at Paris and prior to the 23d of March, 1684; mention in foot note 115 Meulles, M. Jacques de—Intendant of New France, September, 1682, to July 1686. writes Colbert of the importance of establishing Fort St. Louis of the Illinois as a check against the Iroquois Indians 123
 Mexico—Mention 120, 121
 Mexico, Gulf of—Mention 117
 Mississippi River—See Colbert.
 Mississippi Valley—Advantages and resources of; mention.. 119 description of its animals, climate and resources.. 119, 120 offers such inducements to colonists that fears are expressed that the population of France will be diminished in consequence 124 well defended in the interior by mountains 120
 Moors—Expulsion of from Spain; mention 124
 Mountains—Defend the Mississippi valley against foreign invasion; mention 120 Mines—Provinces adjoining the River Colbert rich in silver mines; mention 118
 Montreal—Mention 122

New Biscay—In the 17th century the most northern province of Mexico; memoir respecting, mention.....	135
New England—Mention	119, 121, 124
newly discovered country compared to New England.	119
New France—Mention	121, 122, 125
Newspapers—Published by the Dutch, tell of the passage of the River Colbert to the sea; mention.....	122
Olive Trees—Planting of in the Mississippi valley recommended by La Salle	120
Ottawa, Ill.—Starved Rock on the Illinois River, a few miles below Ottawa, Ill.; mention in explanatory note.....	124
Oxen—Mention	120
Pennsylvania—Mention	121
Peru—Mention	124
Post—Requirements for proposed post along the River Colbert	121
“Proces Verbal” (de la Louisiane)—Document first translated by Jared Sparks; mention in foot note.....	116
Quebec—Fears not well founded that the commerce of Quebec might be injured by the establishment of the colony in the new country.....	123
Red River (Seignelay River)—Red River called Seignelay River in honor of Jean Baptiste Colbert.....	120
Royal Geographical Society—Journal of, reference to, in foot note	116
Salle—See La Salle.
Savages—Inconstancy of; mention.....	125
Seignelay, Marquis de—Son of Colbert; La Salle's Memoir submitted to; foot note	115
Seignelay River—Red River called Seignelay in honor of Jean Baptiste Colbert; mention in explanatory note.....	120
Seignelay River—Branch of the River Colbert; mention....	120
Ships—Building of ships, material in abundance along the River Colbert; mention.....	119
Silver Mines—Existence of in Louisiana; mention.....	118
Spain—Causes of its decrease in population; mention.....	124
Spaniards—Mention	124
Sparks, Jared—“Proces Verbal,” translation of, first printed by; mention in foot note.....	116
Starved Rock—On the Illinois River near Ottawa, Ill.; mention in explanatory note	122
Swine—Mention	120
Temples—Among the Indian nations.....	118
Terres Tremblants—Marshes or bogs; mention.....	120
Virginia—Mention	121
the newly discovered country compared in resources to Virginia	119
Vital—Sent by la Barre to collect information regarding La Salle	116
Zenobius Father—Guardian of Bapaume.....	116
Zenoble, Father (see Membre)—Mention in La Salle's memoir report of as missionary who accompanied La Salle; mention	116

INDEX TO LA SALLE'S LETTERS PATENT—PP. 126-127.

Buffalo Skins—La Salle's party granted the exclusive privilege of the trade in Buffalo skins.....	127
Colbert, Jean Baptiste—Signs letters patent granted to La Salle	127
"Discovery of the Mississippi"—By Thomas Falconer; mention in foot note.....	127
Duchense } Jacques, Sieur de la Doussinière—Intendant of Duchesneau } New France, Sept. 1675 to Sept. 1682.
Duchesneau, Jacques, Sieur de la Doussinière—Intendant of New France, Sept. 1675 to Sept. 1682. commanded to affix his signature to letters patent granted by the King of France to La Salle; mention..	127
Falconer, Thomas—His manuscript copy of the original "Letters Patent," in French, corrected and translated; mention in explanatory foot note.....	127
Fort Frontenac—Other forts constructed by La Salle in New France to be held on the same conditions as Fort Frontenac	127
seignior and government of, granted to La Salle.....	126
Forts—La Salle to construct forts and to hold them on the same conditions as Fort Frontenac.....	127
France—Great seal of; mention	127
Louis XIV, King of France, grants letters patent to Robert Cavellier, sieur de la Salle.....	127
Frontenac, Louis de Buade—Governor and lieutenant-general of New France; born in France 1620, died in Quebec 1698.
Sieur de—Commanded to affix his signature to letters patent granted by the King of France to La Salle.....	127
Great Seal of France—Letters patent granted to La Salle, sealed with the great seal of France; mention.....	127
"H. W. B."—Editor of this volume signs note.....	127
La Salle, Rene Robert sieur de—Given five years to accomplish his enterprise, in default of which letters patent, etc., are void	127
letters patent issued to him by the King of France; translation	126, 127
restricted in his trade with the savages, the whole to be done at his own expense.....	127
Letters Patent—Granted to La Salle by Louis XIV, King of France; translation	126, 127
Louis XIV, King of France and of Navarre—Letters patent issued by, to La Salle.....	126, 127
Mexico (Mexico)—Mention.....	126
Montreal—Indians traffic at.....	127
New France—La Salle permitted by letters patent, granted by the King of France to endeavor to discover the western part of New France.....	126
Outaouacs (Indian Tribes)—La Salle prohibited from trading with	127
Peltries—Trade in; mention	127
Petition of La Salle to the King of France—Mention.....	126

INDEX TO TONTY'S MEMOIR—PP. 128-164.

Accan, Michael (Sieur Deau, "Dean")—Mention.....	131
Acorns—Tonty and party subsist on acorns.....	130
Abenakis Indian—Speaks to Tonty in French.....	135
Agoasto—Chief of the Onnoutagues, befriends Tonty; sets him at liberty	133
Akancas (Arkansas, Siouan Tribe)—Description by Tonty of their cabins, country, climate, customs, etc.....	139
Akancas—Guides given La Salle by, to conduct him to their allies, the Taencas.....	139 villages of, Cappa, Ostony, Toyengan and Toriman, location of	139
Alligators—Mention	140
Ammunition—Frenchman in Tonty's party loses bag containing ammunition	158
box of, left by Tonty in the hands of the wife of the chief of the Cadadaquis.....	158
mention	159
Anastatius (Father Douay)—A Recollect priest in La Salle's party, conceals the assassination of La Salle from Tonty	153
accompanies La Salle to the Illinois.....	159
accompanies La Salle in search of M. Moranget.....	160
Duhault confesses to Father Anastatius, given absolution	162
his life spared by Lanctot.....	160
Animals—Adoration of all sorts of animals by the Akancas (Arkansas) Indians.....	139
large numbers in the Mississippi valley; mention by Tonty	144
Archeveque, Jean l'—Servant of Duhault; mention.....	160
Arkansas—House built by Tonty at; Coutoure stays at....	154
Tonty contracts a fever at Arkansas.....	164
Arkansas (Indian Tribe)—La Salle's party well received by.	146
Arkansas River—Frenchmen granted the privilege of making a settlement on.....	150
Arms of France—Tonty and party encamp in the place on the Mississippi river where La Salle had erected the arms of France; Tonty erects them higher up.....	150
Assotoue—Location of Tonty's trading house.....	155
Assotoue (Indian Tribe)—Give Tonty two women of the Cadadoquis nation	155
Barre (Le Febvre de la Barre)—Governor of New France, succeeds Frontenac. served French governor of Canada from Sept. 1682 to Aug. 1685.
directed to deliver up to M. de Foret lands belonging to La Salle	148 orders Tonty to leave Fort St. Louis of the Illinois...	148

sends letters by the Chevalier de Bogis ordering La Salle to Quebec.....	147
Bays—Mentioned by Tonty in Memoir: Bay of the Puans....	136
Beads—Necklace of porcelain beads given Tonty by Iroquois Indians	133
glass beads given in exchange for pearl necklace to wife of Indian chief, by Tonty.....	141
used as articles of merchandise and exchange by Indians	159 Beauvais de Tilly (Charles le Gardeur, Sieur de Tilly—See Tilly.
Beavers—Few beavers in the Mississippi valley; mention by Tonty	144
Beaver Skins—Six packets of beaver placed before Tonty at the council held with the Iroquois; significance of....	135
Bellefontaine, Sieur de—Left in command of the Fort of Bonhomme	151
Boat (The Griffin)—Building of, mentioned by Tonty.....	129
La Salle begins the building of a boat.....	131
La Salle hears nothing from the boat which he had sent to Niagara	131
Boat (The Little Brigantine)—La Salle's party embark in; name given in explanatory note.....	128
Boat—One of La Salle's boats lost through the obstinacy of the pilot	129
Bogis } Louis Henri de, Seigneur de Villeclien, Chevalier de Baugis } Died 1720. Sent by La Barre to seize La Salle's post Baugy } of St. Louis of the Illinois.
In possession of a place belonging to M. de la Forest, who had accompanied La Salle to France; mention..	148
La Salle meets with, is bearer of letters from M. de la Barre ordering La Salle to Quebec.....	147 retires from his command of the fort of St. Louis of the Illinois by orders brought by Tonty from M. de la Barre	148
Bonhomme, Fort of—Mention.....	150
Brandy—Great quantities in possession of the English; mention	152
Brigantine (The Little)—boat, mentioned in explanatory note	128
Buccaneer (English—Mention	161, 162
Buffaloes—Large numbers in the Mississippi valley; mention	144
Cabins built by the Indians near the Fort St. Louis of the Illinois as a protection against the Iroquois Indians.	147 ceremony attending the entrance to the cabin of the chief of the Cadadoquis	157 finding of a number of cabins near Sturgeon Creek by Tonty and party, which leads them to expect soon to find the savages	137
made of mud by the Taencas Indians; mention.....	140
mention	139
mention of by Tonty as the place where they had left their provisions, near the Poutouatamis village...	136

- Tonty, with the Recollects and three Frenchmen, left in cabin by the Iroquois Indians..... 132
- Caches—(Means places of concealment) of Indian corn of the Illinois Indians. Tonty takes corn from..... 130
- mention 136
- Cadadaquils } (Indian Tribe)—
- Cadadoquils } (Caddoes)—
- Chadoquils } Ambassadors from, murdered by Indians of the Nachitoches, Ouasita and Capiche.... 156
- Ambassadors from, murdered by Indians of the Nachitoches, Ouasita and Capiche... 156
- cabins of, fields, language, occupation, etc.; description by Tonty 157
- customs of 157, 158
- governed by a woman..... 156, 157
- language of 157
- possess horses which they call "cavall"..... 158
- propose to accompany M. Cavalier if he would fight against the Spaniards..... 154
- Tonty and party reach Cadadoquils..... 162
- Tonty arrives at village of Cadadoquils; woman who governs the tribe; demands revenge for the death of her husband 157
- tribe tattooed 153
- two women of the Cadadoquils nation given to Tonty by the Assotoue Indians..... 155
- united with two other villages called Nachitoches and Nasoui situated on the Red River..... 157
- Calumet—Danced by the Illinois Indians..... 131
- danced by the Indians at the village of Cappa..... 139
- danced by the Indians at the village of the Kappas for Tonty, which confirmed the last alliance..... 155
- danced by two Akancas Indians for Tonty at Fort St. Louis of the Illinois 153
- Calumet (Pipe)—Indian chief of the village of Cappa visits La Salle with calumet 139
- symbol of peace, mention by Tonty..... 130
- Tonty offers to carry the Calumet to Indians who appear hostile; signs of friendship offered by Indians 142
- Tonty presents calumet to Tamaraas Indians..... 147
- Tonty refuses to accept the calumet from the Naouadiche tribe 159
- Canal—A great canal which went towards the sea on the right, mentioned by Tonty on their voyage down the Mississippi river 143
- Cane Mats—Mention 140
- Canoe—Tonty embarks in canoe to meet La Salle at Lake Erie 129
- mention 142
- upsetting of Tonty's canoe, loss of provisions, etc.... 130
- Canoes—Burning of the canoes of the Quinipissas Indians by La Salle 146
- Iroquois Indians make Elm Bark canoes..... 134

- made of elm and sent by Tonty to Fort St. Joseph..... 151
 Taencas Indians use wooden canoes..... 142
 Capiche (Indian Tribe) Indian Village—Chiefs of the three nations, Nachitoches Ouasita and Capiche, assemble; Tonty makes present to 156
 Capiche Indian Village—Guides given by the Capiche chief to Tonty to conduct him to the village of Yataches..... 156
 Cappa (Indian Village of the Akancas)—Arrival of La Salle at 139
 Indian chief of, visits La Salle with the calumet..... 139
 Carolina—Mention 149
 Cavellier, Jean—Sulpitian priest, brother of La Salle.
 accompanies La Salle to the Illinois..... 159 asks to go and bury the body of his brother..... 161 assures Tonty of the good health of La Salle; conceals his assassination; is loaned 700 francs by Tonty.. 153
 Cadadoquois Indians propose to accompany Cavellier to fight against the Spaniards..... 154
 Cavellier and Father Anastatius assist Duhault when he is attacked 162 departs for France in the spring of 1687 (1688)..... 153 finds Tonty's abode in Arkansas, goes from thence to the Illinois 163 given a share of the property taken from Duhault and Lanctot 162 life of spared by murderers of La Salle..... 161 Cavellier, John Baptiste, Sieur de—Nephew of La Salle, accompanied him on his last voyage.
 accompanies La Salle to the Illinois..... 159 conceals the death of La Salle from Tonty..... 153
 Cavalier—See La Salle.
 Cavali (Spanish, Caballo, a horse)—Cadadoquois Indians call their horses "cavali"..... 158
 Chacoumas (Indian Tribe)—Chacoumas attack a Chaganon of Tonty's party 155
 Chaganon (Indian Tribe)—A slave of, accompanies Tonty to the village of Naouadiche..... 158
 Chaganon of Tonty's party hunting, is attacked by Chacoumas 155
 Chaganons—Mention 160
 fifty Chaganons join Tonty on his journey to Detroit.. 151 Channels—of the Mississippi river found by La Salle's party to be wide and deep 143 Chawanons or Shawnees (Indian Tribe)—Establish themselves near the Fort St. Louis of the Illinois..... 147
 Illinois, Chawanons (Shawnees) and thirty Frenchmen accompany Tonty to the sea..... 149
 Chicagon Portage—Mention..... 138
 Chicagon (Chicagou) River—Arrival of La Salle's party at, in June 1683 (1682).
 La Salle and party make sledges and drag their baggage over the ice on river..... 138
 Chicaou, Fort of..... 149

- Chickasas (Indian Tribe)—Called flat heads; process of flattening heads of infants described.....138, 139
 La Salle sends one of the Chickasas back to his village with presents..... 139
- Choye (Indian Tribe and Village)—Chiefs of villages of Choye, Nadas and Yataches, make feasts for Tonty; Tonty gives presents to, and asks for guides to the Cadadoquis Indians..... 156
- Christianity—Establishment of among the Illinois Indians hindered by the practice of polygamy among them..... 145
- Christmas Day—Mention..... 129
- Colbert, M. Jean Baptiste—La Salle obtains concessions from the king of France which he desired, through the influence of M. Colbert..... 128
- Conti (Conty) Louis Armand de Bourbon—Prince de Conty, nephew of the great Conde, born 1661, died 1685. patron of La Salle; mention..... 128
- Copper—Found in the river of the Illinois..... 145
- Corn (Indian, Maize)—Chief article of food of Illinois Indians; method of storing, etc.; mention..... 129, 130, 131, 141, 143, 152
- Coroas River—River Coroas found by Tonty..... 163
- Coroas Indian Village—Guide conducts Tonty to..... 162
 Tonty arrives at; savages of the village receive party well and prepare feasts for them.....163, 164
 Tonty sends two of his people and the Frenchman with whom he had quarreled, to Coroa..... 165
- Council—With Iroquois Indians held by Tonty..132, 133, 134, 135
- Country of the Illinois—See Illinois.
- Country of the Sioux—Mention of, in Tonty's Memoir..... 143
- Coutoure (Guillame?)—Brings two Arkansas Indians to Fort St. Louis of the Illinois..... 153 informs Tonty of the death of La Salle..... 153 relates to Tonty the reasons why Cavalier concealed the death of La Salle..... 154
- Crevecoeur, Fort—In the Illinois country; building of, necessary to fortify La Salle's party during the winter..... 131
- Crevier (Gravier?) Rev. Father—Accompanies Tonty to Missilimakinac and afterwards to Fort St. Louis of the Illinois..... 153
- Daloy (Douay?) Father—A Jesuit priest, accompanied Durantaye to Fort St. Louis of the Illinois..... 148
- Deau
 Sieur (Michel Accan)—La Salle sends a Father Recollect (Hennepin) with the Sieur Deau to discover the nation of the Sioux; mention..... 131
- Denonville (Jacques Rene de Brisay, Marquis de Denonville) Monseigneur—Governor of Canada 1685-1689; died 1710. Succeeds M. de la Barre as Governor of Canada; writes Tonty of La Salle's whereabouts 149
- Denonville, M. de la—Tonty sends La Foret to inform Denonville of his movements; he joins Tonty at Fort Les Sables 152

mention	150
Deserters—Effect of the desertion of La Salle's men on the savages; mention.....	131
found at the village of the Naoudiches.....	161
Punished by La Salle	132
put poison in the kettles of La Salle's party.....	131
Tonty sent to look for deserters.....	129, 130
Detroit—Distance from Niagara; mention.....	129
La Salle directs Tonty to meet him at.....	129
Sieur de la Foret awaits the coming of Tonty at.....	151
Dog Feast (Festin de Chien)—Tonty gives a dog feast to the savages	151
Dogs—Eaten by La Salle's party.....	163
Douay, Father Anastatius (See Anastatius).
Duhaut (Duhaut) M. M.—A member of La Salle's last expe- dition; assassin of La Salle; himself killed by Heins....	161, 162
.....	159
accompanies La Salle to the Illinois country.....	160
Duhault and Lanctot determine to kill La Salle.....	161, 162
English buccaneer Heins, or "English Jem," avenges death of La Salle	162
Father Anastatius and M. Cavellier assist Duhault when shot	162
Servant of, (L'Archeveque); mention.....	160
Du Lhut, Du Lac, Du Lud, Du Lut, Du Luth, Daniel Greysol- lon, Cousin of Tonty—Born St. Germain-en-Laye, France; died 1710.
accompanies Tonty to the Illinois.....	151
returns to Detroit.....	153
sent by Tonty to command at the Fort St. Louis of the Illinois	154 Durantaye, Oliver Morel de la—Born Notre Dame du Gaure, Nantes; Commandant at Michilimackinac 1683 to 1685; died 1727.
arrives at Fort St. Louis of the Illinois accompanied by Father Daloy.....	148
commanded at Fort of Chicago	149
Governor of Mississimackinac, mention.....	148
joins Tonty on his journey to the Illinois.....	151
Tonty applies to, for aid.....	148
English Buccaneer—Heins, or English Jem. kills Duhault and Lanctot	161, 162 takes possession of the property seized by Duhault and Lanctot, divides it with M. Cavellier, and re- mains at the village of the Naoudiches.....	162
Englishmen—Taken prisoners by Tonty.....	151
Erie Lake—La Salle directs Tonty to await him at.....	129
mention	151
Falconer, Thomas—Translation of Tonty's Memoir 1693; foot note	128
Falls of Niagara—Mention.....	129
Falls of St. Mary—Situated where Lake Superior discharges itself into Lake Huron; mention	129

Festin de Chien (Dog Feast)—Given by Tonty to the savages	151
Fete Dieu—Mention	137
"Field (The) of the Spirit"—Clearing made by the Taencas Indians; ceremonies connected with it	141 Forest (Foret) Francois Daupin (Sieur de la—One of La Salle's lieutenants; succeeded La Mothe as commandant at Detroit 1710; died at that post 1714.
accompanies La Salle to France	148
arrives with La Salle at Michilimackinac	137
awaits the coming of Tonty at Detroit	151
leaves Fort Frontenac with thirty Frenchmen	151
leaves Fort St. Louis of the Illinois for Fort Frontenac	148
M. de la Barre directed to deliver up M. de la Foret lands belonging to the Sieur de La Salle	148 sent by Tonty to inform M. Denonville of his movements	152
Tonty expects M. de la Foret to take command of the Fort St. Louis of the Illinois	154 visits the Fort of St. Louis of the Illinois	153
Forts—Building of one at Niagara, by Tonty	151, 152
Built at the marsh of Fort Les Sables by Tonty	152
one built by La Salle's party on the Mississippi river	139
Fort Crevecoeur—Building of, necessary to fortify La Salle's party during the winter; mention	131
La Salle leaves Fort Crevecoeur to go to Fort Frontenac	131
Tonty given the command at Fort Crevecoeur	131
Fort Detroit—Tonty's party arrive at	151
Fort Frontenac (Now Kingston, Canada)—Arrival of La Salle's party at	128
La Salle and Tonty embark for Fort Frontenac	137
La Salle determines to return to Fort Frontenac over the ice	129-131
La Salle's journey to, mentioned by Tonty	132
mention	148, 152
Fort Les Sables—Denonville joins Tonty at	152
Fort of Bonhomme—Bellefontaine left in command of	151
Fort of Chicaou—Tonty arrives at, where M. de la Durantaye commanded	149
mention	150
Fort of Iroquois—Building of one in Iroquois village	133
Illinois Indians deceived by the Iroquois Indians	134
Fort Prudhomme—La Salle falls ill at	146
why so named	138
Fort St. Josephs—On Lake Michigan at the mouth of St. Joseph's river in Berrien county, Michigan; mention	151
Tonty sends canoe to give the Sieur Du'ud, commander, the news of his arrival	151
Fort St. Louis of the Illinois—Arrival of Tonty at; departs for the sea	149 attacked by the Iroquois Indians, who are repulsed	148 built by Tonty under instructions from La Salle	147
cabins built by the Indian tribes near, as a protection against the Iroquois	147

distance from Mississippi River.....	145
Father Crevier accompanies Tonty to Missilimakinac and afterwards to Fort St. Louis.....	153
La Salle leaves for France, Tonty placed in command of	147
Tonty leaves the Sieur Dulud in command of.....	154
Tonty returns to, accompanied by his cousin, Dulud...	153
Tonty to command at	148
visit of M. de la Foret to, mention.....	153.
France, Arms of—Erected on the right bank of the Mississippi River by La Salle.....	143
France—Mention	144
Frenchman—With Tonty loses bag containing powder.....	158
Frenchmen—Determine to leave La Salle's party.....	130 fight with the Illinois Indians against the Iroquois. 132, 133 make a settlement on the River Arkansas; build a house	150 men sent by Tonty to Coroa.....	155
mention	129, 157
two Frenchmen sent as hostages by La Salle to the village of Cappa	139
Fortenac, Fort—La Salle's journey to.....	132
Frontenac, M. de—Iroquois Indians in council send message to Frontenac	135
Frontenac, Lake—Deserters punished by La Salle at.....	132
Gabriel, Father—Gabriel de la Ribourde, Jesuit, familiarly called Father Gabriel. See Ribourde.
joy at Tonty's deliverance from the Iroquois Indians..	133
killed by Kikapou Indians	135
mention of in Tonty's Memoir.....	137
Gardeur, Charles le—See Tilly.
Garlick (Wild)—Used as food by Tonty.....	136
Gourds—Frozen gourds and corn found by Tonty at the vil- lage of the Poutouatamies; mention	136
Governor of New France—Mention.....	132, 134, 151
Great River (Mississippi)—Akansas Indian villages situated on; La Salle erected the arms of the king there.....	139
distance from Chicagou River, 140 leagues	138
Great River (Missouri)—Mention in Tonty's Memoir of a great river coming from the west into the Mississippi..	138
Gregory, Major—Englishmen commanded by Major Gregory taken prisoner by Tonty	151
Griffin or Griffon (La Salle's Vessel)—Building of.....	129
voyage in by Tonty and party as far as Michilimakinac.	129
Guide—Procured by Tonty and party to conduct them to the village of the Coroas.....	162
Guides—Mention	139, 156, 159
Gulf of Mexico—A port for the protection of vessels in, sug- gested by Tonty in Memoir.....	164
Hiens, or English Jem—Kills Duhault; was himself killed in Texas, perhaps by Ruter (Parkman).
mention	161, 162
Ho'y Week—Tonty reaches the sea in holy week.....	149
Horses—Given to Tonty by the Naouadiches.....	159

Naoudiches take advantage of war with Spaniards to carry off horses	159 owned by Cadadoquis, called by them "cavali"	158 used by southern tribes for war and hunting	162, 163
Hostages—Mention	133, 139
Hourens or Hurons (Indian Tribe)—Give warning to Tonty of approach of Iroquois	153
mention	152
Huron Lake—Mention	129
Englishmen taken by Durantaye on, etc.	151
Huron Slaves—Taken by the Iroquois	151
Illinois Country—Climate of the Illinois country compared to that of France	145
description of, its climate, resources, etc.	145
Jean Caveller, brother of La Salle, goes from Arkansas to the Illinois	162
La Salle intends to visit; mention	129
La Salle resolves to go to the country of the Illinois, accompanied by Father Anastatius; M. Caveller, his brother; M. Caveller, his nephew; M. Moranget, a relative; Duhault, Lanctot and others.	159
Illinois (Indian Tribe)—Alarmed by Iroquois	132
ask advice of Tonty as to Iroquois' motives	134
defeated by the Miamis	149
enemies of La Salle report that he was a friend to the Iroquois	131
idleness of	145
Illinois and Chawanons (Shawnees) Indians and Frenchmen accompany Tonty to the sea	149
Illinois Indian accompanies Tonty to the Iroquois	132
Illinois Indians given presents by Iroquois; significance ..	134
Illinois Indians mistake La Salle's party for Iroquois Indians; recognize party; dance calumet of peace ..	131
Iroquois Indians threaten to eat Illinois Indians	135 numbers of Illinois Indians accompany Tonty to Detroit and to Niagara	151
one of the tribe of the Illinois Indians accompanies Tonty to the Iroquois fort; mention	134
peace concluded with	133, 134
prevent disaster to Tonty from the Tamaraas	147
suspect Tonty of intention to betray them	132
religion; Illinois Indians have no form of worship	145
Tonty opens caches of the Illinois Indians and procures corn	130
Tonty reconciles the Miamis and Illinois Indians; mention	149
Tonty sent by Iroquois Indians to deliver message to Illinois Indians	133
Tonty urged by the Iroquois to return to the Illinois Indians and make treaty of peace	133
under protection of France; mention	132
urged by Tonty to harass the Iroquois	145
visit the fort of the Iroquois	134

Illinois (Indian Village)—Arrival of La Salle and party at, where finding navigation open, they go on to the River Mississippi	138
arrival of Tonty in the country of the Illinois.....	155
Poutouatamis, an Illinois Indian village; mention.....	130
presents given and received by La Salle at.....	130
Illinois Lake—Description of.....	145
La Salle starts for; mention.....	129
Illinois River—Portage between the River Chicago and that of the Illinois; mention	138
Tonty arrives at the source of the Illinois River.....	130
Indian Corn—Festivities connected with the harvesting of Indian corn by the Taencas Indians; customs of other villages	141
gathered twice a year by the southern savages.....	143
La Salle sends to procure Indian corn at Isonnoutouan	129
mention	130, 131, 141, 143
Tonty's party cut down corn of four villages.....	152
Indian Tribes—Mentioned in Tonty's Memoir:
Abenakis	135
Akansas (Arkansas)	130, 146, 153, 155
Assotoue	155
Cadadoquis	154, 155, 156, 158, 162
Capiche	156
Cappa	139
Chacoumas	155
Chadadoquis	157
Chaganon	154, 155, 158, 159, 160, 163
Chawanons (Shawnees)	147, 149, 151
Chikasas	138, 139
Choye	156
Coroas	155, 162, 163
Hourens (Hurons)	151, 152, 153
Illinois	130, 131, 132, 133, 134, 135, 147, 149, 151
Iroquois	129, 131, 132, 133, 134, 135, 138, 145, 146, 147, 148, 150, 151, 152, 154
Isonnoutouan	133
Kappas	155
Kikapous	135
Loups (Wolf)	151
Miamis	147, 149, 151
Nachitoches	156
Nadas	156
Naouadiche	158, 159, 161, 162
Naovediche	157
Nasoui	157
Natches	142, 146
Nicondiche	154
Onnoutagues	133
Osages	155
Ostony	139
Ottawas	151
Ouasita	156

Oumas	150
Outamas	151
Poutouatamis	136, 137, 152
Quanouattins	158, 161
Quanouatinons	158, 161
Quinipissas	145, 146
Taencas	142, 146, 155, 156
Tamaraas	147
Tongenga	155
Torremans	155
Yataches	156
Indian Villages—Mentioned in Tonty's Memoir:
Akancas (Arkansas)	139, 146, 150
Cadadoquils	154, 155, 156, 162
Capiche	156
Cappa	139
Chadadoquils	157
Chikasas	138
Choye	156
Coroas	155, 162, 163
Illinois	130, 155
Isonnoutouan	129
Kappas	155
Nachitoches	156, 157
Nadas	156
Naodiche	154
Naouadiche	158, 159, 161, 162
Naovediche	157
Nasoul	157
Natches	142, 143, 146, 155, 156
Nicondiche	154
Osotony	139
Ouasita	156
Oumas	150
Poutouatamis	129, 130, 136
Quinipissas	143, 145, 150
Taencas	140, 146, 155, 156
Tamaraas	147
Tamarous	138
Tangibaoes	143
Tezagon	139
Tongenga	155
Torremans	155
Toyengan	139
Yataches	156
Iron Arrow Heads—Mention	158
Iroquois (Country of)—Mention	145
Iroquois Indians alarm Illinois Indians	132 attack Fort St. Louis of the Illinois; repulsed	148 attack and wound Tonty	132
build a fort at their village	133
cabins built near the Fort St. Louis of the Illinois as a protection against the Iroquois	147

- Denonville directs Tonty to do nothing against the Iroquois 154
 drive Tonty from council 135 encounter with Illinois Indians 132, 133 give presents to the Illinois tribes 134 give presents to Tonty 135 hold council with Tonty and Father Gabrie..... 134-135 Illinois Indians mistake La Salle's party for Iroquois.. 131 make a fort in village, leave Tonty and Fathers Ribourde and Membre in cabin near 133
 mention 131, 133, 134, 150, 151
 peace concluded with the Illinois Indians 134 sends beavers to Frontenac as a message of good will.. 135 Tonty is urged by them to induce Illinois Indians to make treaty of peace 133 visited by Tonty with presents, to secure peace treaty for Illinois Indians 132, 133, 134, 135
 Iroquois Slave—Gives information of the approach of Tonty. 152
 Tonty proposes to have Iroquois slave put to death.... 152 Islands (West India)—Owned by France; the Mississippi valley might supply the West India Islands with lumber, vegetables, grain, etc. 164
 Isonnoutouan—Indian village; mention 129
 Isontoutouan (Indian Tribe)—Tegantouki, chief of, desires to have Tonty burned 133
 Jongleurs (Priests)—Mention 141
 Kappas (Indian Village)—Tonty and party well received at;
 calumet danced 155
 Kikapous (Indian Tribe)—Capture and kill Father Gabriel.. 135
 King of France—Arms of erected by La Salle at the villages of the Akancas Indians 139
 Illinois Indians under the protection of 132
 Tonty and party encamp in the place on the Mississippi river where La Salle had erected the arms of the King of France; Tonty erects them on a higher situation 150
 Kingston, Canada (Fort Frontenac)—Mention in note..... 128
 La Barre—See Barre.
 La Forest }
 La Foret } See Foret.
 Lake Erie—Mention 129, 151
 Lake Frontenac (Lake Ontario)—Arrival of La Salle at.... 128 length of lake; mention 128
 mention 129, 132, 137
 Lake Huron—Mention 129
 Englishmen taken by Durantaye at 151
 Lake Illinois—La Salle sails for 129
 Tonty and Father Zenoble Membre reach 136
 Lake Ontario—Mention in explanatory note 128
 Lake Superior—Mention 129
 Lakes Mentioned in Tonty's Memoir—Lake Erie 129, 151
 Frontenac Lake (Ontario) 128, 129, 132, 137
 Huron Lake 129, 151

Illinois Lake	129, 136
Superior Lake	129
Lancetot (Liotot)—Surgeon in La Salle's party; one of the murderers of La Salle, in 1687.
accompanies La Salle to the Illinois	159
anger against La Salle	160
brother of, compelled by La Salle to leave party and return, killed by savages.....	160
Duhault and Lancetot determine to kill La Salle.....	160
killed by Ruter	162
massacre of Moranget and party	160
L'Archeveque, Jean—Servant of Duhaut; mention.....	160
La Salle, Rene Robert sieur de—Accompanied by Father Anastatius goes in search of Moranget and party; manner of death of.....	160
accompanied by Tonty and Father Zenoble, embarks for Fort Frontenac	138 account of the misfortunes, and death of La Salle as given by Tonty in his Memoir.....	159 arms of the King of France erected by La Salle on the right bank of the Mississippi River.....	143 arrival at Michilimakinac with M. Forest, makes prepa- rations to continue voyage.....	137 arrival at Natchez Indian village, makes presents to..	146 assassination of La Salle concealed from Tonty; as- sured by M. Caveller, La Salle's nephew, that he was alive	153 begins the building of a boat to descend the river.....	131
calumet danced before La Salle by Indians of the vil- lage of Cappa	139
calumet danced by the Illinois Indians before La Salle.	131
camp of La Salle; mention.....	159
character of	161
confidence in Tonty	128
continues his voyage towards the Miamis River.....	130
death of La Salle	153
departs for France.....	147
deserters put poison in the kettles used by La Salle; saved by an antidote.....	131
desertion of some of his men.....	132
determines to go to Fort Frontenac.....	129, 131
dispatches his boat back to Niagara to bring things needed at the post to be erected at the Miamis.....	130
effect of the desertion of La Salle's men on the savages	131 enemies of La Salle spread report among the Illinois that he was a friend to the Iroquois; effect of.....	131
English buccaneer (Helms, or English Jem) kills the assassin of La Salle.....	161, 162 estimate of his character, by Tonty.....	161 ill at Fort Prudhomme, sends Tonty on to Missilimaki- nac to arrange his affairs.....	146
inspects channels at mouth of Mississippi.....	143

instructs men to have Tonty go to the old village (Starved Rock)) to visit a high rock and build a strong fort there.....	131, 132
leaves Fort Crevecoeur	131
instructs Tonty to build the Fort St. Louis of the Illinois	147
joins Tonty at the Miamis River	137
joins Tonty with boats, up the rapids.....	129
makes presents to the Taencas chiefs	142 meeting of La Salle with the men whom he had sent to Michilimakinac	131
meets with Chevallier de Bogis.....	147
obtains while at court a company for Tonty, sail's by way of the islands to find the mouth of the Mississippi River	148 obtains permission he desires of the King of France through the favor of M. Colbert.....	128
La Salle arrives at Quebec.....	128
La Salle arrives at the village of the Illinois; navigation open, they enter the Mississippi River.....	138
La Salle visits Indians of the villages of Toriman and Toyengan (Akancas Indians).....	139
recovers from illness, returns to Fort St. Louis of the Illinois	147
Rochelle, France, La Salle's party sets sail from.....	128
sails for the Lake Illinois; mention.....	129
sends to procure Indian corn at Isonnoutouan.....	129
sends present to the Chikasas Indians.....	139 sends the Sieur Deau (Michel Accan) with a Recollect (Hennepin) to discover the nation of the Sioux..	131
waits for deserters at Lake Frontenac.....	132
La Toulssant—Mention.....	136
Lake Erie—Mention	151
Loups (Wolf Tribe Indians)—Four Loups join Tonty on his journey to Detroit and to Niagara, etc.....	151
Luke—La Salle's pilot; mention	129
Maheouala—A village of the Tangiabos, lately destroyed....	143
Manatte—Mention	149, 150
Marsh of Fort Les Sables—Monseigneur expects to arrive at the Marsh	152 distance from Sonnontouans	152
Membre, Father Zenoble—Accompanies La Salle to Fort Frontenac	137
accompanies Tonty to secure peace from the Illinois Indians for the Iroquois.....	134
at council with Iroquois Indians.....	135
joy at meeting Tonty after Tonty's escape from the Iroquois	133
goes to the Jesuits at the Bay.....	137
Memoir of Henry de Tonty—Reporting to Count de Poncher-train his observations on the expedition commanded by La Salle	128-164
Mexico—Mention	149

Mexico, Gulf of (The Sea)—	143, 149
Miamis (Indian Tribe)—Establish themselves near the Fort
St. Louis of the Illinois	147
defeat the Illinois Indians	149 guide of, and Frenchmen accompanies Tonty to Detroit and Niagara, where they build a fort	151
Miamis River—La Salle continues his voyage towards	130
La Salle joins Tonty at	138
Tonty collects the French who are at the Miamis River and builds the Fort St. Louis of the Illinois	147
Tonty returns with deserters	130
Michilimakinac (Missilimakinac)—Arrival of La Salle at	137, 147 arrival of Tonty at; La Salle arrives with M. Forest	137
Father Crevier accompanies Tonty to, afterwards to
Fort St. Louis of the Illinois	153
La Salle, ill at Fort Prudhomme, sends Tonty on to	146
La Salle and party rest there	129
meeting of La Salle with men whom he had sent to obtain news of his boat	131
Englishmen commanded by Major Gregory taken prisoners at	151
Tonty arrives at	129
Tonty leaves for	137
Mines—Lead mines in the Mississippi valley; mention	144
Mississippi River (Great River)—Akanas (Arkansas) Indian villages on	139 arms of the King of France erected on the right bank of, by La Salle	143 building of a fort on the Mississippi River by La Salle	139 channels of the Mississippi River inspected by La Salle	144
description of, in Tonty's Memoir	143, 144
distance from Chicagon River	138
Indian village of Tamarous, distance from	138
La Salle arrives at the Mississippi	138
La Salle sails by way of the islands to find the mouth of the Mississippi River	148
length of the river	143, 144
mention	159
mention of a great river from the west coming into the Mississippi (Missouri)	133
navigable as far as the village of Natches, and from the Ouabach to the sea	144
Tonty reaches the Mississippi River	138
Mississippi Valley—Described	143
resources of	164
Montreal—Mention	148
Tonty goes to	150
Moranget	} nephew of La Salle.
Morange
Moranger
Morganet
mention	159
massacre of Moranget, by Lanctot and others	160

Mexico—Mention of	159
Mulberry Trees—Mention	140
Murderers of La Salle (Duhault and Lanctot)—Seize the baggage of La Salle and continue their journey.....	161
Music—Of the tambour; mention.....	142
Nachitoches (Indian Tribe)—Chiefs of the three nations, Nachitoches, Ouasita and Capiche, assemble at Nachitoches	156
Tonty makes present to	156
united with the Chadadoquis and Nasoui; speak the same language	157
Nachitoches Village—Guides given by the chief of, to Tonty to conduct him to Yataches.....	156
Nadas (Indian Village)—Chiefs of villages of Choye, Nadas and Yataches make feasts for Tonty	156
Naodiches (Indian Village)—Tonty resolves to go to Naodiche carry off horses from Spaniards	159
Naoudiches (Indian Tribe)—Grieved at death of La Salle....	161
mention	158
Naoudiches (Indian Village)—Deserters from La Salle's party found at	161
mention	159
Naovediche (Indian Village)—Tonty hopes to find his Frenchmen there	157
Nasoui (Indian Tribe)—United with the Chadadoquis and Nachitoches tribe, villages situated on the Red River, speak the same language, etc.....	157
Natches (Indian Tribe)—Brother of great chief visits La Salle	142 described	142
killings of two of Tonty's party by.....	155
manners and customs the same as the Taencas Indians	142
Natches (Indian Village)—Arrival of La Salle at.....	146
Mississippi River only navigable (for large vessels) as far as	143
chief begs La Salle to leave village.....	146
Necklace—Mention	133
Necklace, of Pearls—Worn by the wife of the Taencas chief..	141
Necklaces—Mention	132, 134
New France—Illinois Indians under the protection of.....	132
Niagara Falls—Fort made below the portage by Tonty.....	151
Detroit, distance from Niagara.....	129
mention	129
Tonty left in command at Niagara.....	129
Nicondiche—Coutoure sent to the French at, for information, is wrecked	154
North America—Mention	128
Oil—Used by Iroquois Indians as ointment.....	135
Onnontagues (Indian Tribe)—Agoasto, chief of the Onnontagues, secures the liberty of Tonty.....	133
Ontario Lake (Lake Frontenac)—Mention	128
Tonty crosses two lakes larger than Lake Frontenac..	129
Osages (Indian Tribe)—Illinois Indians make war upon....	155

- woman governing the Cadadoquis Indians demands revenge for the death of her husband, who had been killed by the Osages 157
- Ostony (Indian Village of the Akancas)—Mention of in Tonty's Memoir 139
- Ottawas (Indian Tribe)—Join Tonty..... 152
- Ottawas conduct Tonty to Poutouatamis..... 137
- Ouabache } River—Distance from the Illinois River..... 138
- Ouabash }
length of the river; mention 138
mention 138, 144, 146, 147
- Ouasita (Indian Tribe)—Chiefs of Nachitoches, Ouasita and Capiche assemble at the village of the Nachitoches.... 156
- Ouasita (Indian Village)—Guides given by the chief of the village to Tonty to conduct him to Yataches..... 156
- Outawa (Outawas or Ottawas) Slaves—Taken by the Iroquois 151
- Oumas (Indian Tribe)—Bravest savages of the Mississippi River 150
- Oysters—Mention 149
- Paris, France—Climate of the Illinois compared to that of Paris 145
- Parre Fleches (Rock Moss)—One of Tonty's men becomes ill from eating 137
- Pearls—In temple of the Taencas Indians..... 141
- necklace of pearls worn by the wife of the Taencas chief 141
- possibility of finding pearls in the Mississippi River... 164
- Pilot (The) Luke—One of La Salle's boats lost through the obstinacy of 129
- Pistols—Mention 160
- Poison—Attempt to poison La Salle and party by dissatisfied persons of the party 131
- Polygamy—Practiced by the Illinois Indian tribes..... 145
- Ponchertrain, Louis Pheypeaux, Count de—Chancellor of France, successor of Seignelay as Minister of the Marine, 1690. Born 1643, died 1727.
- Tonty's Memoir of 1693 addressed to; mention in explanatory foot note 128
- Porpoise—Mention 149
- Port (French)—On the Gulf of Mexico; importance of; mention 164
- Post—Mention 130
- Portage—Of Niagara; mention 151
- Captain Vallennes and fifty men stay at portage..... 153
- Chicagon portage; mention..... 138
- leading to the Bay of the Puans; mention..... 136
- mention 130
- Potatoes—La Salle's party subsist on potatoes when provisions fail 145
- Poutouatamies (Indian Tribe)—Join Tonty's party..... 152
- Ottawa savages conduct Tonty to Poutoutamies..... 137
- Poutouatamis (Indian Village)—An Illinois Indian village; mention 130 trail leading to the Poutouatamis village discovered by Tonty	136

Tonty, wrecked near the Poutouatamis village.....	136
Priests—Of the Cadadoquis Indians; mention.....	157
of the Taencas Indians; mention.....	141
Prudhomme, Peter—Member of La Salle's party loses his way
while hunting, fort named for him.....	139
Prudhomme Fort—La Salle ill at	146
Puans, Bay of—Portage at	136
Quanoouatinos (Indian Tribe)—Murderers of La Salle join with the Naoudiches in making war against.....	161
Quanouatins Indians—Description and anecdote of.....	158, 159
Quebec—Arrival of La Salle at, recruits party there.....	128
Quinipissas { (Indian Tribe)—Arrival of Tonty's party at....	150
Quinipissas {
Quinipissas (Indian Tribe)—Burning of the canoes of the Quinipissas by La Salle	146
Quinipissas (The Bayagoulas and the Mongoulatchas—Charlevoix)—Express sorrow for former bad treatment of the French	150
Indians of fly their arrows at La Salle.....	143
La Salle's party attacked by Indians.....	146
mention	145
village also called Bayagoulis; mention	150 women of La Salle's party sent to the village of the
Quinipissas	145, 146
Recollect Father (Hennepin)—Mention	131
remains with Tonty at Niagara; mention.....	129
at Fort St. Louis	132
Red River—Named because of the deposit of sand which makes the water red.....	158
villages of, the Chadadoquis, Nasoui and Natchitoches situated on the Red River.....	157
Religion among different nations—Mention.....	141, 145, 157
Renaudot, l'Abbe—A particular friend of La Salle, Tonty's Memoir, 1693, addressed to, mention in explanatory
foot note	128
Ribourde, Father Gabriel de la—Joy on meeting Tonty on his deliverance from the Iroquois	133
death of; killed by Kikapou Indians	135
meets Tonty and accompanies him to the Illinois.....	133
Rivers mentioned by Tonty in Memoir—Arkansas River.....	150
Chicagou River	138, 147
Coroas River	163
Great River (Mississippi)	139
Illinois River	130, 131, 132, 143, 145
Miamis River	130, 138, 147
Mississippi River
.....131, 138, 143, 144, 148, 149, 150, 159, 163, 164
Ouabache River	138, 144, 146
Red River	157, 158
St. Lawrence River	128
Taencas Rivers	155

Rochelle, France—La Salle's party set sail from	128
Rock Moss (Parre Fleche)—One of Tonty's men ill from eating	137
Ruter—A Breton sailor in La Salle's party kills Liotot...	161, 162
St. Andrews Day (Oct. 30, 1685)—Mention.....	149
St. John's Day (June 24)—Mention	150
St. Lawrence River—La Salle's party ascends as far as Fort Frontenac	128
St. Louis of the Illinois, Fort of—Built by Tonty under instructions from La Salle as a defense against the Iroquois Indians, March, 1683.....	147 see Fort St. Louis of the Illinois.
St. Martin's Day (Nov. 11)—Mention	136
Salt—Indian Chiefs of the villages of Nachitoches, Ouasita and Capiche traffic in salt	156
Sea—Arrival of La Salle's party at the sea on April 7th; mention	143
Tonty reaches the sea	149
Seigneurial, M. de—La Salle obtains permission he asked of the king, through the favor of M. de Seignelai.....	128
Servant of Duhaute (L'Archeveque)—Mention	160
Shoes—made for Tonty and party from Father Gabriel's cloak	137
Sicily—Reference to Sicily by Tonty, as the place where his hand was lost	128
Silk—The making of silk might be a valuable industry in the Mississippi valley	144
Silver Ecu—Mention	150
Sioux (Indian Tribe)—La Salle sends the Sieur Deau with a Father Recollect to discover the nations of the Sioux.	131
Slave—Iroquois slave, Tonty propose to have put to death...	152
Slaves—Cadadoquis Indians propose to accompany M. Cavellier to fight against the Spaniards.....	154
Huron and Outawas slaves, mention	151
Indians make slaves of captives.....	151
Sonnontouans—Distance of, from the Marsh of Fort Les Sables	152
Spain—Denonville informed Tonty that war had been declared against Spain	154
Spanish Horses—Tonty receives Spanish horses.....	159
Starved Rock—On Illinois river near Ottawa, Illinois, mention in explanatory note	132
fort built there by Tonty (Fort St. Louis of the Illinois)	132
Sturgeon Creek—Mention	136, 137
finding of a number of cabins near, by Tonty.....	137
Sun—Adoration of the sun by southern Indians.....	145
adoration paid the sun by the Taencas Indians	140
Taencas (Indian Tribe)—Cabins of, chief of, great deference paid to, temple of, forms of worship, etc.....	140, 141
guides given by the Akanas Indians to La Salle to conduct party to the Taencas Indians.....	139
mention	146
tribal characteristics	139, 140, 141, 142

Tonty makes presents to the Nachitoches, Ouasita and Capiche Indians in the name of the Taencas.....	156
Taencas—Village of described	139, 140
Tamaraas (Indian Tribe)—Chiefs of hold council and mistake Tonty's party for Iroquois, resolve to burn them; Illinois Indians prevent it.....	147
Tamarous (Indian Village)—Distance from the Mississippi River	138
Tambour—Musical instrument used by southern Indians; mention	139, 141
Tangibaos (Indian Village)—Destruction of.....	143
Tegantouki—Chief of the Isontoutouan tribe desires to have Tonty burned	133
Temple—Description of temple of the Taencas Indians.....	140, 141
Tezagon (Village of)—Tonty awaits La Salle at.....	138
Tilly, Sieur Beauvis de (Charles le Gardeur, sieur de Tilly)—Joins Tonty on his journey.....	151
Tongenga (Indian Tribe and Village)—Desire to entertain Tonty as the Kappas had done.....	155
Tonti, Henri } Italian explorer and soldier in French service; Tonty, Henry } La Salle's lieutenant, commandant in the Illinois; born Ita'y, probably Naples, 1650; died at Fort St. Louis, Mobile, 1704.
accompanied by Father Crevier goes to Missilimakinac and to Fort St. Louis of the Illinois.....	153 accompanied by Fathers Membre and Ribourde, goes to the Illinois Indians.....	133 accompanied by Frenchmen and five Illinois and Chawanons (Shawnees) Indians, departs for the sea....	149 arrival of Tonty and party at the Mississippi River....	163 arrival of Tonty at the Quinipissus village, alliance made with the Indians.....	150 arrival of Tonty at the village of Coroas, finds Frenchmen there; savages of the village prepare feasts for them, etc.	163, 164
arrives at Fort Detroit.....	151
arrives at Fort St. Louis of the Illinois.....	149 assassination of La Salle concealed from Tonty.....	153
assembles at the Miamis river some Frenchmen and savages for the voyage of discovery.....	138
awaits the arrival of La Salle at the village of Tezagon.....	138 brings orders to M. le Chevalier de Bogis retiring him from command at Fort St. Louis of the Illinois..	148 builds the Fort of St. Louis of the Illinois by order of La Salle, as a defense against the Iroquois.....	147
buys boat at the village of Torremans.....	155
Chaganon Indian slave accompanies Tonty to the village of the Naouadiche	158
Coutoure relates to Tonty the reasons why M. Cavellier concealed the death of La Salle.....	154 describes the beauties of the countries he has passed through; deplors the loss of his notes.....	164

description of the Akancas (Arkansas) Indians, country, climate, etc	139 deserted by his men.....	132, 157
despatches a canoe to Durantaye, governor of Mississippimakinac, for assistance against the attack of the Iroquois on Fort St. Louis of the Illinois.....	143
devotion to La Salle.....	128
embarks in a canoe to meet La Salle at Lake Erie....	129
encamps on the spot where La Salle had erected the arms of France; erects them higher up.....	150
enters service of La Salle	128
feasts given by the chiefs of the villages of Choye, Nadas and Yataches to Tonty.....	156
Finds Iroquois Indians at the Ouabache river.....	146, 147
Frenchmen abandon Tonty	157
given the command of Fort Crevecoeur	131
given two women of the tribe of the Cadadoquis nation by the Assoutoue Indians.....	155
gives dog feast (Festln de Chien).....	151
goes in search of La Salle	149
hand lost in French service at Sicily; mention.....	128
his early military life, joins La Salle, is his confident, trusted aid and narrator of his projects in New France	128
Illness of, mention.....	136, 164
in command at Niagara	129
instructed by M. de Denonville to let the savages do as they liked, and do nothing against the Iroquois....	154
Iroquois Indians call Tonty and Father Zenoble to council	135
Iroquois Indians drive Tonty from council.....	135
Iroquois Indians give one of their own nation to Tonty as hostage to secure peace with Illinois Indians....	133
Iroquois Indian tribe divided in opinion as to disposition to make of Tonty	133
kicks aside presents of Iroquois because they threaten to make war on the Illinois Indians.....	135
La Salle directs Tonty to await him at Lake Erie....	129
La Salle writes Tonty to receive Chevalier de Bogis well	147
leaves ammunition in a small box with the wife of the chief of the Cadadoquis	158
leaves Bellefontaine in command of Fort Bonhomme..	151
loans seven hundred francs to M. Cavelier, brother of La Salle	153
memoir of Henry de Tonty, 1693.....	128-164
mention	127, 130, 131, 133, 134, 136, 142, 150, 152, 154, 155, 156, 159, 163, 164
Michillimakinac, leaves for	137, 149
ordered by La Salle to collect the French who were on the River Miamis.....	147
presents the caumet to Tamaraas Indians.....	147
reconciles the Miamis and Illinois Indians.....	149 resolves to go to Naodiche to execute what M. Cavelier had undertaken, and to bring back La Salle's men..	154

sends Coutoure to obtain information of the French in Nicondiche, relative to the Spaniards.....	154 sends news of his arrival at Detroit to the Sieur Dulud, commander of Fort St. Joseph.....	151 sent by La Salle to arrange his affairs at Missilimakinac	146 sent by La Salle to the Falls of St. Mary to look for men who had deserted	129
Tegantouki, chief of the Isontoutouan, desires to have Tonty burned	133
Torremans tribe of Indians desire to entertain Tonty...	155
urges the Illinois Indians to harass the Iroquois....	145 visits the Indian village of the Oumas; makes a liance with them	150
wounded by Iroquois Indians.....	132
Toriman (Indian Village of the Akancas)—Reception of La Salle by Indians of	139
Torremans (Indian Tribe and Village)—Tonty buys two boats at village of	155
Toyengan (Indian Village of the Akancas)—Distance from Cappa	139
reception of La Salle and party by Indians of	139
Turkeys—Mention	162
Valiennes, Captain—Sent with fifty men to support Tonty...	153
Venison—Mention	162
Wheat—Mention	164
Woman—Governs the nation of Cadadoquis, demands revenge for the death of her husband.....	157
Women—Of La Salle's party sent with merchandise to seek an alliance and provisions from the Quinipissas....	145, 146
Wild Garlick—Mention	136
Yataches (Indian Village)—Chiefs of villages of Choye, Nadas and Yataches make feasts for Tonty.....	156
guides given to Tonty by Indian chiefs of the villages of Nachitoches, Ouasita and Capiche, to conduct him to Yataches	156
Zenoble, Father (see Membre)—Accompanies La Salle to Fort Frontenac	137
at council with Iroquois Indians	134, 135
leaves Tonty to pass winter with Jesuits at Michilimakinac	137
grieved at death of Father Gabriel	135

INDEX TO THE "AUBRY MANUSCRIPT AND EXPLANATORY NOTES—PP. 165-170.

-
- Abadie }
 Abbadie } St. Germain d'.....165, 166
 Albadie }
- Albach, James R.—"Anna's of the West," edition of 1858;
 sketch of Aubry collated from, mention in foot note....166
- Annals of the West—Edited by James R. Albach, mention.... 166
- American Colonist—An English prisoner, taken by Aubry during his journey, informs him of the designs of the English 168
- Argenson (Marc Pierre) Count d'—Born France, 1696, died, 1764; French secretary war department under Louis XV; gives Aubry the brevet of captain in the king's army of Louisiana166, 167
- Ascension, Fort of—Aubry receives orders from M. de Mccarty to leave 169
 completed on the 20th June (1757); named on account of its being on that day that the first stake was driven at the fort 168
- Fort Massiac first called Fort Ascension by Aubry, mention in explanatory notes..... 165
 why so called 165
- Aubry, Charles Phillipe—An officer in the French service in Louisiana and Illinois, author of "The Aubry Manuscript," (translation of) 165-170 account of the services of Mr. Aubry, captain of infantry in the army of the king in Louisiana..... 166-170 arrives at the post of the Illinois.....167, 169 arrives safe in Louisiana 167 arrives at Fort Du Quesne 169 attacked by Keraquis, repulses them..... 169 attacks the English who were approaching on Fort Du Quesne; repulses them169, 170 built Fort Massic in 1757, which he called Fort Ascension, but afterwards was named Fort Massiac in honor of M. de Massiac, mention in explanatory notes 165 captured by Sir William Johnson at siege of Fort Niagara 165
 charged with the command of a large convoy laden with provisions for Fort Du Quesne..... 169 departs for Illinois with one hundred and fifty men.... 167 dies by shipwreck near Bordeaux, France 167 enters the service of the king in the Lyonnaise regiment in 1740 166
 governor of Louisiana to succeed d'Abadie.....165, 166 leaves France under orders to conduct recruits to New Orleans 167

- led the sortie of September 14, 1758, at Fort Du Quesne in the fight known as "Grant's defeat," mention in explanatory notes 165
- ordered by Macarty to establish a fort on the Belle Riviere 168
- retained in office in Louisiana by courtesy, until the arrival of the military forces of Spain; remains in command until relieved in 1769 by Don Alexander O'Reilly, mention in explanatory notes 166
- returns to New Orleans; mention in explanatory notes 165
- returns to the Fort of the Ascension, on learning of the superior forces of the English 169
- returns to the Post of the Illinois; mention 170
- route of, down the Mississippi, up the Wabash to the Miamis portage, etc.; mention in explanatory notes 165
- Ruerlord confides to him the command of expedition to go from New Orleans to Illinois 167
- savages who had accompanied Aubry along the Keraquis River abandon him; mention 168
- successor of M. d'Abadie as governor of Louisiana 165, 166
- turns the colony of Louisiana over to the Spanish governor, Don Antonio Ulloa 166
- wins the esteem and friendship of Mr. de Ruerlord, governor of the colony of Louisiana 167
- Aubry (The) Manuscript—Original document of obtained by H. W. Beckwith from Paris, France; mention of in explanatory notes 165
- the only document as yet known that officially tells why and when Fort Massiac was built; mention in explanatory notes 166
- written from Fort Chartres of the Illinois in 1758 by Charles Philippe Aubry; translation of 165-170
- Beaupreau, Marquis de—Colonel of the Lyonnaise regiment; mention in explanatory notes 166
- Beckwith, Hiram W. (H. W. B.)—Obtains the Aubry Manuscript (original document translated), from Paris, France; mention of in explanatory notes 165
- Belle Riviere (Ohio)—Establishment of a fort on, by the French as a defense against the English 167, 168
- Bordeaux—Aubry lost at sea near Bordeaux; mention in explanatory notes 166
- Canada—Fort Du Quesne, a dependant of Canada, 500 leagues distant from the Illinois and 1,000 from New Orleans 169
- Chartres Fort—Mention of in foot note 168
- Cherokee (Keraquis) River (present Tennessee River)—English had large settlements on; mention 167
- Craig, Neville B.—Author of "Olden Time," Pittsburgh, 1848; sketch of Aubry partially collected from; mention in foot note 166
- Du Quesne, Fort—See Fort Du Quesne for historical sketch. Aubry arrives at Fort Du Quesne 169
- mention of, in explanatory notes 165

- razed to the ground by the French before the arrival of the English, with reinforcements 170
- English Prisoner (an American Colonist)—mention..... 168
- Forbes, General John—British officer in America, born Scotland about 1710; died Philadelphia 1759. Fort Du Quesne razed to the ground by the French before the arrival of reinforcements from the English, statement quoted from General Forbes..... 170
- Fort Ascension—Original name of Fort Massiac..... 165
- Fort Chartres (built by Boisbriant, 1720)—Report, in form of letter, written at, by Aubry; foundation of this historical document; mention 165
- mention of in foot note..... 168
- Fort Du Quesne—A dependent of Canada..... 169
- built near present city of Pittsburg, built 1754 by French, captured by English under General Forbes 1758; burned; Fort Pitt built 1759
- Aubry arrives at..... 169
- mention of in explanatory notes..... 165
- Fort Massiac—Aubry manuscript the only known document that officially tells why and when Fort Massiac was built; mention in explanatory notes..... 166
- built in 1757 by Aubry; called Fort Ascension, afterwards called Fort Massiac in honor of M. de Massiac, minister of the French marine and colonies; mention in explanatory notes 165
- Fort Massac Road—Mention of in foot note 168
- Fort Niagara—Aubry captured in his effort to raise the siege of Fort Niagara; mention of in explanatory notes..... 165
- Fort of the Ascension—After completion of, Aubry leaves it. 168
- Aubry receives orders from Mr. de Macarty to leave the Fort of the Ascension 168, 169
- completed on the 20th June (1757), named on account of its being on that day (Ascension) that the first stake was driven at the fort..... 168
- Fort Massiac first called Fort of the Ascension..... 165
- Fort Wayne, Indiana—Present site of; mention in explanatory note 165
- Fort Niagara—Siege of, mention..... 165
- France—Treaty of peace with Great Britain; mention in explanatory notes 166
- Frenchmen—Mention 168
- Gayerre, Charles—Louisiana historian, born 1805, died 1895. Author of "Historic Louisiana," sketch of Aubry collated from; mention in foot note..... 166
- Gazette of France—Makes mention of the victory of Aubry of the English, 28th April, 1759; mention..... 170
- Germain, d'Abadie, St., M.—Died 1763. Aubry succeeds as governor of Louisiana..... 165, 166
- "Grant's Defeat"—Mention of Aubry as leading the sortie of September 14, 1758, at Fort Du Quesne against the British, in battle known as "Grant's Defeat"..... 165

- Grant, James—Major 62d or Highland regiment of British troops; mention..... 165
- Great Britain—Treaty of peace between France and Great Britain; mention in explanatory notes 166
- "Historic Louisiana"—By Gayerre; mention in foot note.... 166
- Hough, Franklin B.—Translator of M. Pouchot's "Memoir upon the late War in North America between the French and English 1755-1760;" mention in foot note.. 166
- H. W. B. (Beckwith, H. W.)—Author of foot note giving the route taken by Aubry to establish a fort on the Belle Riviere 166, 168
- Illinois, Country of—
Aubrey departs for Illinois, 20th July, 1756..... 167
Fort Du Quesne, a dependant of Canada, five hundred leagues distant from the Illinois..... 169
- Johnson, Sir William—British officer and superintendent of Indian affairs, born Ireland 1715, died near Johnstown, N. Y., 1774.
capture of Aubry by, mention of in explanatory notes.. 165
- Kaskaskia—Mention of, in foot note..... 168
- Keraquis (Indian Tribe)—Aubry attacked by Keraquis; repulses them 169
- Keraquis (Cherokee, the present Tennessee River)—English had large settlements on; mention..... 167 establishment of a fort by the French near, as a defense against the English 168
- Massac, Fort. See Massiac.
- Massiac, Fort—Aubry manuscript the only known document that official y tells why and when Fort Massiac was built; mention in explanatory notes..... 166 built by Aubry in 1757; mention in explanatory notes.. 165 called Fort of the Ascension, but afterwards named Fort Massiac..... 165 officers left there in absence of Aubry; mention.... 167, 168
- Massiac, M. de—Minister of the French marine and colonies.
Fort Massiac named in honor of; mention in explanatory notes 165
- Maumee River—Mention of in explanatory notes..... 165
- Memoir—Upon the late war in North America between the French and English, 1755-1760 by Pouchot; mention in foot note 166
- Miamis Portage—Mention of in explanatory notes 165
- Mississippi River—English making plans to take possession of points occupied by the French on the Mississippi River mention of in explanatory notes 165
- New Orleans—Aubry leaves France under orders to conduct one hundred and thirty recruits to New Orleans..... 167
Fort Du Quesne distant from New Orleans 1,000 leagues 169
- Lake Erie—Mention of in explanatory notes..... 165
- Louisiana—Aubry arrives in Louisiana with all the soldiers who had been entrusted to his command..... 167

- Aubry succeeds M. d'Abadie St. Germaine as governor of Louisiana 165, 166
- Macarty, M. (Makarty, Chevalier de)—Born in Ireland; French commandant in the Illinois 1751-1760.
 Aubry starts for the Post of the Illinois to give an account to M. de Macarty of the operations of his campaign 169 commander for the king, receives news that the English were preparing to enter the Belle Riviere, and from thence into the Mississippi..... 167 commandant of the Illinois, orders Aubry to establish a fort (Fort Massac) on the Belle Riviere to check the English 168
- New Orleans—Mention of in explanatory notes 165
- Niagara Fort—
 Aubry captured at..... 165
- Ohio River—Mention of in foot note 163
- O'Reilly, Don Alexander—Born Ireland 1735, died Spain 1794; Spanish governor of Louisiana.
 Aubry relieved as governor of Louisiana by Don Alexander O'Reilly in 1769; mention in explanatory notes 166
- Paris, France—Historical document obtained at; mention.. 165
- Ponchot } M.—Author of "Memoir Upon the Late War in Pouchot } North America Between French and the English, 1755-1760;" sketch of Aubry collated from; mention in foot note..... 166
- Portage, Miami—Mention of in explanatory notes..... 165
- Post of the Illinois—
 Aubry returned to the Illinois Post, could not depart till March 10th, 1758, on account of the large boats not being ready and laden..... 169
 Aubry goes to..... 167, 169, 170
- Ruerlord, M. de—Governor of the colony of Louisiana..... 167
 Aubry wins the esteem and friendship of..... 167
- Savages—Defeat the English who attack Fort Du Quesne; mention 169, 170
- Tennessee River (Keraquis River)—Early known as the Cherokee River; mention in note 168
- Ulloa, Don Antonio—Born Seville 1716, died Is'and of Leon, 1795. Spanish governor of La.; Aubry turns the colony of Louisiana over to; mention in explanatory notes 166
- Vandreuil, Mr. de—Governor of the colony of Louisiana; mention (misprint Vaudreuil)..... 167
- Vaudreuil, Pierre Rigaud, Marquis de Vaudreuil de Cavagnal—Born 1698, died 1764; son of a former governor; himself French governor of Canada July 1755 to September 1760.
 Aubry wins the esteem and friendship of..... 167
- Wabash River—Mention in explanatory notes 165

INDEX TO GEORGE ROGERS CLARK'S CAMPAIGN IN THE ILLINOIS; LETTERS FROM THE CANADIAN AR-CHIVES, AND APPENDIX—PP. 171-463.

Abbott, Lieut.-Governor Edward—British officer at Detroit and Vincennes.
American officer captured by Hamilton has commission from Abbott	227
Attempts to build stockade at Vincennes	311
Bentley hopes that Murray has expained to Abbott the misconduct of Rochblave.....	299 issues proclamation to inhabitants of Vincennes ordering them to take oath of a legiance to England....	181
leaves English flag at Vincennes.....	356
leaves Vincennes for Detroit	197, 203
letter of, reporting arrival at Vincennes and state of affairs there; notes	313-316
letter of Abbott to Carleton, Detroit, April 25, 1778; leaves Vincennes on account of expense.....	317 letter of Abbott to Carleton. July 9, 1777, Canadian Archives, foot note	311 letter of Abbott to Sackville, April 13, 1778, foot note..	311
official letter of	313-318
ordered by Haldimand to go to Dominica or Babadoes..	312
personal characteristics of and future career.....	311-312
recommends John Edgar for appointment as commissary of Indian affairs	316
re'uctant to leave Vincennes; attached to inhabitants..	317
salary of	311
Acts of Congress—Foot note	181
Ains (Ainse, Jos.)—Officer in English Indian service, sent to aid of Hamilton	398
Allegheny Mountains—Mention	175, 286
Alibanes (Indian Tribe)Mention	389
America, War in—Mention	459
American Affairs—Proclamation to the French in America by King of France declaring alliance with the American cause; translation	373-376
American Archives—Pennsylvania acts, in relation to Clark's campaign	171
mention, foot note.....	178
American Colonies—Capt. White Eyes makes speech in favor of	178
American Festivities—Mention	180
American, French—Mention	375
American Officer—Captured by British; mention.....	227
American Prisons—Mention	374
American Prisoners—At Detroit, cruelties practiced upon..	269-270
American Soldiers—Captured by Hamilton.....	227

- American Speeches—To Wabash Indians; proffer of belts; significance of colors of each, etc. 351
- American State Papers—Old land grants at or near Vincennes; foot note. 245
- American State Papers—Public lands; foot note 315, 316
- American Woman—At Kaskaskia, attacked by drunken Delaware Indian 281
- Americans—Courage, talents, etc., of. 373
- issue address to Indians 297
- on arrival at Vincennes, throw English flag in river. . . . 356
- Amherst, Sir Jeffrey—English governor of Canada; born 1717, died 1797; in 1776 became Baron Amherst of Holmesdale; in 1787 Baron Amherst of Montreal; mention 460
- Amiable—Young Indian, son of Chevalier; mention. 334
- Ammunition—Scarcity of 187, 190, 258, 259, 392
- Andrews, Captain—English officer in America; Bolton recommends for office 422
- Angelica (The)—English boat. 421
- Annapolis—Mention 222
- Apalaches (Appalachian Mountains)—Mention. 306
- Arms—Great need of by English troops; mention. 221, 344, 392
- Appendix—To this volume; account and description of Fort Gage at Kaskaskia, when captured by Clark. 458-463
- Appointments—List of sent to Ha'dimand. 341
- Articles of War—Copies asked for by Col. Gibson. 337, 338
- Assembly of Virginia—Mention 185, 190, 385
- Au Glaize River (also called Grande Glaize)—Ottawas join Hamilton at 220
- August House of France—Mention 375
- Augushawa, Tawaa Chief—Mention in letter of Monture. . . 380
- Axes—Demanded by Indians (meaning preparations for the war path); mention. 322, 323, 324, 325, 327
- Bad Birds—Indian name for rumors or evil minded persons; mention 209, 212, 320
- Baley, Bailey, Bayley, Lieutenant (later Captain) John—Commanded company under Clark; born in Virginia 1748; died Kentucky 1816.
- attacks Vincennes; mention 403
- ordered to march to Vincennes 244
- sent by Clark to join Helm at St. Vincent to surprise Celeron; see note (H. W. B.) 223
- surprises Indians while in council at Fort Ouiaatenon. . . 223
- Balise (The)—At the mouth of the Mississippi; mention; foot note 459
- Baltimore—Associates of John Murray, in the grant of land by the Pyankeshaws; mention in note. 222
- Banner of France—Mention. 374
- Barbadoes—Island of; Abbott ordered there by Ha'dimand. . 312
- Baron, Major—At Vincennes; mention. 337
- Barracks—At Pensacola, to be built; plans for same. 290-292
- Barrataria—Small island in mouth of Tennessee river upon which Clark landed.

- Batteau—Express sent in, to Fort Erie..... 332
 Batteaus—Merchants willing to forward goods in; mention, Hamilton's letter to Haldimand, dated Detroit, Aug.
 8th, 1778..... 333
 number of employed on expedition of Hamilton..... 349 Baubin, Mr. Charles—Great English partisan at the Miamis, forbade the Raimbaults going to Vincennes..... 352 letters brought by..... 343
 mention 319, 346
 Bautier—Takes copy of commission given by the rebels to the chief of the Renards, takes it to Major de Peyster... 335
 Bayley, Lieut.—Lieut. John Bailey. (See Bailey.)
 Beale, Captain—Resignation of asked for..... 384 Beaubin, (Baubin) Charles—Interpreter, in council with the Indians, Detroit, June 29th, 1778..... 319-328 Beaulow (Beaulon), Major—Senior officer at Vincennes; instructions left him by Abbott..... 318 Beauvais, France—Native place of Jean Baptiste St. Geme;
 mention 460
 Beauvais, M.—Vitol St. Geme, of Kaskaskia; sketch of, with sketch of his family; buys Jesuit property at Kaskaskia 460
 Beaver Dams—English obliged to break down beaver dams to let boats pass..... 363
 Beckwith, H. W.—Editor, explanatory notes..... 216, 219 editorial and explanatory notes accompanying Gov.
 Abbott's letter from Vincennes 310-312 historical data on our continental Indian affairs;
 authorities quoted; mention in foot note..... 181 note on grant of land by the Pyankeshaws of Vincennes 222
 note on dispatches taken from William Myers..... 402
 "Memoir of Clark," reference to the original; foot note. 242 produces much of Judge Dillon's work that relates to Clark's campaigns; mention..... 174 topographical map showing Clark's route from the crossing of the Wabash to Vincennes 242 Becquet, Sieurs—Batteau from Fort Pitt take them and their goods 309
 Belle River (Ohio)—Mention..... 336, 337
 Belle Riviere (Ohio)—John Morin joined there by Butler.... 304
 Belestre {
 Be lestre { M.—Formerly among the Spaniards, said to have Bilestre { joined the rebels..... 352
 Belts—Celoron sets out from Detroit with belts and speeches for the Indians of the Ouabash..... 330 Deputies from the Ouabash Indians satisfied with their reception at Detroit, and take three war belts..... 332 exchanged by Indian nations as pledge of alliance.... 233 exchange of belts with Clark by the Indians in council 280
 for Chickasaws and Cherokee Indians sent by Hamilton to Stuart; mention in letter to Haldimand... 232 for Indians sent by Hamilton..... 233

- given by Hamilton to Miesquitto (Miquetto). Quaiqua-bones war chief. 321
- given by Hamilton to the three nations, Ouattonons. 324
- Mascoutins and Qui-qua-bones. 324
- green belt of wampum denotes uprightness; speech on by Qui-qua-po-quois, village chief of the Ouattonons 320
- mention 208, 209, 212
- offered by Americans to Indians at council at Vincennes; significance of colors; declined by Indians. 356-358
- offered by Americans to Wabash Indians. 351
- presented by Sa-pa-tia at the council he'd Detroit, June 1778 320
- received by Captain Helm from the great council of the Delawares 281
- received by the Indians of the village of Ouattonons; mention in Sa-pa-tia's speech in reply to Hamilton 326
- sent by the Ottawas and Chippewas to the Illinois Indians 366
- sent by the Virginians to the Ottawas and Chippewas. 432
- white one sent to English by the great chief of the Creeks; mention 395
- Bentley (Brently) Thomas—Merchant in Kaskaskia; petition of, to Sir Guy Carleton, calling attention to misconduct of Rocheblave 295-298
- applies for permission for Dejean to go to Illinois. 307, 308
- arrested and placed in custody at Michillimackinac by DePeyster, accused of correspondence with Americans 299
- Clark asks that he be exchanged for a prisoner of equal rank 415
- conduct of at Kaskaskia 300-301
- denies that he has supplied gunpowder to the Americans 301-302
- Girciult (Girault) writes to Lernoult for the release of 417
- in letter to Murray gives detailed account of wrong doing of Rocheblave 209-303
- permission asked of Lernoult that he be returned to his family 416
- says he can prove his innocence if free to return to Kaskaskia; mention 302
- urges Murray to write to the governor of Post Vincent asking him to forward to the governor at Detroit an account of his (Bentley's) transactions. 300
- writes letter to Daniel Murray at Kaskaskia relative to injustice and misconduct of Rocheblave. 299-303
- Bentley, Mrs.—Wife of Thomas Bentley; mention 303
- Berry, Lieut.—Necessary for him to repair to Fort Lawrence 387
- Big Knife (Meaning Clark and the Virginians)—Tobacco's son joins 207
- Clark holds council with Indians; warns them of consequences if they break faith. 279

- nations on the Wabash and Omi (Maumee) River adhere to their treaties with 179
- punishment of the Delawares made an example to other Indians 282
- Tobacco's son calls Helm "his brother, the Big Knife". 278
- Big Knife Chief—Tobacco's son glad to receive Helm, calls him Big Knife Chief..... 206
- Big Knife—Tobacco's son tells the Delaware Indians that the Big Knife had refused to make peace with them..... 283
- Big Knives—Grand Chief, the Tobacco's son, a friend to.... 255
- mention 208, 209, 210, 212, 213, 326
- name by which the Americans, and particularly Virginians were called by the Indians, foot note..... 206
- persecutions of, by the English..... 210-212
- (rebels, but particularly Virginians), reference to in speech of Cha-ha, war chief of the Ojibwatons, at council held in Detroit, June, 1778..... 321
- reference to in speech of Sa-pa-tia, in reply to Hamilton at council held in Detroit, 1778..... 326
- Big Muddy River—Mention 240
- Billiard Tables—At Vincennes, destroyed by Hamilton; mention 234
- Billtre, Mr.—Mention 302
- Bird (Henry) Captain (English officer)—Arrives at Detroit with troops from Niagara..... 353
- to Lernout, extract of letters from St. Duski (Sandusky) received, 17th of April, 1779..... 427
- Birds (Bad Birds)—Indian name for rumors or evil minded persons 209, 212, 320
- Blockhouse—Raising of one at Post Vincennes; mention.... 393
- Blockhouse Stations—For security and defense; mention.... 173
- Blockhouses—Description of blockhouses in the forts constructed in the western parts of Pennsylvania, Virginia and Kentucky 182
- Blockhouses at Pensacola—Plans for, numbers of..... 290-292
- Bloody Belt—Mention 209, 212
- Bloomer, Captain—English commandant at the Natchey..... 390
- Bluff (The)—Mention 218-219
- Boat (Armed)—Clark finds it necessary to station one at the Ohio 453-454
- Boat—Mississippi (keel) boat; mention..... 239
- captured by sentry of Clark's army..... 250
- Boats—Mention 190, 272, 280, 286, 306, 361
- Boeuff, Fort le..... 422
- Bolsbriant, Pierre Duque (Dugue)—Born 1675, died 1740; built Fort Chartres 1720 425
- Bolons, Messrs—Confirm to Captain Chene account of capitulation of Vincennes 425
- Bolton, Captain Mason (later Colonel Bolton)—British officer, commandant at Niagara; letter to Haldimand, with letter of Lernout enclosed..... 420-421
- letter to Haldimand, Fort Niagara, that the service requires reinforcements 421-422

- Lernoult orders him to sail to Niagara with news of the situation at Detroit 370
 mention 388, 392, 399
 writes letter, Niagara, Nov. 13, 1778, to Haldimand, relating to Indian affairs and Hamilton's expedition to Vincennes 369-371 orders soldiers sent to Detroit 370
 Bonner's House—At Kaskaskia mortgaged to Bentley and Landron; Rocheblave discriminates against Bentley 301
 Bonner (perhaps Pierre Bonneau)—Inhabitant of Kaskaskia 299-303 note of, mention 300-301
 note to Bentley; Rocheblave's arbitrary conduct in matter 300-301 Boon, Squire (Brother of Daniel Boone)—Copy of letter of, to Colonel Campbell, dated "Falls of the Ohio" 423 in regard to sending his horse by William Morris, etc. . 423
 Bosson, Captain—Rebels proceed to the house of, at Vincennes. 424
 Bosseron—Letter to, from Rocheblave 309
 Bosseron (Boseron)—Captain Francis, served under Helm at Vincennes Bosseron, Major Francis—Buried his powder during British domination at Vincennes; produces it for the Americans 259 service of 272
 Boston—Languedoc, his majesty's vessel in the harbor of, 28th of October, 1778; mention 376
 mention 314, 323, 376
 Bottetourt County, Va.—Clark and Jones learn that they are too late for the assembly of Virginia, when they reach. 186
 Bowman, Captain Joseph—Mention 402
 Bowman, John—First county lieutenant of Kentucky, born in Virginia 283
 Bowman, Colonel John—Clark receives an express from, repulsed at the Shawnees town; mention. 285
 Bowman, Major Joseph—Brother of John Bowman, born in Virginia, died 1779 at Fort Patrick Henry (Vincennes)
 Bowman, Joseph—Commander of company in Clark's campaign, mention 194, 196 commands garrison at Cahokia 205 copy of Clark's letter to Hamilton from his manuscript journal; foot note 265 diary or journal of, mention 171, 248-250 letter to Governor Patrick Henry 413
 mention 191, 194, 196, 402, 250, 270, 285
 ordered to leave Cahokia and join Clark at Kaskaskia 237-238 present at conference between Clark and Hamilton.... 267
 Bowman (Fort) in Kahos—Treaty of alliance given by George Rogers Clark at, to Kinaytounak, chief of the Renard nation; mention 338 to Lernoult, letter of, dated Fort Pt. Henry, March 20th, 1779 416
 Bowman's Journal—Mention 171, 242, 243, 267, 270, 284

- Brackenridge, Henry M.—Author of "Recollections of Persons and Places in the West;" mention..... 460
- Brandy—Owned by Le Chance, confiscated by soldiers..... 309
- Brashear, Lieut. Richard..... 280
- Brehim, Captain (English officer)—Mention..... 451
- British Troops—Mention 229
- Brodhead, Colonel Daniel—Born probably in state of New York; died at Milford, Pa., 1809; called by the Indians "The Great Sun"..... 385, 386
- Brodhead—Gibson's letter to Brodhead, dated Fort Lawrence, January 22nd, 1779..... 385
- Brodhead, Colonel—Gibson urges that he be sent to aid of Moravians 386
- Brownsville, Pa. (Red Stone Old Fort)—On the river Monongahela; mention in foot-note 191
- Bu-con-ge-he-la (Delaware Chief)—Mention in foot note.... 181
- Bude, General (?)—Haldimand to, letter dated, Quebec, 17th June, 1779 450-452
- Buffalo (American)—Mention 253
- Bu-kon-ge-he-la }
Buckongahelas } A distinguished Delaware chief..... 175
Bu-con-ge-he-la }
Bu-kon-ge-he-la }
Puck-on-che-luh }
- After the battle of "The Fallen Timbers" would have no more to do with the English—note to the Editor. 176-177
- His regard for Gen. Clark..... 177
- on his death bed, tells his tribe to rely on the friendship of the United States..... 177
- Puck-on-che-luh, one form of the name, meaning of it, foot note 175
- speech to the Indians 175-176
- Takes no part in the treaty of Fort McIntosh. Note by the Editor 177
- mention 176
- Burgoyne's Army—Capture of, mention..... 190
- Burron, Captain—Good conduct of, mentioned by Helm in letter to Clark 226
- Butler's History of Kentucky, p. 99—Explanatory note from.. 286
- mention foot note..... 193
- Butler's History of Kentucky, '33—By Dillon; quoted in foot note 183
- Butler, Captain—Mention 371
- Butler, Colonel—Writes Haldimand in regard to Indian affairs 422
- Butler, Colonel Richard—Commissioner at Fort Pitt; Bu-kon-ge-he-la takes no notice of; mention in note by the editor 177
- one of the commissioners appointed by the continental congress for the purpose of making treaties with the Indians; mention in foot note..... 175
- Butler, Henry—Examination of, before Rocheblave at Fort Gage 304-306
- make his mark to sign papers..... 305-306
- swears to truth of his testimony..... 306

- Butler, Major (or Col. John)—At Niagara; Hamilton sends substance of Captain Helm's letter to; mention 392
- Butler, Mann—Butler's history of Kentucky, anecdote from; mention in foot note 183, 193, 219, 286
- Cabins—Of the Indians at the fort (Ouatonenon), number of; mention 221
- Cahokia—Bowman ordered by Clark to evacuate the fort . . . 237-238
- council fire kind'ed at 231
- inhabitants of take oath of allegiance to Virginia . . . 203, 214
- garrison established at by George Rogers Clark, Capt. Joseph Bowman in command 205
- great council with the Indians held at by Clark . . . 208-214
- home residence of Gibault, note 201
- Indians visit to make treaties with Americans 208
- number of rebel force there, mention 232
- rebels send a detachment with officer to receive submission of inhabitants, etc 330
- troops of Clark divided between Post Vincennes, Kaskaskia, Cahokia and the Falls of the Ohio 285
- volunteer company of French Militia join Capt. Bowman when he was despatched to take Cahokia 203
- Calamities of War—Mention 374
- Caldwell (English vessel)—Arrival of, at Niagara; mention . . 422
- Calumet (Pipe)—Mention 319
- Calvert, Sieur—Application to Haldimand to secure passport for 440
- Campbell, Colonel Arthur—Member of the Virginia assembly, opposed to Kentucky, being a new county of Va 185
- Campbell, Lieut. Col. John—Gibson asks after goods in charge of 387
- letter from Clark dated Pittsburg, informing him of the treaties between France and America 197
- mention 454
- Cample, Lieut. Col. (English Officer)—Sent lang'ade and Gautier to Michillimackinac 367
- Canada—Mention . . . 172, 216, 276, 313, 323, 329, 370, 376, 443, 459
- Canadian Archives, 1772-1780—Literal copies of letters from 290-457
- Series B, vol. 5, p. 73, N. Y., March 16, 1772. Gage to Haldimand 290-292
- Series B, vol. 69, p. 270, New Orleans, July 6, 1772. Willing to Haldimand 293-294
- Series B, vol. 185, p. 2, Illinois Pt. Kaskaskia, April 10, 1777, Bentley to Carleton 295-298
- Series B, vol. 185, p. 10, Miamamackinac, 1st August, 1777. Bentley to Murray 299-303
- Series B, vol. 122, p. 21, Butler's examination before Rocheblave; translation 304-306
- Series B, vol. 122, p. 512, July 6, 1780, Fort Clark, Kaskaskia. Montgomery to De Peyster 307, 308
- Series B, vol. 122, p. 40. Extract of a letter from Rocheblave to Bosseron, translation, Feb. 28, '78 309

Series Q, Colonial office records, vol. 14, p. 48; Vincennes, May 25, 1777. Abbott to Carleton.....	313-316
editorial, explanatory to Abbott's letter of May 25, 1777	310-312
Series B, vol. 122, p. 48, Detroit, April 25, 1778. Abbott to Carleton	317-318
Series B, vol. 122, p. 75. Council held with the Indians at Detroit, June-July, 1778, by the English Lieutenant Governor, Hamilton.....	319-328
Series B, vol. 182, p. 489. Address or petition from the inhabitants of Vincennes to the governor of Virginia; translation	329
Series 2, vol. 15, p. 230. Hamilton to Carleton (?).....	330, 331
Series B, vol. 122, p. 115. Hamilton to Carleton.....	332-333
Series B, vol. 96, p. 6, no. 4, Michilimackinac, 15th August, 1778. DePeyster to Carleton	334-335
Series B, vol. 122, p. 137. Celoron to Hamilton, August 28, 1778	336-337
Series B, vol. 122, p. 136, copy, treaty of alliance between Kinaytounak, Chief of the Renard nation of Indians, and George Rogers Clark, commandant of the eastern Illinois, August 28, 1778.....	338
Series B, vol. 122, p. 167. Hamilton to Haldimand, Detroit, Sept. 22, 1778.....	339-347
Series B, vol. 99, p. 171. Proportion of stores taken from Detroit upon an expedition to the Illinois by Lt. Governor Hamilton, signed Henry Du Vernet, 2d Lieut. of Artillery.....	348-349
Series B, vol. 122, p. 287, 30th January, 1779. Return of the state of his majesty's garrison of Fort Sackville	350
Series B, vol. 122, p. 211. Hamilton to Haldimand, Detroit, Oct. 7, 1778.....	351-353
Series B, vol. 122, p. 217. Hamilton to Haldimand, Rocher de Bout, Oct. 14, '78.....	354-355
Series B, vol. 122, p. 219. Hamilton to Haldimand, Rocher de Bout, Oct. 14, 1778. Proceedings of the rebels at St. Vincennes as related by Neegik, an Ottawa war chief, to Lieut. Gov. Hamilton.....	356-358
Series B, vol. 122, p. 222, Miamis Town, Oct. 28, 1778. Hamilton to Haldimand	359-360
Series B, vol. 122, p. 224, Nov. 1, '78. Camp at Petite Riviere. Hamilton to Haldimand.....	361-363
Series B, vol. 96, p. 19, Michilimackinac, Oct. 24, 1778. De Peyster to Haldimand	364-366
Series B, vol. 96, p. 23, Michilimackinac, Oct. 27th, 1778. DePeyster to Haldimand	367-368
Series B, vol. 96, p. 232, Niagara, Nov. 13, 1778. Bolton to Haldimand	369-371
Series B, vol. 182, p. 14. American Affairs. A declaration from the King of France to all the ancient French in North America; translation; signed Estaing	373-376

- Series B, vol. 122, p. 263, St. Vincennes, Jan. 13, 1779.
 Hamilton to DeGalvis 377-378
- Series B, vol. 122, p. 308, Cooshoocking, Jan. 18, 1779.
 Killbuck to Montour 379
 Fort Pitt, Jan. 4, 1779. Dodge to Montour..... 380
- Series B, vol. 122, p. 311, Ochi Town, Jan. 19, 1779.
 Zeisberger to Gibson 381-382
- Series B, vol. 122, p. 309, Fort Lawrence, Jan. 22, 1779. .
 Gibson to McIntosh 383-384
- Series B, vol. 122, p. 314, Fort Lawrence, January 22,
 1779. Gibson to Brodhead..... 385
 Fort Lawrence, Jan. 22, 1779. Gibson to Morgan... 386
 Gibson to Taylor 387-388
- Series B, vol. 122, p. 266, St. Vincennes, Jan. 24, 1779.
 Hamilton to Haldimand 389-393
- Series B, vol. 122, p. 273. Substance of a conference with the Indians, St. Vincennes, Jan. 26, 1779.
 Hamilton to Haldimand 394-397
- Series B, vol. 96, p. 25, Michilimackinac, Jan. 29, 1779.
 DePeyster to Haldimand 398-399
- Series B, vol. 122, p. 284, St. Vincennes, Jan. 30, 1779
 (not 1780). Hamilton to Haldimand..... 400-401
- Series B, vol. 122, p. 289, with explanatory note by editor. Journal of G. R. Clark..... 402-407
- Series B, vol. 122, p. 297. Hamilton to Lernoult..... 408
- Series B, vol. 122, p. 298. Hay to Lernoult, Vincennes, March 8, 1779 409
- Series B, vol. 122, p. 304, Ft. Pt. Henry, March 9, 1779.
 G. R. Clark to Gov. Henry 410-411
- Series B, vol. 122, p. 307, Ft. Pt. Henry, St. Vincent, March 10, 1779. G. R. Clark to Col. Harrison..... 412
- Series B, vol. 122, p. 303, St. Vincent, March 12, 1779.
 Bowman to Gov. Henry 413
- Series B, vol. 122, p. 302. A warrant from G. R. Clark to Wm. Moires, Fort Pt. Henry, March 13, 1779.... 414
- Series B, vol. 122, p. 301, Fort Pt. Henry, March 16, 1779.
 Clark to Lernoult 415
- Series B, vol. 22 (122?), p. 299, Fort Pt. Henry, March 20, 1779. Bowman to Lernoult 416
- Series B, vol. 122, p. 300, Fort Pt. Henry, St. Vincent, 21st March, 1779. Girault to Lernoult..... 417
- Series B, vol. 96, p. 27, no. 12, Michilimackinac, March 29, 1779. DePeyster to Haldimand..... 418-419
- Series B, vol. 96, p. 258, Niagara, April 2, 1779. Lernoult to Bolton 420-421
 Bolton to Haldimand 420-422
 (Bolton to Haldimand, with enclosure of Lernoult to Bolton).
- Series B, vol. 122, p. 330, Cantucky County, the Falls of Ohio, April 4, 1779. Squire Boon to Col. Comble
 (Campbell?) 423
- Series B, vol. 122, p. 337. Account brought in from Post
 St. Vincents by Capt. Chene..... 424-426

- Series B, vol. 122, p. 336. Bird to Lernoult 427
- Series B, vol. 181, p. 167, Port St. Vincennes, 18th April, 1779. H. S. to a friend..... 428
- Henry to Gibson 429
- Series B, vol. 122, p. 342. Clark to Nanaloibi, Pout.
chief, April 20, 1779..... 430-431
- Series B, vol. 96, p. 29, no. 13, Michilimackinac, 2d May,
1779. DePeyster to Haldimand..... 432-433
- Series B, vol. 122, p. 345, Huron Village, May 7, 1779.
Monforton to Lernoult; translation..... 434-435
- Series B, vol. 96, p. 32, no. 14, Michilimackinac, May 13, 1779. DePeyster to Haldimand 436-438
- Series B, vol. 96, p. 92, no. 10. Quebec, May 20, 1779.
Haldimand to DePeyster..... 439-440
- no. 11, Quebec, May 20, 1779. Haldimand to De-Peyster 441-442
- Series B, vol. 122, p. 348. St. Joseph, May 29, 1779;
translation. Chevalier to Lernoult..... 443-444
- Series B, vol. 54, p. 85, no. 18. Quebec, June 7, 1779.
Haldimand to Lord George Germain..... 445-449
- Series B, vol. 66, p. 137; translation; Quebec, June 17, 1779. Haldimand to Gen. de Bude (?)..... 450-452
- Series B, vol. 97, p. 224. Louisville, Sept. 23, 1779.
Clark to Jefferson, forwarded by De Peyster.... 453-455
- Series B, vol. 122, p. 478; translation. Greeting from inhabitants of Kaskaskia; Montgomery, Cato, Winston and St. Germain, to the Indians and Frenchmen in America; a French proclamation at the Cascaskias, May 6, 1780..... 456-457
- Haldimand collection, from Canadian Archives, letters especially so marked. Hamilton to Haldimand, letter of 220-225
- Hamilton's notice to the inhabitants of St. Vincennes (translation) 237
- letter from Hamilton to Haldimand..... 227-235
- official remarks on same 235-236
- letter from Helm to Clark 226
- mention, foot note 462, 463
- Canadians—Mention 375, 421, 437, 446, 448
- Cannon, Need of—Mention 191, 192, 253, 254
- Canoes, Use of—Mention 249, 250, 253, 368
- Capitulation of Vincennes by the British, articles of..... 270-271
- Captain (The) (He'm)—Mention..... 270
- Car Bonneaux (Carbonneaux, Louis Pierre Francois Carbonneaux), signs as sheriff, the testimony of Henry Butler 305, 306
- Carleton, Gen. Sir Guy—Afterwards Lord Dorchester; Gov.
Gen. of Canada 1786-1796. Bentley desires to present petition to, relating to misconduct of Rocheblave..... 300
- letter addressed to, by Abbott..... 313-316
- letter from Rocheblave, foot note 462
- letter to, from Abbott 313-317
- letter to, from Abbott 317-318

letter to Sackville, mention in foot note.....	462
mention	366, 363
orders Capt. Lord, with troops from Kaskaskia to Detroit	463 petition to from Murray, Kennedy and Bentley, merchants of Kaskaskia, complaining of the injustice of Rocheblave	295-298
recommends Rocheblave	463
Carl'sle, Pa. (Carlisle)—Congress in session there; testimony of Henry Butler	305
Carpenters, Need of—Mention	291
Carts—Mention	349
Cascaskias—French proclamation at.....	456, 457
Cassety, James—Lieutenant of militia, Irishman in English service; mention; Hamilton to Haldimand.....	342
Cat River—Indian grants of land upon.....	222
Cato, S.—Signs proclamation to the French of Illinois.....	457
Celoron (Celown)—At Oulttonon, Hamilton informed that he has received visits in the interest of the rebels.....	351
British Indian agent of the Wea section of the Wabash	223
brother of, in the rebel service, mention.....	363
Hamilton fully convinced of his treachery and cowardice; his conduct fully described.....	223, 354, 355
Hamilton meets him in the lake.....	359
leaves Detroit for Oulttonon with belts and speeches for the Indians of the Ouabache	330, 332
leaves Oulttonon on hearing of American speeches to Indians; goes to Miamis	352 letter from Celoron to Hamilton, dated at Miamis, 28th August, 1778	336-337
makes his escape before the arrival of Captain Helm....	223 runs away on rumor of arrival of Americans; takes furs with him	354-355 spreads report among the Indians of arrival of the Americans	355
unfit to command at Wiagtanon, opinion of Hamilton; reasons given; mention	232, 233, 236, 359
writes that Baptiste Chapoton, Bosseron, Jr., and Le Gras are on good terms with rebel officers at Vincennes	343
Chabert, Lieut. (Philippe Joncaire)—Of the Indian department, Detroit, express sent in batteau by, to Fort Erie.	332
Cha-ha—Oulttonous war chief, presented with an axe by Hamilton, sings a war song, etc.....	327
presented with the war belt by Misquitto.....	327
speech of, at council held at Detroit, June, 1778.....	321
speech of to Hamilton, sings, etc.....	328
Chain of Forts—Mention	216
Chaina, Isidore—Interpreter; mention	420
Chamblae (Chamblace)—Haldimand at.....	367
Chamintawa (Ottawa Chief)—Makes his escape with Capt. Chene from Vincennes.....	424

- Chance—See La Chance.
- Chapline (Chaplin), Abraham (Abram)—Commander under George Rogers Clark; left at Post Vincennes by Clark. 280
- Chapman, Sergeant—Reports that troops have no shoes and will not march on St. Josephs. 455
- Chapoton, Jean Baptiste—Mention. 343, 344
- Chartres, Fort—Mention. 217, 291, 293, 310, 459, 461
- Chene, Captain—Enseway, Sastaritsi and Chene attempt to enter Vincennes. 424
mention. 424-426
- Chequitas, Indians. 456
- Cherakees } Indians—Commence hostilities against the Ken-Cherokees } tuckians. 187
- Cherakee, Indians—Hamilton sends belts to; mention. 232, 233
one of the nations mentioned in plans of southern Indians. 389 probably present at Indian Council at Cherakee river, mention. 232, 233
- Cherakee River—Now the Tennessee River. 233
mention. 389
- Chesne, Isidore—Sworn interpreter with the Indians in council at Detroit, June 29, 1778. 319-328
- Chesnes, Pointe de—Mention. 354
- Chevalier, Monsieur Louis—Arrived at Miami's town from St. Joseph with Indians; Hamilton thinks his visit important. 360 at St. Joseph's, holds the pass to Detroit; mention. 334 DePeyster's opinion of, mention. 342 executes orders to clothe Pottawattamies, sends accounts to DePeyster. 444 in letter to Lernoult, asks information as to his plans to overcome the rebels. 444 influence with the Pottawattamies; mention. 334
mention. 342, 360, 361, 364, 365, 398, 418 to Lernoult, letter dated St. Joseph, May 23, 1779. 443-445 young Indian at Montreal named Amiable, son of; mention. 334
- Chicagou—Mention. 357
- Chicagow—Virginians at; mention. 433
- Chichogow (Chicago) River—Mention. 439
- Chichas Indians. 456
- Chickasaw River (Cherakee River)—Mention. 233
- Chikasaws (Chikasaws, Chickesees) Indians—Hamilton sends belts to. 232
mention. 232, 233, 345, 396, 453
one of the nations mentioned in plans of southern Indians. 389
- Children (American)—Prisoners at Detroit; cruelties practised upon by British and Indians. 269, 270
- Chimney Rock—Mention in Bowman's Journal. 243
mention. 241, 243
- Chip-kaw-kay—Meaning brushwood, name of Indian village near Vincennes, the home of Tobacco's son. 206

- Chippewas (Chippeweys, Chippoweys) Indians—Accompany Hamilton 361
 belts sent to Illinois Indians by 366
 chiefs of, at conference, Ft. Sackville 394 in council Sept. 23, 1778; mention 341
 mention
 ..322, 324, 341, 361, 366, 367, 380, 393, 394, 397, 418, 432, 436 winter near the Grand River, DePeyster sends Langlade with presents to 367
 Choctow Indians—Mention 396 one of the nations mentioned in plans of southern Indians 389
 Church at Vincennes—Hamilton convenes the inhabitants in; inhabitants of Post Vincennes take the oath of allegiance in church at 204
 Claimants to Lands in the Illinois Country—Mention... 287, 288 Clark, Captain—Of the Pennsylvania regiment; Gibson receives supplies by 383
 Clark (Colonel, later General), George Rogers—Born Albermarle county, Va., 1752; died near Louisville, Ky., 1818; buried Cave Hill cemetery, Louisville.
 accounts of his conquests in the Illinois, by various authorities, differences in 242 achievements of in the west; mention 242 answer to Hamilton sent by Capt. Helm at siege of Vincennes 404, 405
 army of, marches through water of the Little Wabash. 247 army of, mention of 243, 248, 254 asks Lernoult for exchange of American prisoner Bentley 415
 bold attack on Kaskaskia 174 calls Hamilton the "Hair Buyer General" 255 campaign of in the Illinois at first not for acquisition of territory, but to protect frontier from Indians.. 173 capture of Vincennes 246-274
 Collett's map of Clark's route from the Wabash to Vincennes 241
 commandant of the Eastern Illinois; mention by Hamilton 230
 communicates his designs to Gov. Patrick Henry 190 confers with Hamilton, Capt. He'm present 405 conquest of the Illinois 171-289
 Corn Island, at Falls of Ohio, taken by Clark 195 corps commanded by, to act under the laws and regulations of the state of Virginia 192 correspondence between Governors Henry and Jefferson and George Rogers Clark 172 contracts for flour and other stores 193 copy of warrant given to William Moires by Clark... 414 crosses the upper branches of the Big Muddy, the North fork of the Saline, the two main branches of the Little Wabash 240, 241 delegate from Harrodstown, Ky., to Va. Assembly 186 decides to take Vincennes, sends letter to British com- mandant, copy of letter, reply to letter by Hamilton	265

description of his taking Fort Gage and Kaskaskia.	458-463
Dejean given permission to visit his headquarters in the Illinois by.....	308
Detroit, plans and hopes for capture of.....	275-278
dictates terms to Hamilton for the surrender of Vin- cennes	266-271
Dillon, Judge John B., memoir of Clark published by..	242 directs Capt. Helm how to manage the Delawares.....	282
dispatches Maj. Lienetot to Vincennes.....	284
divides his army into two divisions; surrounds fort; secures the Governor, &c.; Clark-Mason letter quoted	200
Duff (John) and party of hunters join expedition of Clark	197
Favorably impressed by Hamilton; consents to terms for British surrender of Vincennes; articles of capitulation.....	270, 271, 272
fears losing large tracts of land in Ky., known as the great French Lick.....	411 few changes noticed in the old trail taken by Clark from Kaskaskia to Vincennes; note.....	240
foresight and military genius of; mention.....	463
Fort Massac, Clark conceals boats near.....	198
French assist him in making treaties with Indians....	208
Frenchmen taken prisoners by, offer to go to their homes in Vincennes to bring provisions, etc.....	251 gains for the colony of Virginia the domain later known as "the territory of the U. S. northwest of river Ohio"	171
Gibault accompanied by aged citizen of Kaskaskia, waits on Clark; mention.....	201, 202, 203
Hamilton and Clark; negotiations at Vincennes.....	266, 267, 403, 404, 406, 407
Harrison, Col. Benj., Speaker of house, Williamsburgh, Va., letter to.....	412
Harrodstown, Ky.—Clark appoints convention at	186
Helm informs Clark that the Delawares are hostile....	281
Helm, letter from.....	226
Henry, Moses, appointed Indian agent at Vincennes by.	245
Henry, Governor Patrick, enters heartily into enterprise of Clark; issues instructions for money and supplies..	191
Henry, Governor Patrick, letter to regarding purchase of horses	410
Henry, Governor Patrick, instructions to Clark.....	191, 193
holds council with Indians, makes speech..	208, 209, 212, 279
holds great council with Indians at Cahokia.....	208-214
hopes to send a map of the country to Governor Pat- rick Henry.....	411
Illinois, Clark's conquest of.....	171-289
Indian forays, causes that led Clark on to plan and make the venture of his campaign.....	172

Indians in council with, renew friendship.....	280
Jefferson early foresaw what might be the result of Clark's campaign; mention in note (H. W. B.)...	239
Jefferson, Thomas, letter to.....	453, 454 joined by his colleague, Gabriel Jones, their papers laid before the assembly of Virginia.....	188
journal of	402-407
Kaskaskia, arrives at.....	248
life of, by Wm. H. English, mention.....	242
Kaskaskia river. Clark crosses.....	199-200
learns for the first time of the fall in value of paper money	283
learns that an express captured by the British has let- ters, sends letter warning the British to destroy nothing	264
letter dated Kaskaskia, April 29th, 1779, to the governor of Virginia; Jefferson's correspondence; see foot note	284
leaves Vincennes.....	280
Lernoult, Capt. R. B., letter to.....	415
letter of, to Hamilton, placard to inhabitants at Vin- cennes, mention	244
Lienetot and Clark take up quarters at the falls of Ohio	285
manuscript memoir quoted in notes, as to his conduct before his army.....	249
manuscript memoir quoted in foot note in regard to miss-spelling name of Warrior's Island.....	242
march of army across the Wabash mention in Bow- man's journal.....	250
Mason (George, of Virginia), Clark's letter to. 199, 200,	233
Mason letter, the..... 199, 200, 233, 241, 243, 246,	458
memoir of..... 171, 181, 185, 216, 237, 241-246, 272,	278
memoir of, original manuscript; in whose possession; see foot note (H. W. B.).....	242 memoir of, published in full by William Hayden En- GLISH, from Judge Dillon's copy; mention.....	242
Molres (Myers), William, express messenger sent with letters	272 occupied Kaskaskia; mention.....	462
opposition to Clark's campaign manifested in the Pitts- burgh country	193
orders Bowman to the rear of the army and to put to death of any man who refuses to march.....	252, 253 original private letter of instruction of Governor Henry to Co'. Clark in possession of Indiana Historical Society; mention in foot note.....	193
Poutawatamies, speech to. translation	430
powder (500 pounds) for Kentucky, procured by.....	185, 187
provisions secured at Kaskaskia, by the use of Clark's personal bonds	284
real purposes of campaign.....	191

receives an express from Kentucky, from Col. John Bowman	283 receives an order on Pittsburgh for boats and ammunition	190
receives Fort Sackville, Vincennes, when surrendered by Hamilton; conditions allowed by Clark; articles of capitulation.....	271, 272
seal of, description in foot note.....	338
secrecy enjoined in Governor Patrick Henry's instructions to Clark.....	192
sends orders to Vincennes to make war on the Delawares	282
spies sent with company of Detroit volunteers.....	277
sets out for Williamsburgh in hopes of arriving before the assembly adjourns.....	186
situation before Vincennes.....	254
Smith (Maj.) informs Clark that he has raised four companies on Holston.....	194
Spanish merchant (Vigo) brings news of Hamilton....	238
sugar camps; mention.....	243, 250, 251, 258
takes the old trail over the prairies of Illinois to the Embarrass, near Vincennes.....	240
strategy of, to encourage troops.....	251, 253
thinks French and Spanish unwise in methods of dealing with Indians.....	208
Tobacco's son, sends letter to by Helm.....	206 to call his campaign a "Conquest of the Illinois" misleading; note	172 treaty of alliance given to Kinaytounak, chief of the Renard nation	338
troops of.....	249
views the "Little Wabash" with distrust; orders a pirogue to be built immediately; mention.....	246, 247
Vigo, Francis—Informs Clark of situation at Vincennes	238
Vincennes, capture of.....	246-274
Warrior's (Warren's) Island; mention....	243, 254, 257, 402
"Willing, (The) Clark's galley, under command of Lieut. Rogers.....	280
Clarke, Robt & Co.—Publish a document with an introduction by Hon. Henry Pirtle, pertaining to George Rogers Clark; mention in foot note.....	171
Clinton, Sir Henry—
letter, Clinton to Lord George Germain	445
mention	424-426
Clothing—Necessity for supply of, mention.....	392
Collett, Prof. John—Deep lake called by Clark the permanent pond; mentioned by.....	243
map of, referred to in foot note by H. W. B.....	241
reference to his geological survey of Indiana for 1873; see foot note	241
mention in explanatory note	243
Colonies (American)—A blue belt offered to Indians in name of	351

- Colors (American)—Given to the volunteers of the Illinois country, use of, etc. 234
- Colors (French)—Mention 244
- Commerce of Kaskaskia—Mention 192
- Commerce of the Northwest—Mention 172
- Commonwealth of Pennsylvania—Mention in foot note. 181
- Commonwealth of Virginia—Mention in foot note. 181
- Concarquin (Little)—Mention 435
- Conference (British)—With the Indians at Vincennes, Jan. 26th, 1779 394-397
- Congress, Continental—Mention 305, 309
- Congress of the United States—Mention 227, 286
- Conquest of the Country Northwest of the River Ohio and Life of Gen. George Rogers Clark—By William Hayden English; mention 242
- Continental Congress—Appoints additional peace commissioners, etc. 180
- commissioners appointed to reside at Fort Pitt, etc. 175
- mention 178, 181
- the acts of, mention 171
- Continental Indian Affairs—Historical data on; mention of authorities quoted 181
- Cooshocking—Letter of Capt. John Killbuck to John Montour, dated from 379
- mention 385, 388
- Moravian missionaries at; mention. 386
- Morgan appealed to for aid for ministers and people of warriors, information brought by; mention in Zeisberger's letter to Gibson. 381, 382
- Corn—Mention 253, 438
- Corn Island—An island in the Ohio River (now washed away) near Louisville, Ky.
at head of rapids of the Falls of the Ohio; Clark takes possession of 195
- Cornstock (or Cornstalk)—A Shawnee Indian chief killed in the garrison at Point Pleasant, 1777.
northwestern tribes enraged at the massacre of. 182
- Corvee—Mention 400
- Coshocton (Cooshocking) Ohio—Present Coshocton; word probably means "The Pasture of Light;" founded by Zeisberger and Heckewelder, 1776. 379, 381, 385, 386
- Couagne de—See De Couagne 351
- Council of Virginia—Clark referred to by the governor in. 187, 188 proceedings of, June 18, 1779; in secret journal congress, vol. 1, p. 46, by Dillon; quoted in foot note. 188
- Council Fire—Kindled at Cahokia; Indian speech. 213
- Council with Indians at Cahokia by Clark—Description and speeches 208-214
- Council of Americans—Clark holds council with the Indians. 279
- Council of Virginia—Clark's efforts before, to secure ammunition, etc., for the Kentuckians. 187, 188
- Cournailler, Pierre—Goes to Detroit. 408
- Jehu Hay's letter in favor of. 409

- mention 403
- Court of Post Vincennes—Planckeshaw lands divided amongst members of the court; novel way of acquiring same... 289
- Court—At Vincennes 288
- of civil and criminal jurisdiction instituted at Post Vincennes in June, 1779 288
- Cox, Sanford—A pioneer settler and school teacher of Indiana; quotation from his "Reminiscences"..... 218, 219
- author of "Early Settlements of the Wabash Valley"... 219
- Crawfordsville, Indiana—Present city, site of, mention..... 219
- Creek Indians—Mention..... 392, 394, 395, 396
- Creek Nation—Man from, at the Indian conference at, Ft. Sackville; called Mascous by the Indians..... 394
- Creoles (French)—Volunteers in Clark's army..... 249, 426
- Croghan, George—Agent of Great Britain, Indian trader of Pennsylvania; describes Fort Oulatenon..... 217
- captured by Kickapoos 217
- daily journal of 217
- mention 221
- poacher on beaver warrens of the French..... 217, 218
- Cumberland River—Lands on, reserved for the soldiers; mention 411
- Currency—American money discredited at Kaskaskia..... 284
- Clark learns the fall in value of paper money..... 283, 284
- Decker, Luke—Moses Henry assigns his lands in Vincennes to Declaration of American Independence—Mention..... 181
- Declaration of the King of France—Mention..... 375
- De Couagne—Son of the old man interpreter at Niagara; Peoria chief; visits Celoron in interest of Americans.. 351
- Deer—Clark orders French volunteers to try and kill some deer 249, 250
- Deer Island—John Macomb, a merchant at Detroit, has good at 221
- Deer's Tails—Worn by Indians as method of identification; mention in Zelsberger's letter to Gibson..... 381
- Defiance (Ohio)—Present site of; mention..... 220
- Dejean, Mr. Philip—Legal proceedings commenced against.. 224
- Dejean, Mr. Philip—Obtains permission to visit the Illinois; refuses to take oath of neutrality; desires to conduct his family to the Illinois..... 307-308
- recommended by Hamilton to Haldimand in letter.... 224
- Delaware Chiefs—Buckongahelas and White Eyes; mention. 175
- Delaware Indians—Aid asked for in letter of Gibson to Brodhead 385
- Americans send order to Bentley not to sell powder to apply for reconciliation; Clark refuses to make peace with, unless neighboring tribes guarantee their behavior 282
- by treaty at Fort McIntosh, Capt. White Eyes and followers were received into the Delaware nation. 179, 180
- Captain He'm informs Clark that the Delawares had received a belt from the great council of their nation 281
- chiefs of, at conference Ft. Sackville..... 394

- Clark's answer to; council called 283 confer the name of "Tam-a-nend" in remembrance of their ancient chief, on Col. George Morgan..... 180 Hamilton propose to encourage them to keep watch towards the Ohio; mention in letter to Haldimand 339
 mention
 175, 176, 177, 179, 180, 232, 233, 281, 282, 283, 339, 345, 369, 389, 393, 394, 428. party of traders going to the falls, killed by..... 281 Plankeshaw tribe answer for the good conduct of..... 282 probably present at Indian council on Cherakee river..
232-233
 protection asked for; mention in Gibson's letter to Mc-Intosh 383
 Qui-qua-po-quois refers to the Delawares in speech at Indian council he'd at Detroit, June, 1778..... 320 or (Leni'enape). Rev. John Heckewelder, a Moravian missionary long among the Leni-lenape or Delaware Indians 179
 settle a town at the forks of the White River..... 281 Tobacco's (The) son speech to; upbraids them and tells them they deserve the treatment received..... 282 Tobacco's son, tells them he is security for their good conduct 283
 token (deer tal's on heads) by which the friendly Delawares were to be known at the fort. 381 treaty of peace concluded at Fort Pitt between the commissioners in behalf of the United States and the Delaware nation 286 use of rebel passport by one of the Delawares; mention 393 war declared against by Clark..... 282 warrior (drunken) in Kaskaskia; attack an American woman 281
 DePeyster, Col. Arent Schuyler—British Commandant at Mischillimakinac and Detroit in revolutionary war; born
 New York 1736; died Scotland 1822.
 • affairs at New York; mentions..... 419
 Chevalier to send accounts to..... 444 decides to send Langlade and Gautier to assistance of Lieut.-Gov. Hamilton..... 367
 Ha'dimand to, letter, dated Quebec, May 20, 1779...439, 440
 Haldimand to, letter dated Quebec May 20, 1779....441, 442 letter to, from Col. John Montgomery, asking that De-jean be allowed to conduct his family from Detroit to the Illinois.....307-308 letter of, to Haldimand dated Michillimakinac, Aug. 15, 1778334, 335
 letter to Haldimand dated Michillimakinac, Oct. 24, 1778364-366
 letter to Haldimand; mention in foot note..... 462 opinion of character of Louis Chevalier..... 342 receives letter from Hamilton too late to send Indians to his assistance; makes attempt to aid him..369, 370

Sir Guy Carleton orders him to remain at Michillimakinac	366 sends interpreter to St. Josephs for information.....	368
sends presents to Indians by Langlade and Gautier....	367
sends to Saginaw for corn.....	438
to Haldimand letter, Michillimakinac, May 2. 1779..	432, 433
to Haldimand, letter Michillimakinac 13th May, 1779	436-438
to Haldimand, letter written at Michillimakinac, Oct. 27, 1778, relating to Indian affairs and expedition to Vincennes of Sir Henry Hamilton	367, 368
to Haldimand, letter of, Michillimakinac 29th March, 1779	418, 419
writes letter to Lernoult, relating to Hamilton's expedition to Vincennes; Lernoult writes regarding DePeyster's letter to Bolton, and Bolton writes to Haldimand on same subject.....	369-371
De Quindre, Louis Dagainau—Shawnese under.....	343
Detroit—Approached by Americans.....	352
arrival of the lieutenant governor; inhabitants of St. Vincennes advised to wait for; attempt made to march upon; mention	418
Captain Lord ordered to take troops there.....	463
chief judge of (Dejean) captured by Americans.....	428
Clark's plans for capture of	273, 274, 275, 276, 277
communications will be cut off if rebels capture the Miamis; Hamilton's letter to Haldimand.....	345
Canadians at, will not aid British.....	421
Dejean desires to visit	307
DePeyster writes Haldimand for information concerning	432
express arrives at, from the Illinois; mention.....	330, 332
fears expressed that it may be taken; De Peyster to Haldimand, letter of	433-437
Grant (Capt.) orders vessels to return to.....	370
Hamilton expects reinforcements from.....	238, 420
Hamilton promises to communicate all information to	355
hopes of a re-inforcement at; mention.....	420
Indian council at, June, 1778.....	319-328
Indian's English father at Detroit called by American speaker "a hog in a pen".....	357
Indians partisans of; their cruelty to prisoners....	268-270
"King's (the) Pasture at Detroit;" meaning of.....	280
letter from Hamilton to Haldimand.....	330, 331
letter from Hamilton to Haldimand, dated Detroit, Aug. 8, 1778	332, 333 letter from Hamilton to Haldimand, endorsed Detroit, Nov. 24, 1779	225 letter written by Hamilton to Haldimand, Oct. 7, 1778, informing him of affairs there	351-353
Mention, foot note	462
Mention ..197, 216, 220, 285, 336, 339, 360, 370, 371, 445, 462
no vessel at	331

- papers, correspondence, etc., show that people of Detroit hate neighboring colonies..... 172
- people from, join Hamilton 221
- protection of, considered 370
- proportion of stores taken from Detroit..... 343
- speedy arrival of goods at, necessary..... 221
- traders in the interest of Detroit, factor among the savages of the rivers, Ohio, Maume and St. Joseph, and the country of the Illinois; mention 172
- volunteer company of young men from, discharged on taking oath not to bear arms against the Americans; their conduct 276, 277
- warriors mustered at, mention in Zeisberger's letter to Gibson 381
- Dillon, John Brown—American historian; born West Virginia; died Indiana, 1879. Account of the early adventurers of Kentucky taken from Dillon; mention.... 184
- foot note 184
- anecdote in his history of Indiana, quoted by him from Butler's history of Ky. 215
- at the time, 1843, when Dillon published, all of Clark's writings were in manuscript; see foot note by H.
W. B. 185
- Chapter X. from Dillon's history, quoted, in the George Rogers Clark campaign..... 286-289
- Clark's memoir from 246
- foot note, letter dated Kaskaskia, April 29, 1779, from foot notes from..... 215, 265, 267, 270
- Col. G. R. Clark to the governor of Virginia; Jefferson's correspondence 284
- Judge John B., author of "Historical Notes of the Northwest," quoted 173
- mention... 170, 174, 178, 181, 182, 183, 185, 191, 214, 215, 220, 239, 246, 286.
- note by, mention in foot note 178
- note from, foot note 258
- possessor of a copy of Clark's memoir, mention in foot note 242
- Dodge, John—Mention 379
- letter to John Montour dated Fort Pitt, Jan. 4, 1779... 380
- makes his escape from Quebec; mention 380
- Dominica, Island of—Lieut. Gov. Abbott ordered there..... 312
- Douillanter—Chief of the Hurons, replies to the letter written by an officer of congress 434
- Draper, Lyman C.—Of the Wisconsin Historical Society, possessor of the original Clark manuscript, dies before completion of his great work; see foot note..... 242
- Drummer—Antics of the little drummer in Clark's army.... 247
- Ducks—Mention 254
- Duff, John—And party of hunters join Clark on island in Tennessee River 197
- Dufresne, Michel Marie—Of Kaskaskia, married to Rocheblave 463

- Duncan, Mr.—Mention 387
- Dunmore—Earl of Dunmore, John Murray, governor of the colony of Virginia; name given by him in grant of land by the Pyankeshaws of Vincennes; mention in note 222
- Dunn, Thomas—English treasurer at Quebec; Abbott draws on for payment of expenses..... 314
Abbott draws on for expenses of Indians at Vincennes 317-318
- Du Verner—Desires to return to Detroit; mention..... 391
- Du Vernet, Henry (English)—Second Lieutenant of artillery; mention 349 French medal of, gotten from Wanaquibe; mention in Hamilton's letter to Haldimand 362 lieutenant, makes draught of Wabash River to be sent to Haldimand 393 of the Royal artillery, goes to Vincennes under Major Hay 227 ordered to proceed to Vincennes, mention by Hamilton in letter to Haldimand 229 sketch of the Miamis made by Du Vernet, in Hamilton's letter to Haldimand 362
mention 341, 346, 347, 391
- "Early Settlement of the Wabash Valley"—By Sanford Cox; mention in foot note 219
- Eclipse of the Sun—Clark's party shoots the Falls of the Ohio during an eclipse of the sun..... 195
- Eel River (Riviere a l'Anguille)—The Miamis of, mention in Hamilton's letter to Haldimand 220
- Edgar, John—Officer in British army; later espouses American cause; born Ireland, died Kaskaskia 1832; largest land owner in Illinois; holds prominent positions of trust 315 accompanies Governor Abbott, pays expenses for expedition of English, out of his own pocket; refuses payment 314, 315 hospitality of, at Kaskaskia; entertains LaFayette; personal characteristics of..... 315 imprisoned at Detroit, sent to Quebec, escapes, goes to Boston, thence to Kaskaskia..... 314 received land under grant of Congress..... 315 recommended to Carleton by Abbott as a proper person to be appointed commissary of Indian affairs.. 316 sketch of, in explanatory note..... 314, 315
- Edgar, Mrs. John (Rachel)—Famous for hospitality at her home in Kaskaskia, entertains LaFayette 315
- Editor—(H. W. Beckwith) Explanatory notes..... 199, 216, 219, 230, 289, 310, 402
- Egnseway (Ottawa Indian)—
Captain Chene, Sastaritsi and Egnseway attempt to enter Vincennes..... 424, 425 makes his escape with Captain Chene..... 424

- Embarrass River—Clark's army march down; saw fine land; mention 248
 Clark leaves the flooded country at the Embarrass river 240
 Clark takes the old trail over the prairies of Illinois to the Embarrass river; mention in explanatory notes. H. W. B. 240
 Kennedy, commissary in Clark's army, sent to cross the Embarrass river, to steal boats, mention in Bowman's Journal..... 248
 Emissaries—Mention 204
 England—Mention 230, 323, 325, 326, 331, 434, 461, 462
 English—Acceptance of medals from the king of England by the Indians, mention..... 341 treatment of the Big Knives (Virginians), mention.. 210, 212 troops with Hamilton on Vincennes expedition; number and rank of officers, number of private soldiers 353 colonies in North America renounce their allegiance to Great Britain, mention..... 175 flag, mention 227, 356
 frigate; English frigates in the mouth of the Mississippi river 331, 332
 Indians can have their resources only from, mention.. 340
 Indians of Post Vincennes informed by the inhabitants that their old father, the King of France, was come to life and was angry with them for fighting with the English 204
 mention..... 196, 206, 210, 211, 213, 216, 279, 298
 laws treated with contempt by Rocheblave..... 295-298 residents at Kaskaskia cannot get justice from Rocheblave 395, 398 settlers; dangers which surrounded the first settlers. 286 English, Wm. Hayden, life of George Rogers Clark, by..... 242
 "Memoir" of George Rogers Clark appears in late work of William Hayden English; mention in foot note 171 publishes the Clark memoirs in full, from Judge Dillon's copy 242 Erie, Fort—Express sent from Detroit to..... 332
 mention 341
 Estaing, Charles Henri Theodot (Count de)—Mention..... 450 signs the proclamation of the king of France..... 376
 Evansville, Indiana—Country between Vincennes and Evansville described..... 241
 Express—Arrives at Detroit from the Illinois with news of the taking of Kaskaskia..... 330-332 Clark receives an express from Kentucky from Col. John Bowman..... 283 from Detroit sent to Fort Erie..... 332
 Gibson to send letter to MacIntosh by, mention..... 384
 mention..... 330, 344, 346, 364

- Fallen Timbers—Battle of, mention in note by the editor.... 176
Falls of the Ohio (Louisville, Ky.)—Boats with families of settlers arrive at..... 286
 British Indian scouts sent towards; mention..... 234
 (Cantucky Co.)—Squire Boon to Col. Campbell, letter.. 423
 Captain McKee attacks fort at..... 362
 Clark and Major Lienetot take up quarters at..... 285
 Clark's party shoots the falls during an eclipse of the sun 195
 Clark takes possession of an island (Corn Is.and) near 195
 Hamilton sends Indian party to intercept messengers sent from Vincennes to..... 227
 (Louisville, Ky.) fort there, very insignificant..... 221
 mention..... 203, 274, 285, 340, 354, 357, 362, 400, 426 party of Shawanese, Delawares and Peaukeshas set off on a scout to; mention..... 393, 400 settlers arrive at..... 286
Federal Union—Illinois a leading state of..... 463 Felicity (English Vessel)— arrives at Detroit with letter for Lernout from De Peyster 369
 mention 426
 sent by Lernout with paquet of letters..... 420, 421
Fieri-facias—Writ of, mention..... 461
Fire (Council)—Kindled..... 212
Flag—(American) Displayed at Post Vincennes..... 204
 Clark perceives a flag coming out of Post Vincennes.. 404
 (English) left at Vincennes by Gov. Abbott, thrown into river by Americans..... 356
 (English) mention by Hamilton..... 227
 French; mention..... 374 safety under French flag; mention in proclamation of the king of France..... 374 rebel, mention..... 228
 St. George's, mention..... 228, 229
 St. George's flag to be hoisted on Sundays and holidays at Oulatenon; significance of to Indians; mention in Hamilton's letter to Haldimand... 221, 222
Flagg, Edmund T.—Editor of the Knickerbocker Magazine, author of "The Far West," foot note..... 461
Flour—Clark contracts for flour and other stores..... 193 prohibition of export of..... 448
Floyd, Colonel J.—Describes the Indian mode of warfare. 183, 184 Forts—At Oulatenon, a miserable stockade..... 221 building of one, necessary on so important a spot as the forks at the conflux of the Ohio and the Mississippi 339 chain of; historical error in regard to..... 216, 217
 English had eight forts besides the Great Stone Fort.. 396
 French use of the word..... 216
 mention..... 181, 182, 216, 217, 219, 221
 of Pennsylvania, Virginia and Kentucky often were made without the aid of a single nail or spike.... 183
 (the ancient) mention..... 213

- of the western part of Pennsylvania, Virginia and Kentucky, not only places of defence, but the residence of a small number of families, and consisted of cabins, block houses and stockades..... 182
- Fort Clark—At Kaskaskia; Montgomery writes letter to De Peyster from307, 308
- Fort Chartres—Abandoned as headquarters of the Illinois.. 461 commandant at, mention..... 460
 British commandant at, ignores the Pyankeshaws land grant; mention in note..... 222
 Mackarty, commandant at..... 459
 mention of.....217, 310, 316
 occupied by British, under Captain Thomas Stirling.. 460 to be abandoned and troops posted at Kaskaskia..... 291 too far from Pensacola to send provisions to, expense of carriage too great.....291, 292
- Fort Chartis (Fort Chartres)—James Willing writes to Ha'dimand that it had been destroyed by troops under Major H. Hamilton..... 293
- Fort Erie—Captain Grant orders vessels at Fort Erie to return to Detroit333, 370
- Fort Gage—Burned, mention..... 459 examination of Henry Butler at, before Rocheblave304-306 location of; number of troops there in 1776..... 459 named for General Thomas Gage..... 462 official headquarters of the Illinois, mention..... 461 opinion of H. W. Beckwith as to location of.....458-463 (so called) remains of, Illinois should purchase and make a park of..... 460
 why built..... 459
- Fort Laurens—On the Tuscarawas river.
- Fort Lawrence—Letter written from, by Gibson to Morgan.. 386
 mention382-386
- Fort Massac—Clark moves his party to a short distance above Massac..... 198
 Clark plans to leave the Ohio at Fort Massac..... 197
 Fort Massac, (Fort Massiac) built by order of Mackarty; location of..... 459
- Fort McIntosh (now Beaver, Pa.)—Agreement in a separate article relating to Captain White Eyes and his followers; mention in note.....179, 180
 Bu-kon-ga-he-la takes no part in treaty at; mention in note by the editor..... 177 treaty of, mention foot note..... 179
- Fort Miami—in the battle of the "Fallen Timbers" the British did not come from their Fort Miami as agreed on; mention in note by editor..... 176
- Fort Ouiattenan, mention.....216, 217, 223
- Fort Patrick Henry (Vincennes)—Clark writes Governor Patrick Henry from, dated March 9, 1779.....410, 411, 412
 mention414-417

- Fort Pitt—Clark to apply to the commanding officer at for boats 192
deserter from (Henry Butler) gives Rocheblave information of English successes..... 309
Butler forced, at that place, to bear arms for the rebels 304
mention 175, 306, 315, 386
- Fort Sackville—English name for Vincennes; why so named by Lieut. Gov. Abbott..... 311 original work of Lieut. Gov. Abbott at, referred to in foot note..... 244
Vincennes so called in articles of capitulation..... 270
- Fourteenth Regiment—Two companies of, at Kaskaskia, under Captain Lord..... 462
- Foy, Captain Edward—Secretary to Haldimand; mention of death of 450
- France—Cedes western country to Great Britain, 1760, mention foot note..... 459
Illinois a possession of, mention..... 462
king of, mention..... 202, 204, 211, 329, 373, 376, 434 king of, the late father of the Indians..... 357 treaty of alliance between France and the United States, mention foot note..... 197
Rocheblave declares laws of France to be in force in Kaskaskia 259, 298
mention..... 192, 217, 202, 299, 459
- Francis—Tobacco's son, Piankeshaw chief. See Tobacco's Son.
- French—Allies of the Indians, mention..... 431
belts for..... 351
customs in relation to Indian trading forts or stockades 216
friends of Big Knives..... 212 inhabitants of Kaskaskia, Cahokia and Post Vincennes take oath of allegiance..... 203, 214, 286 inhabitants of Kaskaskia, Clark wins the esteem and confidence of..... 196, 201
mention 208, 215, 217, 250, 287, 310, 331, 340, 350, 351 proclamation at the Cascaskias..... 456, 457 purchase of land of the Piankeshaws, mention in Hamilton's letter to Haldimand..... 343 reference to the Spanish joining the French, in Hamilton's speech to the Indians in council at Detroit, 1778 323
reports spread in Illinois villages that the French are soon to take possession of the country..... 334
- French King—Old father of the Indians assists the Big Knives 211
- French Lick—Tract of land owned by Clark in Kentucky which he fears losing, mention..... 411
- Frenchman—Captured and made prisoner by the Poutcou-atamies of Detroit, mention..... 234
- Frenchmen—Mention 249, 250, 251, 254, 357
- French Memoir (The)—Mention 208

- French Militia—Of Vincennes had taken oath of allegiance to the U. S. 227 volunteer company of French militia joins a detachment of Capt. Bowman's company. 203
- French Officers—In treaty with the savages of St. Joseph. 331 placed in command of volunteers in the Illinois. 205
- French People—Unjustly favored by Rocheblave at Kaskaskia 295, 298
- French River—Report of low water in. 368
- French Settlements—Of the west, Vincennes a type of. 310
- French Settlers—Few at the fort (Oulatenon), mention. 221 take oath of fidelity to his Britannic majesty. 221
- French Subjects—Mention 376
- French Volunteers—Mention. 203, 227, 244
- French War—No doubt of existence of. 391
- Furs—Large quantity in vicinity. caused building of Fort Oulatenon 217
- Fur River—Clark crossed the Fur River, February 16, 1779—extract from Major Bowman's journal. 248
- "Gage" (The)—English vessel on the lakes, mention. 369
- Gage, Gen. Thomas—Succeeds Amherst as commander of British forces in America. 460, 461
 Fort Gage at Kaskaskia named for. 462 issues proclamation to the inhabitants of the Illinois. 461 letter to Haldimand, mention foot note. 461
 New York, March 16th, 1772, writes letter to Haldimand in relation to barracks for English troops at Pensacola. 290-292
- Galalemend—Name of Captain John Killbuck; letter to John Montour so signed. 379
- Galleys (boats)—Mention 261, 272, 291, 292
- Galvis, Don Bernardo de—Governor of New Orleans; letter of Hamilton to, dated St. Vincennes, Jan. 13th, 1779. 377, 378
- Garrisons—Established at Cahokia and Kaskaskia by Clark. 205
- Garrison—In Kentucky, mention. 192
- Gautier, de Verville, Charles—Nephew of Langlade, born Mackinac, died Prairie du Chien about 1803.
 arrives at Michilimackinac with Langlade, to act on orders of De Peyster. 367 express sent requiring him to move with a body of Indians 418 letter to De Peyster, gives an account of expedition mention 436, 437 may assemble body of Indians from LaBay to Prairie du Chien and in River St. Pierre. 365
 mention. 367, 398, 399
 receives orders from Hamilton to join him. 436
- George, Robin—Arrives at Kaskaskia from Orleans, mention. 429
- Germaine, Lord George—(i. e. Lord George Sackville) English secretary of state for the colonies during revolution. See Sackville.
- Haldimand's letter to, dated Quebec, 7th June, 1779. 445-449 letter from, to Hamilton, in regard to appointment of Captain La Mothe, mention.....	401

mention	311
Geological Survey of Indiana—Prof. John Collett on Knox Co. reference to, in foot note.....	241
Gibault, Rev. Pierre—Born Montreal, 1737, died New Mad- rid, Mo., 1804, priest at Kaskaskia, Cahokia and Vin- cennes, accompanied by citizens of Post Vincennes, re- turns to Kaskaskia.....	205 active for the rebels; Clark sends for Gibault and holds conference with him in regard to Post Vincennes..	203
Clark sends by him a present to Tobacco's son.....	206 his aid and sympathy for Clark's success was a risk that invited his own arrest for treason, foot note	201
mention	330
mention by Bentley in letter to Murray.....	301 party of, arrives safe at Post Vincennes; inhabitants of, agree to proposa., go to the church where the oath of allegiance was administered.....	204 sets out with Dr. Lafont and his retinue, on the 14th of July, 1778, for Post Vincennes.....	204
(the priest) Hamilton desires to capture and punish for aid given by him to the Americans, mention..	234 vicar-general of the bishop of Quebec for Illinois and adjoining countries, secular priest of the French and Indians, etc., mention in foot note by H. W. B.	201
waits on Clark.....	201, 202
Gibson, Col. John—Born Lancaster, Pa., 1740, died 1822 near Braddock's Field, Pa. Henry writes letter to, asking for news of his family..	429
letter of, to Brodhead, Fort Lawrence, Jan. 22d, 1779..	385
letter of Zeisberger to Gibson, dated Ochi Town, Jan. 19th, 1779.....	381
letter to MacIntosh, dated Fort Lawrence, Jan. 22d, 1779.....	384 letter to Morgan from Fort Lawrence, Jan. 22d, 1779, relating situation of the Moravians and Chris- tian Indians at Cooshocking.....	386
letter to Richard Taylor, major of the Fifteenth Vir- ginia regiment, Fort Pitt.....	387, 388
urges that Beale and Harrison be sent at once to Fort Lawrence	387
Gleece, Indian Chief—Mention.....	433
Girciult (Girault) John—To Lernoult, letter of, dated Fort Pt. Henry, St. Vincent, March 21st, 1779.....	417
Girtie (Girty, Gistie, Gistre) Simon—Mention.....	383, 386
mention in Zeisberger's letter to Gibson.....	381
Goddard, Mr. (James S.?)—Writes De Peyster that of twenty pucheons of rum had been sent for the post.....	368
Gotier (Gautier)—Indian officer sent by De Peyster to as- semble the Indians at St. Joseph.....	369

- Gouin, Charles—Arrives at Detroit express from the Miamis, with news of Indian affairs..... 351
- Gouin, Nicholas—Mention..... 351
- Government (Authorities)—Letters to, mention..... 206
- Graham, Captain (English officer)—Mention..... 427
- Grand Chief (Francis, Tobacco's Son)—In a speech informs the De'awares of their baseness..... 282
- the Tobacco's son declared he was a brother and friend to the Big Knives, mention..... 255
- Grand Door to the Wabash—Name by which Indians called Tobacco's son, the Plankeshaw..... 200
- Grand Louis—Son of, mention..... 443
- Grandolos Vigiel—Secretary to the Count D'Estaing..... 376
- Grand River—Ottawas and Chippewas winter near..... 367
- mention..... 364, 369, 432, 433.
- Grand River Indians—Advised to go to Detroit..... 419
- Grand Traverse—Mention..... 432
- Grande Coite, a Peaukashaa chief..... 396
- Grande Glaise (Au Glaize River)—Ottawas of, join Hamilton 220
- Grande Quoete—Great chief of the Peaukashaas, delivers to Hamilton a string with a scalp..... 396
- Grant, Captain (English officer)—Brings provisions in sloop to Hamilton..... 354
- sends orders for vessels at Fort Erie to return to Detroit..... 370
- Grants of Land—Mention..... 190, 222, 288
- Grant of Land by the Pyankashaws of Vincennes—Boundaries of, mention in note..... 222
- Gray (E. W.)—Deputy sheriff at Montreal, mention in Hamilton's letter to Haldimand..... 224
- Great Britain—
- Bentley alleges that Rocheblave had taken oath of allegiance to France, Spain and Great Britain.... 299
- Gibault, a subject of, mention in foot note..... 201
- ignores the Pyankeshaw land grant, mention in note.. 222
- Illinois a possession of, mention..... 462, 463
- mention..... 175, 181, 182, 376
- treaty of peace between the United States and Great Britain, reference to, in note, H. W. B..... 289
- trade interest among the savages backed up, and Canada inspired by Great Britain..... 172
- western country ceded to, by France..... 459
- Great Council of the Big Knife (Congress)—Mention..... 210
- Great Council Fire (Congress)—Mention..... 211
- Great Fire (Congress)—Mention..... 210
- Great Spirit—Mention..... 209, 212, 279, 320, 321
- Green Belt—Presented by Sa-pa-tia at the council held at Detroit, June 1778..... 320
- Guides—Of Clark's party to be assisted by John Duff and party of hunters..... 189, 198, 301
- Gunpowder—Mention..... 377
- Gudert—An interpreter; with two settlers seized by the Virginians, mention..... 336

- Gunner (Master)—Killed at Vincennes..... 426
- Haldimand, Gen. Frederick—English governor general of Canada 1778-1784, born about 1720, canton of Berne, Switzerland, died, Switzerland, 1791.
- Haldimand letters—
- Abbott, letter to..... 312
 - Bolton, letters from..... 379, 391, 420, 421
 - Bude Gen., personal letter to..... 450-452
 - Clinton, Sir Henry, letter to..... 445
 - De Peyster, letters from..... 334, 335, 364-366, 367-368
 - De Peyster, letters to..... 349, 440, 441
 - Germaine, Lord George, letter to..... 445-449
 - Hamilton, letters from..... 220-225, 227-235, 330-333, 339-347, 351-353, 354-355, 359, 360, 361-363, 389-393, 400.
 - Sackville, letter to..... 173
 - letter to, from Gen. Gage, relating to barracks at Pensacola..... 290-292
 - letter to, from Sir Henry Hamilton, reporting his arrival with troops at Vincennes..... 227-235
 - official criticism of same..... 235-236
 - letter to, from James Willing..... 293-294
 - letter of Sackville to, in Canadian Archives; mention in foot note..... 174
 - orders Abbott with a detachment of royal artillery to go to Dominica or Barbadoes..... 312
 - succeeded Sir Guy Carleton as lieutenant governor of the Province of Quebec in 1778; mention in foot note..... 174
 - stationed at New York, had two companies of troops at Kaskaskia..... 463
- Haldimand Collection, Canadian Archives—Letter from Hamilton to Haldimand..... 220-225
- of documents in Canadian Archives, mention..... 216
 - in Canadian Archives, mention in foot note..... 462
 - conference with the Indians, Oulattionons, Quinquabones (Kickapoos), and Mascoutins, Detroit, June 29th, 1778..... 319-328
 - see Canadian Archives.
- Haldimand, The (Vessel)—Departure from Niagara, mention..... 422
- Half Kings Brother—Goes to enquire into truth of statements made by Hurons..... 369
- "Hair-Buying General"—Term used by Clark, meaning Hamilton..... 255
- Halifax—Mention..... 445, 450
- Hamilton, General Sir Henry—English lieutenant governor of Detroit, later governor general of Canada, governor ad-interim Nov. 1784 to Nov. 1785; later, governor Dominica; absence of weakens the garrison at Detroit.... 369-370
- advices of the work of the Indians which reach Lord Sackville tell of Hamilton's success over General Clark..... 174

answer to George Rogers Clark	403
Approaches gate of Fort Vincennes and demands sur- render of the post.....	229
army for Vincennes expedition, strength and personnel of troops	353 asks Clark's real reason for declining terms as pro- posed; Clark's answer.....	268-270
asks for approval of Haldimand with regard to his cancellation of grant of lands of the Pianke- shaws, etc.....	353
assembles Indians near Detroit, informs them of ap- proach of Americans	353 authorizes Major Hay to receive the oath of allegiance from inhabitants of St. Vincennes	237
British commandant at Vincennes, receives a letter from Clark demanding surrender of post; replies to letter	265 called the "Hair Buying General" by Clark in his pla- card to the inhabitants of Vincennes.....	255
capture of at Post Vincennes, mention.....	174 changes the medals of the war chiefs at council held at Detroit; see list of, in foot note.....	325
Clark conceives favorable impression of.....	271
condoles with the Indians before entering upon his dis- course at the council held at Detroit	321
copies of letters from; mention	445
DePeyster desires to gain information of, and to assist.	367
De Peyster's letter to, dated Michilimackinac, 29th March, 1779.....	418-419
DePeyster's letter to, dated Michilimackinac, May 2d, 1779	432-433
De Peyster's letter to, dated Michilimackinac, May 13th, 1779	436-438
DePeyster sends Langlade and Gautier to assistance of; sends presents for Indians	367
DePeyster writes Lernoult that Hamilton left for Vin- cennes without his knowledge	369 describes Fort Oulattenon and its inhabitants.....	218 engages to deliver up Fort Sackville, Vincennes, to Clark; articles of capitulation signed by.....	270, 271
expected to return to Detroit	419
expedition of, undertaken, without orders from Haldi- mand	446-450
gives the Peoria chief an English medal in exchange for his French one	400
holds council at Miami's town, with the Shaw- anese Indians, number present	259
ignores the Pyankeshaw land grant.....	222
in camp at Rocher de Bout, 14th Oct., 1778, communi- cates account of proceedings of Rebels at Vin- cennes	356-358
in council with the Indians, Detroit, June 29, 1778..	319-328

informed by Hurons that Americans are approaching	352, 353 informed of proceedings of rebels at Vincennes by Neegik, Ottawa war chief	356, 358
in his report encloses copy of letter of Helm to Clark	226
jealous of attachment of Tobacco's son to Helm, offers presents, etc.	278
letter from, in camp at Rocher de Bout, Oct. 14th, 1778, reporting progress of expedition	354, 355
letter from Celoron, dated Miamis, 28th Aug., enclosed in Hamilton's of the 16th and 17th Sept., 1778	336, 337
letter from Detroit, account of occurrences since previous report	351-353 letter from, at Detroit, mention in DePeyster's letter to Haldimand	364 letter to De Galvis, dated Vincennes, Jan. 13th, 1779	377-378
letter to Haldimand, Detroit, without date	330-331
letter to Haldimand, Canadian Archives, B, 122, Haldimand collection	220-225
letter to Haldimand dated Camp Petite Riviere, Nov. 1st, 1778	361-363
letter to Haldimand dated Detroit, Aug. 8th, 1778	332, 333
letter to Haldimand dated Detroit, Sept. 22, 1778	339-347 letter to Haldimand dated Vincennes, reporting progress of troops from Detroit, etc.	227-235
official remarks on same	235-236
letter to Haldimand dated Vincennes, Jan. 30th, 1779	400
letter to Lernoult, dated Vincennes, March 8th, 1779, by permission of General Clark	408
meets Clark at church for conference	267
mention	173, 174, 181, 220, 224, 225, 231, 232, 233, 234, 261, 269, 270, 301, 302, 325, 328, 342, 349, 355, 359, 377, 392
mention, foot note	215
morning guns of, heard by Virginians; mention in Major Bowman's journal	248
notice of, to inhabitants of Vincennes, translation	237
orders a lieutenant with militia to go to the Miamis	343
official letter making report of his progress from Detroit to Vincennes; explanatory note	216-219
presents a certificate to Qui-qua-po-quois for his attachment to his majesty	328
presents an axe to Cha-ha, Quiattonon war chief; mention	327
presents war axe to Peemembikaetack, Poutawattamie war chief, at council held at Detroit	322
proposes to Clark, a truce for three days	404
proportion of stores taken from Detroit by; see table	348
reads oath of allegiance to the inhabitants of Vincennes	230
reply to speech of Sa-pa-tia at council of Indians held at Detroit, 1778	326

- sends express to Mr. Stuart with belts for Indians.... 232 sets out from Detroit, 7th Oct., 1778, arrives Vincennes, 17th Dec., takes possession of; mention in letter to De Galvis 377
 signs terms of capitulation on surrender of Vincennes..
270, 271, 406-407
 sings war song with Indians 346 speech of to Indians at council held at Detroit, June, 1778321-322, 324, 325, 326
 troops for Vincennes expedition, all volunteers..... 353 Wiiling writes Haldimand that Hamilton and troops have destroyed Fort Chartis..... 293 writes Louis Chevalier 342
 Hampshire, Va.—Lead sent by Governor Henry to, mention., 193
 Hand, General Edward (American Officer)—Born in Ireland, died Lancaster county, Pa., 1802; Butler testifies as to the number of Hand's troops..... 306
 Clark to apply to General Hand at Pittsburg for powder and lead necessary for his expedition..... 193 his troops mostly deserters from the British army... 306 Hanover (Virginia)—Governor Patrick Henry waited upon at, by George Rogers Clark..... 187
 Harmar, General Josiah—Stops the practice of the court at,
 Vincennes of granting lands to every applicant..... 288
 Harrison, Ensign—Necessary for him to repair to Fort Lawrence at once..... 387
 Harrison, Colonel Benj.—Clark's letter to, dated Fort Patrick
 Henry, St. Vincent, March 10th, 1779..... 412
 Harrison, Governor—Letter of, to James Madison, dated Vincennes, Jan. 19, 1802, quoted; see notes by Dillon.... 288 Harrison, President William H.—"Memoirs" of, quoted in foot note, on historical data on our continental Indian affairs 181
 Harrod, Captain Wm.—Born Virginia 1737; appointed by Clark to the recruiting service..... 193 commander of company in Clark's campaign; mention 196
 Harrodstown, Ky.—Later called Harrodsburg; named for James Harrod, who built the first house (or white man's cabin) in Kentucky.....
 Clark appoints a general meeting at, 6th of June, 1776;
 election takes place 186
 spies sent out by Clark, bring information to..... 189
 Hay, Jehu—British officer 408, 409
 Hay, Maj. John—British superintendent of Indian affairs at Detroit; appointed by Hamilton as major to the Detroit militia 227-229
 authorized by Lieut. Gov. Hamilton to receive the oath of allegiance from the inhabitants of St. Vincennes 237 crue'ty toward American prisoners.....269, 270 deputy agent, in council with the Indians, Detroit, June 29th, 1778 319-328
 mention.....341, 361, 420

- orders given him by Hamilton in relation to capture of Vincennes 228-229
- plan of, for strengthening Vincennes adopted as least expensive; mention 390
- present at conference between Clark and Hamilton 267-268
- Heckewelder (Heckwelder) Rev. John (Gottlieb Ernestus)—
A Moravian missionary to N. Amer. Indians, born Bedford, England, 1743, died Bethlehem, Pa., 1823; noted for his writings as well as his missionary labors. gives the aboriginal name of White Eyes as Koguetagecht-on 179
- historical data by him, on our continental Indians affairs quoted from, in foot note 181
- incident relating to the devotion of Captain Wingenund to Heckewelder while on his way from the mission on the Muskingum to Pittsburg; mention in note 179
- quoted as authority for, the anecdote of Colonel George Morgan, etc.; see foot note 180
- speech of Koguetagecht-on (Captain White Eyes), Delaware chief, quoted from writings of; mention 178
- White Eyes and the missionary, friends and comrades of the forest; mention in note 179
- Helm, Captain Leonard—Born in Virginia, died in Louisville, 1782; served in Clark's campaign 196
- appointed commandant at Vincennes; agent for Indian affairs for department of the Wabash 206, 285
- Bailey sent by Clark to join Helm at St. Vincent; mention in note 223
- Celoron makes his escape before arrival of 223
- ceremonious in dealing with Tobacco's son 207
- Clark desires Helm to give no information of Hamilton's strength, etc., he being on parole 404
- Clark directs him how to deal with the Indians 206, 282
- Clark sends answer to Hamilton by 404
- company of, in Clark's expedition; mention 194
- editor of this volume follows the original spelling in Helm's letter to Clark 226
- informs Clark that a party of traders were killed and plundered by the Delawares of White River 281
- invited to Indian council 207
- letter from, dated 14th Aug., 1778, addressed to the head men of the Creek Indians; mention 392
- letter of, for the chief of the Mascous; mention 395
- letter to Clark explaining his condition, and his inability to defend Vincennes 226
- letter to Clark taken by British from a French messenger 230
- makes valuable treaty with Indians at fort (Oulatenon) mentioned in anecdote of capture of Vincennes, foot note 215
- mention 196, 226, 258, 272, 281, 424
- present at conference between Clark and Hamilton; makes suggestions 267-268, 405, 424

- private property of, captured by British at Vincennes, restored to him 229-230
remains at Vincennes on parole..... 232 surprises Indians while in council at Fort Ouiatenon; surrenders Vincennes to British under Hamilton; mention in letter of Hamilton to Haldimand..... 229-230 taken prisoner at Vincennes by the British under Hamilton 215
takes command at Vincennes; well received by the people 206
Tobacco's son much attached to, calls He m his brother
..... 277-278
to raise a company in Clark's expedition..... 191
Henderson & Co.—Kentucky Land Co.; mention 185
Henderson, Colonel Richard—Of the Kentucky Land Co., born Hanover, Va., 1735; died North Carolina, 1785.
one of the purchasers of the Cherokees, retards the business of Clark with the assembly..... 188
Henry, Ann (wife of Moses Henry)..... 245-258
Henry, Moses—Indian agent at Vincennes; mention 280 arrested and confined in the fort at Vincennes on suspicion of attachment to the American cause..... 258 assigns his lands in Vincennes to Luke Decker..... 245 c'aims land in virtue of a French or British grant; assigns it to an old citizen of Vincennes..... 245 in known sympathy with the Americans..... 244-245 made Indian agent at Vincennes by Clark 245 writes Gibson for news of his family..... 429
Henry, Mrs.—Mother of Moses Henry..... 429
Henry, Mrs. Moses' (Ann)—Claims land under the act of congress, Aug. 29th, 1788; mention 245 informs her husband of the approach of the Americans 245, 258 granted lot in Vincennes..... 245
Henry, Governor Patrick—Born Hanover county, Va., 1736; died Charlotte county, Va., 1799; Bowman's letter to;
copy taken by Hurons at the Falls of the Ohio..... 413
Clark communicates his designs to 190 correspondence between Governors Henry and Jefferson and George Rogers Clark; mention 172 enters heartily into Clark's enterprise, issues instructions for money and supplies 190
George Rogers Clark's letter to, dated Fort Patrick Henry, March 9th, 1779..... 410-411 ill in Hanover; Clark waits upon him..... 187 letters of intructions from, to George Rogers Clark;
mention 171
letter to, from the inhabitants of Vincennes..... 329 open instructions to Clark to protect the settlers of Kentucky 191 original private letter of instructions of Gov. Henry to Clark; mention in foot note..... 193 receives intelligence of Clark's movements..... 214

- secret instructions to General Clark 191-193
- Historical Data—On continental Indian affairs; mention of authorities quoted, in foot note by the editor, H. W. Beckwith 181
- Historical Notes of the Northwest—By John B. Dillon; quoted 173
- Holland, Major—Mention 451
- Holston—Great island of the Holston.
- Holston River—A tributary of the Tennessee river.....
- Major William Smith advances money to recruit men on Ho'ston and to meet Clark in Kentucky..... 191
- Major Smith raises four companies on Holston to be marched immediately to Kentucky 194
- mention 454
- Horses—Clark writes Governor Henry in regard to the purchase of horses 410, 411
- mention 247, 386
- purchased by continental congress, at Vincennes, taken by Indians 230
- Renc'o, a Canadian, purchases horses for Clark..... 436
- sent by Hurons to bring families and effects of Delaware to Sanduske 369
- sent to the Miamis to transport provisions at that place 341
- Hospitals—Mention 231
- Hoy, Andrew—Provost or military sheriff at Kaskaskia; official order to 461
- Hunters—Mention 197
- Hunters Road—Road leading from the east into Kaskaskia, frequently described to Clark by the guide, Saunders.. 199
- Huron Indians—And Santuske Indians request of Lernoult an asylum for their women and children..... 369
- chiefs of, at conference at Fort Sackville..... 394
- copy of letter of Bowman to Governor Henry, taken at the Falls of the Ohio by..... 413
- from Sandooski inform Hamilton of approach of rebels to Detroit 352
- mention 324, 369, 434, 435
- return to Vincennes; mention 393
- Huron Village—Montforton's letter to Lernoult dated from.434-435
- Hutchins, Lieut.—Opinion of galley..... 292
- ordered to draw bills on chief engineer for expenses of works at Pensaco'a 291-292
- Hutchins, Thomas—Ensign in British service, later surveyor general of the United States; draws plans of Kaskaskia; foot note 459
- H. S.—In a letter to a friend, tells of employment given him after the taking of Vincennes, etc., dated Port St. Vincennes, 18th April, 1779..... 428
- H. W. B. (Beckwith)—See Beckwith. H. W. (author of this volume)—Map of..... 242, 243
- note pertaining to the vessel, "The Willing," name of, foot note 239
- note relating to Celoron, quoted from General Clark's letter to George Mason; foot note..... 223

- refers to Collett's map of the geological survey of Indiana 241
- signs explanatory notes.....
 - 172, 179, 180, 184, 185, 189, 191, 193, 197, 200, 201, 206,
 - 219, 222, 223, 226, 241, 242, 243, 244, 245, 246, 270, 273,
 - 287, 312, 314, 315, 316, 458, 459, 460, 462, 463.
- Illinois Country (The)—No British commandant in the Illinois 463
 - civil officers nominally control Vincennes..... 310
 - claimants to lands in..... 287-288
 - County of Virginia, by act general assembly of Virginia, 1778 214
 - Edgar, John, leading citizen of 315
 - French inhabitants of take oath of allegiance to Virginia 286
 - French of, join rebels, number of..... 352
 - Hamilton decides not to send large party to; reason for 231
 - hostile Indians in, approach Clark's forces..... 237
 - horses in, hurt by hard usage 411
 - Indians of Vincennes send to the Illinois for grain.... 220
 - lands in, vast acreage of conveyed in grant of Pyankehaw; grant repudiated 222
 - mention.172, 173, 189, 195, 196, 205, 222, 227, 231, 232, 235, 236, 237, 238, 240, 244, 257, 276, 286, 307, 308, 330, 332, 345, 346, 348, 349, 352, 357, 363, 364, 365, 366, 398, 410, 411, 415, 454.
 - proportion of stores taken from Detroit for Hamilton's expedition to 348
 - settlers, large numbers desire to come to the Illinois.. 443
 - troops, raising of in the Illinois 257
 - villages in, Gibault secular priest of, mention foot note. 201
 - Virginians ill in, with the malady of the country.... 437
- Illinois, Eastern Department of—George R. Clark mentioned as commandant of; letter from Hamilton to Haldimand 230
- Illinois, Fort of..... 295, 362
- Illinois Indians—Be'ts sent to, by the Ottawas and Chippawas 366
 - Clark makes peace treaty with..... 214
 - Indian trade—James Willing has barge of goods suitable for such trade..... 293
- Illinois—Province of; mention 310
- Illinois River—Gautier and Langlade ordered by Hamilton to meet him at 436
 - Major Lienetot and a company of volunteers sent up the river by Clark 284
 - lands bordering on; mention in Colonel Todd's proclamation 286-287
 - mention 172, 284, 287, 364, 366, 436
 - mention in speech of Mahimamba..... 319
 - Pottawatamies ordered to move down..... 365
- Illinois—State of; mention..... 171, 315, 460, 463
 - land titles in; James Ramsey has power to examine 315-316
- Independence—War for, goes against British; mention..... 463

Independent—Government of Kentucky, desired under certain circumstances by inhabitants of Kentucky.....	186
Independence—Warren county, Indiana, on site of former Indian village	218
Indian—See Indians.
Indiana—Geological survey of Indiana for 1873, by Prof. John Collett, mention in foot note	241
Historical Society; original private letter of Gov. Henry to Col. Clark in the possession of; mention in foot note	193
Historical Society; William Hayden English, president of; mention in foot note	171
State Archives at Indianapolis, mention in foot note..	316
state of; mention	171
vast acreage of land in, conveyed in grant of the Pyankashaws, mention in note.....	222
Indianapolis— Indiana State Archives at; mention in foot note	316
Indians—Advised to make peace with Americans by the inhabitants of Post Vincennes	204 affairs at Vincennes occupy whole time of Gov. Abbott..	313 affairs on the Wabash settled by Helm and Tobacco's son	207 agent; Clark appoints Moses Henry, Indian agent at Vincennes after recapture of.....	245
Alabama, mention.....	389
canoe captured by men of Clark's party.....	253
Cherakees, mention.....	232, 233, 295, 389, 453
Chickasaws	456
Chicas	456
Chickasaws (Chickasaws), mention.....	232, 233, 345, 389, 395, 453
Chippeways, mention	341, 361, 362, 366, 367, 374, 380, 393, 394, 397, 418, 432, 436
chiefs with Hamilton at capture of Detroit, mention...	228 chiefs satisfied with British.....	254
Chippeways, Chibwas, mention.....	380, 393, 394, 397
Choctaws, mention	398, 396
council at Cahokia with George R. Clark, description and speeches	208-214 council at Cherakee River.....	232, 233
council at Vincennes with Americans, speeches made; Indians reject overtures of Americans..	356-358, 394-397
council called by the Tobacco's son to consider Clark's letter	207 council held with Indians at Detroit, June, 1778....	319-328
council with Clark; mention.....	280
council with Outawas, Chippeways and Pottawattamies. Haldimand to receive an account of.....	342
Creeks or Mascous.....	392, 394, 395, 396, 426
De'awares, mention....	345, 369, 381, 383, 384, 385, 389, 393, 394, 428.
department—mention	401, 428, 446-449, 453

- Indians in the habit of saluting Fort Vincennes, mention 257
- expect presents from English; compare them with those given by French 313
- Fox Indians, mention 418
- gifts to, necessary; mention in DePeyster's letter to Haldimand 365
- grand council at fort (Ouiatenon) 223
- Hurons, mention 352, 369, 393, 394, 424, 425, 427, 434, 435
- inhabitants of Fort Vincennes, citizens of the U. S. 204
- La Bay, mention 367
- Lake, mention 224, 359, 395, 397
- Mascous or Creeks 392, 394, 395, 396, 426
- mention. 172, 173, 196, 223, 224, 225, 227, 231, 232, 244, 249, 254, 257, 261, 267, 273, 276, 279, 280, 281, 293, 294, 316, 317, 318, 325, 343, 344, 346, 351, 354, 356, 357, 360, 362, 363, 365, 366, 367, 371, 374, 396, 405, 418, 420, 421-423, 425, 428, 432-434.
- Miamis, mention 233, 234, 278, 340, 344, 352, 355, 358, 361, 362, 391, 392, 393, 397, 424, 425, 439.
- Mississippi, mention 367
- mode of making war described 183, 184
- nations on the Wabash, treaty with by Clark 207
- number of, as computed by Hamilton at Fort of Ouiatenon; mention in letter to Haldimand 221
- of Onatache tepicouos du coeur de celf and those of St. Joseph not yet returned from Kaskaskia, mention in Celoron's letter to Hamilton 336
- of River St. Joseph, mention 207
- of the lakes; Vincennes Indians informed by rebels that Indians of the lakes are coming to their assistance 354
- Ottawas, mention 220, 232, 233, 322, 324, 341, 356, 361, 362, 366, 367, 380, 389, 393, 394, 397, 398, 418, 424, 425, 432, 436, 456.
- Oubash, mention 226, 231, 319, 325, 326, 330, 332, 333, 339, 341, 343, 351, 353, 354, 356, 359, 389, 393, 395, 396, 428
- Ouebeche mention 393, 395, 396
- Oueattonons } mention. 214, 223, 225, 227, 232, 280, 319, 324, 326-329, 343, 351, 394, 395.
- Ouiattoonos }
- Peaukeshaws (Peaukashaas), mention 222, 343, 393, 394, 396, 400.
- Peoria, mention 351, 389, 400, 425
- Pottawatamies, mention 220, 232, 234, 334, 341, 342, 356, 357, 361, 362, 365, 367, 380, 393, 399, 418, 425, 430, 431, 444, 456.
- Poutcouattamies, mention 356, 362, 367, 369, 393
- Quiquabones 209, 232, 233, 319, 320, 322, 327, 328, 425, 437
- Quiquaboes, mention 393, 437
- relics found on site of old villages; description by Cox. 218, 219
- Reinards 337
- Sakis, mention 437
- Sautuex, mention 435

- Shawanese, mention. . . 232, 233, 234, 339, 343, 357, 359, 362, 389, 392, 393, 394, 395, 396.
- treaties made at Cahokia by George R. Clark, assistance of the French in; advantages of the Americans 208
- under Hamilton at Vincennes, their conduct at capture of Vincennes 229, 230
- Wabash 428
- war dances 241
- war songs 322, 346
- Winnipigoes, mention 418
- Wolfs (Loups), mention 435
- Wyandots { 300, 362, 379, 380
- Wyandotts { 300, 362, 379, 380
- Instructions—To Clark from Governor Henry; one was open or public, the other order was secret 191
- Interpreters—Mention 228, 324, 341
- Iowa—Country; Renclo, a Canadian, purchases horses for Clark in 436
- Irons—A few of the principal men in Kaskaskia arrested and put in irons 201
- Jaubard (American)—Attorney, reasons for arrest of in Canada 448, 449
- Jefferson, Thomas—Born Virginia 1743, died Virginia 1826; Clark's letter to, dated Louisville, Sept. 23, 1779. . . . 453-454
- correspondence, letters from, quoted; see notes by Dillon 288
- (Governor), correspondence between Governors Henry and Jefferson and George Rogers Clark; mention. . . . 172
- early foresaw what might be the result of Clark's campaign; mention in note (H. W. B.) 289
- President Thomas Jefferson; "Memoir" of Clark written at request of; mention. 171, 242
- Jesuit Fathers—At Kaskaskia; their property at Kaskaskia sold by French authorities 460
- Jesuit House (Old)—Described by Rocheblave; original cost of 462
- Jesuit House and Chapel—At Kaskaskia; mention. 460
- Jesuit Priests—Order of, suppressed in France; mention. . . 460
- Jesuite College—At Kaskaskia; mention 462
- Johnson, Captain—Mention. 302
- Johnson (English Lieut. Governor)—Bentley thinks Murray can easily convince him of his (Bentley's) innocence. . . 302
- Jones, Gabriel—In company with George Rogers Clark sets out for Williamsburgh in hopes of arriving before the assembly adjourns 186
- joins Clark; their papers laid before the assembly of Virginia 188
- returns to Holston to join the forces, to repel the Cherokee Indians 186, 187
- selected as a delegate from Harrodstown, Ky., to the assembly of Virginia. 186

- Journal—Of Major Joseph Bowman; extract from the manuscript journal of.....243, 248-250 mention, in explanatory notes.....171, 217, 267, 270
- Journal—Of G. R. Clark.....402-407
- Kaskaskia (Kaskasky, Kaskias, Kaskaskias, Kasquskias, Cas-caskias)— taking of by Clark; capture of Rocheblave, etc.....330 affairs at, letter from Bentley to Murray.....299-303 arrival of Col. Montgomery at; Clark first hears of the fall in value of paper money.....283
 Bowman ordered from Cahokia to238
 British troops under Captain Lord stationed there....463 British scouts sent toward, bring in information and two prisoners232 capture of by George Rogers Clark.....195-203
 Clark arrives at281
 Clark disarms Kaskaskia; quoted from Clark-Mason letter200
 Clark discloses to the troops his design upon.....195
 Clark reaches within three miles of, on the evening of July 4, 1788, Clark-Mason letter quoted.....199
 Col. John Todd visits, for the purpose of organizing a temporary government, etc.....287 commonwealth of Virginia pledged to assist and protect all white inhabitants of the post of Kaskasky 192
 Delaware warriors drunk in, attack an American woman 281 expedition against, by Col. George Rogers Clark.....194 few of the principal men arrested and put in irons....201
 French and Spanish inhabitants of refuse to accept American money, etc.....284
 French inhabitants of, take the oath of allegiance to the state of Virginia203 garrison established at by Clark; Captain John Williams in command205
 General Edgar's home and hospitality in.....315
 Gibault returns to Kaskaskia.....205
 Hunters Road, leading from the east into; mention....199
 Indians of Onatache, tepicous du coeur de ceif and those of St. Joseph, not yet returned from; mention of Celoron's letter to Hamilton.....336
 John Duff and party of hunters give Clark information regarding Kaskaskia197 Laffont, Dr. John Baptiste, resident of, mention.....204
 mention
 174, 184, 191, 192, 193, 195, 197, 199, 200, 201, 202, 203, 205, 214, 258, 263, 281, 282, 284, 285, 287, 298, 300, 301, 302, 307, 310, 311, 314, 315, 329, 332, 339, 357, 389, 390, 424, 428, 429, 457-464.
 not fortified; mention462 number of rebel forces at.....232 old trail between Kaskaskia and Vincennes; few changes noticed after nearly 200 years; mention..240 old records of, published by E. T. Flagg, mention in foot note	461 parish records, marriage register; mention in foot note	463

p'an of, drawn by Thomas Hutchins, foot note	459
proclamation of Col. John Todd issued from, 15th June, 1779	287-288
Quiquaboës war party sent toward Kaskaskia	233
rebels at Vincennes likely to send to, for help	357-358
Rocheblave, commandant at, to succeed Capt. Hugh Lord; his misconduct and injustice	295-298 runners sent through the town by Clark, ordering the people to keep close to their houses; quoted from the Clark-Mason letter	200
the fort at, mention	459
troops of Clark divided between Post Vincennes, Kaskaskia, Cahokia and the "Falls of the Ohio"	285
troops posted there instead of at Fort Chartres	291
Kaskaskia Indians—(An Ills. tribe) Clark makes peace treaty with	214
Kaskaskia River—Clark crosses	240
Clark takes possession of a house on the banks of	199
Clark's army crosses, encamps about three miles from mention in the Clark-Mason letter	199
mention	458
Kaskaskia Volunteers—Mention	402
Kaskasquias—Mention	390
piroque seized, coming from Kaskasquias with flour ..	390
rebels at, in daily apprehension of attacks; mention in Hamilton's letter to DeGalvis	378
southern Indians to attack rebels at; mention in Hamilton's letter to Haldimand	389
Ke-ki-ong-gay—Miami's village, on both sides of the River St. Joseph; mention in note	221
Kennedy (Mr. Kernedy) Patrick—Commissary in Clark's army sent to cross the river Embarrass; extract from Bowman's Journal	248
Kennedy, Pat—Signs testimony of Henry Butler	305-306
Kennedy, Patrick—Merchant in Kaskaskia; petition to Sir Guy Carleton	295-298
quartermaster at Post Vincennes; mention	280
Kentucky—Campbell (Col. Arthur), member Virginia assembly, opposed to Kentucky being made a new country of Va.	189
causes contributing to attraction of emigrants from Virginia and other states to	286
Clark settles accounts of the Kentucky militia; mention	190
Clark in 1775 begins to pay attention to Kentucky	185
Clark's expedition to protect settlers of Kentucky; open instruction of Governor Henry; mention	191
Clark leaves Kentucky; speculation as to his future movements	189

- Clark receives an express from Ky., sent by Colonel John Bowman 283
- commandant at, Clark writes to, asking a private account of the number of men he was able to furnish 275
- description of the forts constructed in the western parts of 182-183
- establishment of the county of Kentucky..... 189
- early adventures of; mention 184
- Major William Smith to recruit men on Holston and to meet Clark in Kentucky..... 181
- mention 173, 182-185, 187-191, 194, 195, 238, 239, 261, 273, 276, 283-286, 289, 357.
- party of Indians sent against, by Hamilton 261
- Virginians and Pennsylvanians divided into violent parties respecting territory of 193
- Kettles—Mention 253
- Kickapoos (Quiquabones) Indians—Capture Croghan..... 217
- Clark makes treaty with..... 214
- party of, sent out by Hamilton, mistake Americans for escort sent out to meet them..... 261-262
- village chiefs in council at Detroit, June, 1778; war chiefs in council, etc., lists of 319
- Kickapoo Village (Mat-o-cush)—Location of..... 218
- Killbuck, Captain John—Or Galelemend, Tuscarawas, Indian chief; (a Delaware chief); American partisan; letter of, to John Montour, dated Cookshocking, Jan. 18th, 1779 379
- mention in Zeisberger's letter to Gibson..... 381
- sends message to Ochi Town 381
- King of Great Britain—War declared by a message from, to English parliament; mention..... 374
- King's Regiment—Fifty soldiers of, from Niagara, land at Detroit 353
- "Kings (The) Pasture at Detroit—Meaning of the term.... 280
- Kinaytounak, Chief of the Renard Nation—Treaty of alliance given by George Rogers Clark to, mention..... 338
- Kissingua (Indian)—Sent with a white man to Mr. Stuart by Lieut. Gov. Hamilton; mention 395
- Knives—Mention 218
- Koguethagechton (Delaware Chief, Captain White Eyes)—called by the Americans, Captain White Eyes, addresses his tribe, speech of 177-178
- Rev. John Heckewelder, a Moravian missionary, gives the aboriginal name of "Whites Eyes" as "Ko-gue-tha-gecht-on" 179
- reported speech of, in favor of the American colonies, prepared by a committee of the continental congress 177, 178
- LaBaye (LaBay)—Langdale (Langlade) sets out for; mention 399
- "The Welcome" sent to 366
- mention..... 365, 367, 436, 437

- LaBay Indians—Langlade and Gautier, if unable to join Hamilton, ordered to go to the LaBaye and Mississippi Indians 336, 367
- LaBaye Road—Traders not allowed on..... 437
- LaChance, Mr.—Arrested and his brandy confiscated..... 309
(probably Nicholas Lachance) sent by Rocheblave to seize property for payment..... 300-301
- LaChappelle, Bazille—One of a family of twelve brothers who removed from Canada to Kaskaskia, party in legal proceedings before Rocheblave..... 300-301
- LaFayette, Gen. Marie Jean Paul Roch Yves Gilbert Motier, Marquis de, born near Brioude, France, 1757, died Paris, 1834—Visits Kaskaskia; entertained by Gen. John Edgar and wife..... 315
- LaFayette, Indiana—Present site of, mention in editorial note 216
- Laffont, (Lafont) Dr. John Baptist—Physician at Kaskaskia, selected by Father Gibault to assist him at Post Vincennes 204
- Lagesse (The Son of)—A young chief of the Poutcouattamies of St. Joseph, makes speech at council with Americans at Vincennes 356-357
- Lake Indians—Hamilton recommends to the Weas the example of 224
mention 224, 243, 254, 359, 364, 395, 397
- Lake Michigan—Indians on borders of, mention..... 207
Indian tribes inhabiting country adjacent to; mention. 214
Poutawattamies of St Joseph (of Lake Michigan), mention in note, letter of Hamilton to Haldimand. 220
- Lakes—Vessels cannot navigate in winter; hence assistance cannot come from Canada 370
- La Mothe, Guillaume, Captain—Appointment for asked, in Hamilton's letter to Haldimand..... 401
La Mothe's company of volunteers go under Major Hay to take Vincennes 227
- La Motte, Captain William—A noted Canadian, British partisan, attempts to enter fort at Vincennes..... 261
Clark permits to enter the fort at Vincennes; reasons for so doing 263-264
mention 258, 362, 403, 424, 425
sent out from Vincennes to reconnoitre; mention.... 403
- Land Office records at Vincennes; foot note..... 316
- Lancaster, Pa.—Congress in session there; mention..... 305
- Land Companies—Settlers added to the white population of the country through efforts of..... 175
- Land Grants—Old land grants at or near Vincennes treated in Vol. XVI, American State Paper; mention in foot note. 245
- Langdale (Lang'ade)—Sets out for his post at LaBaye; mention 399 reaches Milwaukee and hears of Hamilton being taken. 436
- Langdale (Langdale)—Charles Michel de, Indian officer in British service; born near Mackinac (Ojawa village), 1729; died at Green Bay, 1800.....
arrives at Michillimackinac 367

- DePeyster sends, to conciliate Ottawas and Chippewas near Grand River..... 367 fails in his attempt to move the Indians 418 on arrival at LaBaye receives orders from Hamilton to join him in the spring by Illinois River..... 436 sent by DePeyster to assist Hamilton..... 398 sent by DePeyster to attempt to assemble the Grand River Indians 369
Languedoc—Ship of the King of France; mention..... 376
Larnoult. See Lernoult.
Law, Judge John—In a transcript of the manuscript "Diary," of Clark, Law calls the hill (Warrior's Island) "Warren's Island;" evidence appears to be in favor of this spelling; foot note..... 243
Lawrence, Fort—Mention in Zeiserger's letter to Gibson.... 381-382, 420 Laws, U. S.—Dillon quoted in regard to treaty of peace between Delaware Indians and commissioners of the U.
S.; see foot note 286
Le Boeuff (LeBoeuf)—Bolton writes Hamilton that the rebels will erect a fort at, etc..... 422
Le Comte—Desires permission to pass to New Orleans; Hamilton's letter to DeGalvis 377
Lee, Arthur—Bu-kon-ge-he-la takes no notice of him as commissioner at Fort Pitt; mention in note by the editor.. 177 one of the commissioners appointed by the continental congress to reside at Fort Pitt for the purpose of making treaties with the Indians; mention in foot
note 175
Le Gras, Col. Jean M., (John M.), (J. M. P. Legrace, Major—Resident of Vincennes 308 applies to council to permit DeJean to visit the Illinois. 308 buried his powder during British occupancy of Vincennes; produces it for Americans..... 259 Chapoton a worthy associate of..... 344 commandant of Vincennes, acts as president of the court, etc. 288
French trader of Vincennes, accepts a major's commission from the rebel officer commanding at the Illinois; mention in Hamilton's letter to Haldimand.. 223 goes with a party of troops to attempt to capture boats of provisions expected by British at Vincennes.. 272
mention 343, 344
rebels proceed to the house of, at Vincennes..... 424 LeGros, Mr.—Arrested by the Virginians and sent under a guard to Illinois 336
Leith (Lieth) John—Born, probably, in Scotland; died in Ohio about 1832.
journal of, gives instance of British cruelty toward prisoners 269-270
Leni-Lenape, or Delaware Indians—Rev. John Heckewelder, a Moravian missionary long among..... 179

- Lernoult, Capt. R. B. (Belanger)—British commandant at Detroit; asks advice and assistance from Colone. Bolton at Niagara..... 370 assists at feast of the Indians..... 342 at Detroit, Hamilton sends substance of Captain Helm's letter to; mention 392
 Bolton sends troops from Niagara to Lernoult at Detroit 370
 Bowman to Lernoult, letter of, dated Fort Patrick Henry, St. Vincent, March 20th, 1778..... 416
 Chevalier to Lernoult, letter dated St. Joseph, May 29th, 1779 443-444 express sent by, with news to DePeyster..... 418 extracts of letters written at St. Duski (Sandusky) by Lieut. Bird to 427
 Girault (Girault) writes to, asking the release of Bentley 417
 Girault (Girault) letter to, dated Fort Patrick Henry, St. Vincent, 21st March, 1779..... 417
 Hamilton's letter to, dated St. Vincennes, March 8th, 1779—by permission of Colone! Clark..... 408
 Hamilton to, represent dangers to Miamis and Detroit. 345 informs Bolton that Hurons and Santuske Indians are alarmed at rumors of encroachments of Virginians. 369 informs DePeyster of Hamilton's falling into the hands of the Virginians 432 mention. 341, 342, 344, 346, 369, 370, 392, 408, 415-421, 427, 434-435, 444.
 Monforton's letter to, dated Huron Village, 7th May, 1779 434-435 permits Lieut. Shourd with officers and men to accompany Hamilton 353 present at council with Indians, mention of in Hamilton's letter to Ha'dimand 341 sings the war song; mention in Hamilton's letter to Haldimand 346 to Bolton, hopes that a reinforcement will be sent to Detroit 420 will act the part of a father to Indians, in Hamilton's absence 342 writes Bolton his regret at loss of Hamilton..... 421 writes letter to Bolton giving information from DePeyster 369 Letters from Canadian Archives. See Canadian Archives.
 Levi, Marquis de—Military companions of, mention in proclamation of the King of France 375 tribute to character of, in proclamation of the King of France 375
 Levis, (Levi) Gaston Francois, Chevalier de—Afterwards Duke de Levis; born Languedoc, France, 1720, died Arraz, 1787; noted French officer in Canada..... 375
 Lienetot, Major Godebory (Godfroy?)—Clark and Major Lienetot take up quarters at the "Falls of the Ohio".... 285

- mention 284
- Lieth (Leith), John (see Leith)—A very religious man, mentioned in explanatory note; his horror at cruelties practised toward American prisoners..... 270
- Ling (Liny) W.—Butler testifies that he does not know him. 306
- Linn, Col. Wm. (Major)—Commanded under Clark; killed by Indians, 1781.....
- messenger with letter from Col. Campbell to Clark; mention in foot note 197
- volunteer officer; commands party for "Falls of the Ohio" 205
- Linne, Benjamin—A young volunteer in Capt. James Harrod's command; sent by George Rogers Clark as a spy. 189
- Liquor—Used in trade with Indians; mention..... 296, 325, 334
- Rocheblave forbids trading in by others on severe penalty; and himself trades in it..... 296
- Little Wabash—See Wabash.
- Logansport, Indiana—Site of present city of; village of the Eel River Miamis six miles above the juncture of the stream with the Wabash, at Logansport, Ind.; in Hamilton's letter to Haldimand..... 220
- London—Associates of John Murray (Lord Dunmore), mentioned in grant of land by the Pyankeshaws; mention in note 222
- mention 361
- Long Knives—Americans, particularly the Virginians, called Long Knives or Big Knives; speech of Buckongahelas to the Indians..... 176
- Lord, Captain Hugh—British commandant of Illinois; signs official paper 295
- his departure from the Illinois; mention..... 295
- mention 297
- stationed at Kaskaskia; ordered from there to Detroit; leaves Rocheblave in command..... 463
- writes letter to General Gage, mention in foot note.... 461
- Loskiel (Loskill) George Henry—Moravian missionary to western Indians; historical data on our continental Indian affairs quoted from, in foot note..... 181
- Louisiana—Mention 216
- Louisville, Kentucky—Clark's letter to Jefferson dated at. 453-454
- mention in note, accompanying Hamilton's letter to Haldimand. See Falls of the Ohio..... 221
- Luzerne, M. le Chevalier de—Minister of France; memoir of the inhabitants of Vincennes addressed to; mention.... 329
- Lynn, Captain—Mention of, in Governor Patrick Henry's secret instructions to George Rogers Clark..... 193
- Macarty, (McCarty, Makrty) Chevalier de—Commandant of the Illinois at Fort Chartres, writes letter to Vaudreuil 459
- McCarty, Capt. Richard—Commands Co. of Ky. volunteers under Clark; mention in Bowman's Journal. 249, 284, 285
- discovers fires made by whites and Indians near camps; mention in Major Bowman's Journal 249

- trader from Michilimackinac to the Illinois; letter from, enclosed to Haldimand in letter of Major DePeyster; mention 334
- Macomb, John—Merchant of Detroit; forwards some Indian goods to the Miamis 221
mention 444
- Macomb, Mrs.—Keeper of a noted boarding house in Detroit. 277
- McFall, John—Anecdote from manuscript autobiography of; mention 273
- McGary, Captain—Commands Co. of Ky. volunteers..... 284, 285
- McGee, Captain Alex.—Joins Hamilton..... 370 writes letter to Lernout, who encloses same to Bolton 370
- Machilimackinac (Michilimackinac)—Merchants, traders and inhabitants of, apply for a missionary; note..... 335
mention 364-367, 398, 399, 418, 432
- McIntosh, Brig. Gen. Lachlan—Born Scotland 1725, died Savannah, Ga., 1806; directed by congress to collect troops at Pittsburg for the defense of the frontiers..... 383-385, 386, 387
Fort McIntosh; mention in Zeisberger's letter to Gibson 382
- McKee, Captain Alexander—Attacks fort at Falls of the Ohio; mention in Hamilton's letter to Haldimand..... 362 in council with the Indians at Detroit..... 319-328 message and present of ammunition for the Shawnese sent by 343 ordered to make enquiry of affairs at Falls of the Ohio. 344
- Mackinack—Mention 172
- McLeod, Captain (Norman?)—British officer under Hamilton 228
mention 349
- Madison, James—Letter from Gov. Harrison to, dated Vincennes, Jan. 19, 1802, quoted; notes by Dillon 288
"Memoir" of George Rogers Clark, written at the request of; mention 171, 242
- Mahimamba—Quiquabones village chief in council at Detroit, June, 1778, speech of 319 medal given to; foot note 325 presents pipes for the Quiquabones and Mascoutins, at council held at Detroit, June, 1778..... 320
- Maisonville, Alexis—Recommended to Haldimand by Hamilton 345
- Maisonville, Captain Francis—A famous Indian partisan of Cahokia, captured by Americans, tortured by some young men 263 guide to Captain La Motte..... 424
mention 403
officer under Hamilton at Vincennes 228 sent after prisoners; takes packet of letters, &c. 424
- Mamakossing—Warriors mustered at; mention, Zeisberger's letter to Gibson 381
- Mansion—Of the fort at Kaskaskia; mention 462
- Mamelles (Hills)—Called by Bowman in Journal, the Mobib or Bubbriss 242

- Second or Chimney Rock; mention 243 small hill; mention in Bowman's Journal..... 250 small hills, so called by the French because of a fancied likeness to the female breast..... 241
 Manuscript Journal—Bowman's; extract from..... 171, 240, 242, 243, 248-250, 265, 267, 270, 284
 Manuscript Journal—Of Clark..... 245-266, 402 407
 Maps—Clark hopes to send a map of the country to Gov. Patrick Henry 411
 Prof. Collett's map, with report of geological survey of Indiana; reference to..... 241 topographical map showing Clark's route from the crossing of the Wabash to Vincennes; by H. W. Beckwith, opposite page..... 242
 Marantete Francois—Lieutenant of militia; Hamilton drills for service 342 Marriage—Registers; Kaskaskia parish records; mention, foot note 463
 Martia, Law—Mention 448
 Mascous—Creek nation so called by the Indians..... 394 chief of the Creeks sends white belt to conference of the Indians at Ft. Sackville; mention..... 395 Mascoutins—All united; mention in speech of Quiquapoquois at Detroit, 1778..... 327 belt given to by Hamilton at council held at Detroit, 1778; mention 324 (tribe) in council, Detroit, June 29, 1778..... 319-328
 Mahimamba presents pipe for the Mascoutins at council at Detroit, June, 1778..... 320
 Mason, Edward G.—Ills. historian, born Conn., 1839, died, 1898; historical writings of; mention in foot note..... 458 Mason, George—Of Virginia; Clark's letter to George Mason, quoted in note by H. W. B..... 223
 mention 171, 199, 200, 223, 241, 458
 Mason Letter (The)..... 241, 243, 246, 458
 Masons—Mention 291
 Massac, Fort—Clark plans to leave the Ohio near Fort Massac 191
 see Fort Massac.
 Matchigrins—Chief of Thunder Bay; mention..... 419
 Mathero—Corn taken from; mention 301
 Matocush—Kickapoo Indian town; Croghan taken prisoner there 217
 Kickapoo Indian village, location of..... 218
 Mathews (Matthews) Capt. Robert—Acting engineer at Fort Niagara; mention 422 succeeds Captain Foy as secretary to Haldimand..... 450
 Matthews of Kaskaskia; Bentley directs Murray to secure affidavit of..... 302
 Mattison, Ralph—One of Clark's soldiers, grandfather of John McFall, related anecdote of capture of British boats and crew by Americans under Helm 273

- Maumee River—Au Glaize joins the Maumee at site of Defiance, Ohio; mention..... 220
- Indians of, indifferent to the British; importance of services 173
- traders in the interest of Detroit, factor among the savages of the Maume..... 172
- Manshack—James Willing proposes to take goods there.... 293
- Medals—Mention 274, 325, 362, 400
- for list of medals given to the Indian chiefs at the council held at Detroit, 1778, see foot note..... 325
- Me-lou-e-son-ata (Oulattanon)—Medal given to; see foot note 325
- mention 319
- Memoir—(The French); mention..... 219
- Memoir—Written by George Rogers Clark at the request of Thomas Jefferson and James Madison..... 171
- "Memoir of Clark"—H. W. Beckwith's note in reference to the original; foot note..... 242
- Memoir—Of George Rogers Clark, extracts from.. 245-266, 272-278
- mention 402-407, 458
- Memorandum—Of lands owned by claimants in the Illinois country 287
- Merchandise—At Vincennes confiscated by the English..... 259
- mention 224
- Merchants—Mention 439, 440
- prohibited from carrying goods to Michimakinac.... 441
- Merom Sand Stone—Ridges and knolls in Indiana, remains of 241
- Mesplet—Printer sent by congress, arrested in Canada.... 448-449
- Messengers—Mention 175
- Miamis—Chief, informs Hamilton of bad conduct of Celoron; mention in letter Hamilton to Haldimand..... 233
- chiefs of the upper Wabash go to Vincennes and profess friendship for the Americans; express sent from to Detroit 351
- Miamis, Fort—Baubin (Charles) reaches Detroit with letter from the Miamis; mention in Hamilton's letter to Haldimand 343
- carrying place at; mention..... 343, 346, 349
- Celoron writes Hamilton from, dated Aug. 28; tells of conditions there 336, 337
- fortifying of; mention 344
- Hamilton orders a lieutenant of the Indian department with militia to assist in repairing the carrying place at..... 343
- Hamilton sends to, for provisions; mention..... 391
- mention 336, 346, 349, 352, 358
- Indians, chiefs of, at conference Fort Sackville..... 394
- chiefs of join Hamilton..... 361
- friendly to the rebels 352
- reputed a cowardly nation 352
- scouts for the British; mention 234
- tribe of Riviere a L'Anguille join Hamilton..... 220
- Indian tribe (Eel River Miamis) located some six miles above the junction of the stream with the Wabash at site of present Logansport, Ind.; note..... 220

- mention 359, 360
- Miamis, Post—Precautions for protection of, mention 344
- (the) rebels at; untruthful statement made by Celoron 354, 355
- Miamis River—Celoron in vicinity of; mention 355
- Hamilton hopes to send news of expedition from 355
- Hamilton sets out for 347
- rains necessary for raising waters of 346
- scarcity of water in, mention 392
- Shawnees villages on, burned 289
- sketch of by DuVernet 362
- Miamis town; Chevallier with Indians arrives at 360
- Miamis village frequented by men of bad reputation... 311
- Michilimackinac—DePeyster's letter to Gen. Haldimand dated from, Jan. 29, 1779 392, 399
- DePeyster's letter to Haldimand, dated from 436-438
- inhabitants of; DePeyster obliged to press their servants for service in sending canoes on official business 368
- instructions to DePeyster regarding merchants at; passports, etc. 439, 440
- letter from DePeyster to Haldimand dated at 418, 419
- letter from, relating to Hamilton's expedition 445
- letter of De Peyster to Haldimand dated at, Aug. 15, 1778 334, 335
- letter of DePeyster to Haldimand, dated Oct. 24, 1778 364-366
- mention 299-303, 331, 364, 366, 367, 368, 398, 399, 418, 432, 437
- provisions bad at 433
- Michigan, Lake—DePeyster hopes Clark will come by way of the lake 437
- Indians on borders of; mention 207, 214
- mention 432, 455
- Michigan, State of—Mention 171
- Military Companions—of the Marquis of Levi; mention in "Proclamation of the King of France" 375
- Militia—Mention 192, 197, 232
- volunteers of, Detroit; mention; see Detroit militia
- Miller—At Vincennes; mention 231
- Milwaukee (Milwaukee)—Siggenake, Milwaukee chief; mention 432
- the "Welcome," armed vessel, sent to; mention in DePeyster's letter to Haldimand 366
- Virginians building boats near; mention 432
- Mingoes (Indian tribe)—Hamilton encourages Mingoes to keep watch towards the Ohio 339
- Ministers of the Gospel—Mention 375
- protection asked for; mention in Gibson's letter to McIntosh 383
- Misilamackinac—Letter from Bentley to Murray; written at 299-303

- Misquitto (Misquetto)—Quiquabones war chief, axe presented to by Hamilton 327
- Mission—On the Muskingum; Heckewelder makes a journey from, to Pittsburgh; mention in note..... 179
- Missionary Fathers—Settlements not visited by them; given up to debauchery 311
- Mississippi (Missisipi) Indians—DePeyster orders Langlade and Gautier, if unable to join Hamilton, to cross to Labaye and Mississippi Indians..... 367
- Mississippi River—Building of a fort at the conflux of the Ohio and Mississippi, necessary.....339, 340
 Delaware Indians hunt in country of..... 281
 English traders amongst the savages of the upper Mississippi; mention 172
 Gautier sets out for his post on..... 399
 Hamilton's letter to commandant on the Spanish side of Mississippi River; mention..... 345
 Indian tribes between Lake Michigan and the River Mississippi; mention 214 keel boat (the Willing) purchased; fitted out as a galley under command of Captain Rogers..... 239 lands bordering on; mention in Col. John Todd's proclamation 287, 288 inroads of on Fort Chartres, render it unfit for habitation 461
 mention
 172, 190, 196, 197, 214, 224, 233, 239, 240, 280, 281, 287, 292, 300, 331, 332, 339, 345, 365, 367, 368, 378, 389, 391, 399, 453, 459, 461, 463.
 Rocheblave informs Hamilton that four English frigates were in the mouth of the Mississippi..... 331, 332 spies kept on the river by the British; mention..... 197
- Mississippi Valley; mention.....185, 460
- Missouri River 340
- Mobib or Bubriiss—Misspelt slang phrase for the word name; note 242
- Money—American, discredited by traders at Kaskaskia..... 284 (paper) Clark for the first time learns of the fall of paper money 283
- Monforton, Gulle—To Lernoult, letter dated Huron Village, 7th May, 1779 434, 435
- Monongahela River—Brownsville, Pa. Red Stone Old Fort located on; mention in foot note..... 191
- Montaine, John—Chiefs from St. Duskie come to Detroit with 420
- Montcalm—Louis Joseph, Marquis de Montcalm, Gozon de St. Veran—Mention in proclamation of the King of France 375
- Montgomery (Montgomen), Col. John, commander under Clark; born Va. 1748, killed by Indians in Ky. 1794; appointed to the command of the troops of the Illinois..... 284, 285
 arrives at Kaskaskia 283 commander of company in Geo. Rogers Clark's campaign 195

- commandant at Fort Clark, Kaskaskias, writes letter to De Peyster 307
despatched by water with stores for Post Vincennes.. 284 despatched with letters by Clark..... 205, 206 signs French proclamation at the Cascaskies..... 457 to DePeyster, copy of Dejean's permit to visit the Illinois 308
writes to De Peyster of the good intentions of the Americans 307, 308
Montour, John—Hurons have dealings with..... 379, 380, 435
Montreal—Behavior of a rebel at; mention..... 448 goods from, to DePeyster at Mackinac sent too late in the season..... 368
Indians returned from council at; mention..... 369
mention 223, 224, 237, 331, 334, 368, 369
young Indian named Amiable at, son of Louis Chevalier,
mention 334
Montrose, Mr.—In the regiment of Erlack, asks for the hand of Ha'dimand's niece; mention..... 452 Monture, John—Desire of his friends that he should come to Fort Pitt..... 379, 380
letter to, from John Dodge, dated Fort Pitt, Jan. 4, 1779. 380 Moore, Samuel—A young hunter in Capt. Jas. Harrod's command, sent by Geo. Rogers Clark as a spy..... 189 Moravians—Aid asked for; mention in letter of Gibson to Brodhead 385
Moravian Missionaries—At Cooshocking, in danger from Indians 386
Morgan, Col.—Desirous of seeing John Montour..... 379
Morgan, Col. Geo. (of Princeton, N. J.)—Appeared to for aid for the ministers and people of Cooshocking..... 385 appointed by the continental congress as agent to the western Indians 180
Butler testifies that Morgan had gone to Phila. to raise money to pay for provisions for troops..... 305 called during the war for independence "St. Tammany," the "Patron Saint of America"..... 180
Delaware Indians give him the name of Tamanend... 180 letter to, from Col. John Gibson, relating to the dangerous situation of Moravians and Christian Indians at Cooshocking 386
mention 380
Morin, Sieur John—Joined by Henry Butler on the Belle Riviere 304
(James, Jamis, Janis?) signs Henry Butler's testimony as witness 306
Moses, John—Ills. historian, born Canada, 1825, died Chicago, 1898; author of "Illinois Historical and Statistical;"
mention foot note 458
Mud River—Shawnees village on, burned..... 289 Munbrun, Lieut.—American officer at Vincennes, mention in
note 337
Murray, Daniel—Of London, Eng., trader in the Illinois before Revolution; served under Clark.

- agent for Kennedy and Bentley, merchants in Kaskaskia; petition to Sir Guy Carleton.....295-298 applies to Rocheblave for legal action and is refused... 297 of Kaskaskia, letter to from Thos. Bentley.....299-303
- Murray, Daniel, kinsman of John Murray, mentioned in grant of land by the Pyankeshaws; note..... 222
- Murray, John (Augustus)—Fourth Earl of Dunmore, Gov. of Va., grants of land conveyed to, by the Pyankeshaws of Vincennes; mention in note..... 222
- Murray, John, (in the Illinois country) son of Earl of Dunmore 222
- Murray, Muckle—Letter of; Bentley asks Murray to include it in his report..... 302
- Murray, William—Kinsman of Earl of Dunmore; mention in note 222
- Muskingum River—Koguethagechton (Capt. White Eyes) lived in the valley of the river; mention..... 177
- Myers (Myres, Mires, Moires, Morris) William—Different ways of spelling the name of Geo. Rogers Clark's messenger (express), used by various historical writers. Copy of a warrant taken with the letters of..... 414 express messenger of Gen. Clark; mention..... 402 express messenger of Geo. Rogers Clark, killed on his way; mention272, 275, 402 express messenger with dispatches from the Va. authorities, arrives at Vincennes with galley..... 272 letter of Clark to Gov. Patrick Henry sent by..... 411 note on dispatches taken from..... 402 to bring horse to Squire Boon at the Falls of the Ohio. 423
- Myette—American commandant at Vincennes; mention..... 337
- Nancy, Miss—Perhaps Nancy Gibson, sister of John Gibson (?) 385
- Nanaloibi—Poutawatamies Chief, Clark's speech to tribe of. 430, 431
- Neal, Capt.—(American officer), account with the regiment; mention 384
- Neegik—An Ottawa war chief, relates to Hamilton the proceedings of the rebels at Vincennes.....356-358
- New Mexico—Mention 410
- New Orleans—Mention 391 called "town" by inhabitants of Vincennes..... 310 copy of letter to governor of, sent to Haldimand by Hamilton 390 government of 377
 letter of Willing to Haldimand; Willing asks permission to settle and trade near New Orleans.....293, 294
 mention284, 293, 294, 310, 331, 377, 378, 390, 391, 429
- Newspapers—Of the day quoted as to the modern "Tammany;" mention in foot note 181
- New York—Mention.....180, 181, 290, 291, 323, 419, 451, 463
- Niagara—Bolton sends all the troops he can spare from, to Detroit 370
 English troops from, go to Detroit..... 353

- express to, takes news of the taking of Kaskaskia.... 330
- Indian express sent from Detroit by Hamilton to, with letters 351
- letter whitten from by Col. Mason Botton to Gen. Haldimand, Nov. 13, 1778, relating to Indian affairs and Hamilton's expedition to Vincennes 369-371
- mention 276, 340, 344, 346, 351, 353, 369-370, 371, 392, 420-422, 445, 447.
- old man interpreter of; mention..... 351
- North America—King of France addresses a declaration to all the Ancient French in (translation..... 373-376
- North, Frederick (by courtesy, Lord North)—Second Earl of Guilford, born 1732, died 1792; prime minister of England during Revolution; mention..... 311, 451
- Northwestern Indians—Final defeat of, at the battle of "The Fallen Timbers;" mention in note..... 176
- Nova Scotia; mention..... 315
- Oath—Form of, prescribed by act of British parliament... 181, 182
- Oath of Al'egiance—Tendered to the volunteers from the different companies, and to the officers at Detroit..... 342 to congress; mention..... 330
- Ochi Town—Letter of Zeisberger to Gibson from Ochi Town, Jan. 19th, 1779..... 381
- Ohio, Country of—Advices received by Lord Sackville that the Indians were scouring the Ohio and Wabash Country.. 174
- Ohio—(Northern); mention..... 173
- Ohio River—Building of a fort at the conflux of the Ohio and the Mississippi Rivers 339, 340
- Clark plans to leave the Ohio at Fort Massac..... 197
- establishing a post at; mention in Governor Henry's secret instructions to Clark 192
- Indian tribes encouraged to keep watch towards..... 339
- lands bordering on; mention in Col. Todd's proclamation 286, 287
- mention 172, 175, 181, 197, 217, 224, 232, 233, 281, 287, 339, 365, 378, 389, 403, 407, 453, 454.
- Ohio (Lower) River—Near Shawneetown; Croghan captured by Indians on 217
- mention 182, 224
- people along the banks of, jealous of strangers..... 337
- Ohio, State of—Mention 171
- Ohio Valley Historical Series—Published by Robert Clarke & Co., quoted as to letter of Gov. Patrick Henry to Col. Clark; mention, foot note 193
- Olney, Ill.—(Present county seat of Richland county); mention in explanatary note 240
- Ome—A corruption of Aux Miamis, an Indian village on site of present Ft. Wayne, Indiana.
- Omi River (Maume)—Indians on; mention..... 278
- Ontario Lake—Provisions and rum with dispatch sent from Quebec to Mackinac, by way of..... 441

- Oresconsign River—Mention of in De Peyster's letter to Haldimand 365
- Orleans—Mention 232, 234, 284
- Ottawas (Indian Tribe)—Accompany Hamilton 220, 361, 393
 belts sent to Illinois Indians by 366 chief of, met by Longdale (Langlade) and Gautier on their way to St. Josephs 389 chief of; speech at conference, Ft. Sackville 394, 395
 mention 232, 233, 341, 362, 366, 367, 418, 424, 425, 432, 436, 456 probably present at Indian council on Cherakee river; mention 232, 233 winter near Grand River 367
- Ouabache (Ouabache, Ouabash, Ouebash, Wabash) Indians—Celeron departs to, from Detroit with belts, &c. 322 expected to act only from motives of fear 393
 Hamilton proposes to take presents to 339, 353 indecision of, due to advice of interested persons 359
 mention 231, 319, 326, 332, 333, 341, 343, 346, 351, 353, 354, 356, 359, 389, 393, 395, 396, 428.
 southern Indian desire to make peace with ; mention .. 389 speeches to and belts offered by the Americans 351 unreliability of 231
- Ouabache (Ouabash, Ouabache, Wabash) River—Americans throw English flag into 356
 Fort Ouiatenon, first French post on; mention 217
- Ouabash River (Wabash), mention 346, 351, 354, 356, 361, 407
- Ouiat (The) Ouiattonon—Mention 354
- Oulga (Wea)—Indian town the largest on the Wabash; number of warriors at 313
- Ouiattanon)Ouiattonous, Oulga, Ouittanon, Ouittonon, Ouyas-tonons) Fort—Near present site of Lafayette, Ind.
 Celeron at, where he received visits from persons in American interests 351 description of, by George Croghan 217 first French fort on the Wabash 217
 Hamilton's letter to Haldimand dated from 220
 Hamilton writes official letter from 216
 He'm makes valuable treaty with Indians at 223 historic Wea—Miami Indian town 218
 Indian village near; mention 217
 Indians at undecided and timorous 343
 Indians surprised at by Helm 223, 351, 394
 mention 207, 221, 225, 227, 232, 280, 336, 337, 343
- Oueough (Oniga, Onyas, Ouiatenons, Ouittanous, Ouitto, Ouittonos, Ouittonous, Ouittons, Ouitatonans, Ouittanon, Wabash) Indian tribe 327 attitude of inhabitants of Vincennes toward 329 belt given to by Hamilton at council held at Detroit 1778; mention 324
 Cha-ha presents the axe and sings the war song to 327
 Clark makes treaty of peace with 214 council at Detroit, June 29th, 1778 319-328 list of war chiefs 319

mention	327
chiefs of at conference Ft. Sackville.....	394
village chiefs of have nothing to say in war.....	328
chiefs of pleased to go against the Virginians.....	326
Oruntundis—Name given to Sandusky by the Hurons.....	427
Outawa (Ottawa)—Council Sept. 23, 1778, Outawa Indians present	341 war chief sings war song at council held by Indians at Detroit, June, 1778. See Ottawas.....	322
Oxen—Mention	341
Paris Documents—Foot note	459
Parish Records of Kaskaskia—Foot note	463
Passports—Merchants required to have.....	439-440
Paterson, Mr. C.—Express sent to Haldimand and DePeyster by	439
Patrols—Mention	201
Pawnee Nation—Clark writes Governor Henry that he will secure horses from	410
Pays Plat, mention.....	398
Pearlat River—James Willing desires permission to settle there and trade	293
Peaukaskaas Indians—Chiefs of at conference Fort Sackville	394, 400
(Peakashaws)—
great chief of, delivers to Hamilton a string with a scalp, etc.....	396
Hamilton in full council of, destroys their grant (or deed of sale) to lands.....	222
mention	343, 400
Peemembikaetack—Poutawattamie war chief given a war axe by Hamilton at council of Indians at Detroit June, 1778	322
Pekkeland—An Indian, sent with dispatches.....	386
Pennsylvania—Advices received by Lord Sackville that the rebels of Va. and Pa. had deserted their posts; mention description of the forts constructed in the western parts of	182-183
mention	171, 174, 177, 182, 217, 304
province of; mentioned by Butler.....	304
Pennsylvanians—Virginians and Pennsylvanians divided into parties respecting territory of Kentucky.....	194
Pensacola—Barracks to be built there for English troops; plans and description of same.....	290-292
General Haldimand at	294
Hamilton attempts to arrange for himself and officers at surrender of Vincennes, to go on parole to Pensacola; Clark refuses.....	267
People of America—Long for peace; desire to submit to the king; letter of Rocheblave to Bosseron.....	309
Peoria—A trading post frequented by men of bad character.	311
Peoria Chief—Gives Hamilton his hand; presented with a medal	400
son of old man, interpreter at Niagara, visits Celoron in interest of the Americans.....	351

- Peoria Indians—Clark makes treaty with..... 214
 mention..... 351, 389, 400, 425
- Permanent Pond (The)—Writings of Bowman and Clark differ as to pace of deep wading; see foot note H. W. B. 343
- Peroques—Number of employed on Hamilton's expedition.... 349
- Petit Gres—Chief of the Miamis, joins Captain Chene.... 424, 426
- Petite Riviere, Camp at—Description of, in Hamilton's letter to Haldimand 361-362
 number of officers and men at, mentioned in Hamilton's letter to Haldimand..... 362
- Petition to Sir Guy Carleton from Thos. Bentley..... 295-298
- Philadelphia—Associates of John Murray mentioned in the grant of land by the Pyankeshaws; mention in note 222
 great council at 211
 Henry Butler has heard that Philadelphia was taken by English 304
 lodges (Tammany) formed at..... 180
 mention 293, 305, 309, 323
 people of; mention in testimony of Butler..... 304
- Piankeshaw Indian—Tobacco's son
 See Tobacco's Son.
- Pi-an-ke-shaws (Plankichias)—Indian tribe.
 answer for the good conduct of the Delaware Indians. 282 Celeron obtains information from, relating to the Virginians 336
 Clark makes treaty of peace with 214
 Hamilton asks approval of Haldimand of his cancellation of grants of lands given by Indians..... 343 (upper) of the Vermillion, go to Vincennes and profess friendship for the Americans..... 278 land grant; magistrates of the court at Vincennes dispose of lands, novel way of acquiring same..... 289, 290 tribe of the Tobacco's son familiar with the Americans at Vincennes 277
- Pi-e-mash-kee-canny—(Quiquabones chief)—Medal given to.
 mention 319-328
- Pilots—In Clark's army; mention in Bowman's Journal..... 250
- Pipe—Presented by Ma-hi-mam-ba in council at Detroit with the Indians, June, 1778..... 319, 320, 325-Qui-qua-po-quois, village chief of the Ouattonous (Weas); speech on receiving..... 319 war chiefs of the nation smoke out of the pipe; mention in speech of Sa-pa-tia, at Detroit, June, 1778 320
 sacred; mention 208-209
- Pipe, Captain (Wolf)—Delaware chief; sends word to Hurons and Santuske Indians that they are in danger from the encroachments of the Virginians 369
- Piroques—Building of; mention 240
 Clark orders one to be built: is finished and sent to explore the drowned lands on the opposite side of the Little Wabash..... 247

- commissary sent out with ten piroques from Vincennes to the Miamis for provisions..... 400 sent to Wold rapid 339
 Pitt, Fort—Mention in Hamilton's letter to Haldimand..... 345 letter of John Dodge to John Monture dated from Jan. 4th, 1779..... 380 treaty of peace concluded at, between commissioners in behalf of the United States and the chief men and deputies of the Delaware nation 286 Pittsburgh—Gen. McIntosh directed by Congress to collect at Pittsburgh, a force for the defense of the western frontier 286
 Clark applies to General Hand at, for powder..... 193
 Clark receives order on Pittsburgh for boats and ammunition 190
 Clark receives his stores at..... 194
 Col. George Morgan appointed as agent to the western Indians by the Continental Congress, and sent to Pittsburg 180
 speech of Koguethagechton (Captain White Eyes) delivered to an assemblage of Indians at..... 178
 mention 188, 189, 194, 217, 274, 286, 379
 Pittsburgh Country—Opposition to Clark's campaign manifested by residents of; mention..... 192 Pittman, Capt. Philip—English civil engineer; mention of historical writings of..... 459, 460 Pittman's "European Settlements in Mississippi valley;" reference to; foot notes 460
 Placard—"To the inhabitants of Post Vincennes," written by George Rogers Clark 255
 Pointe des Chesnes—A detachment of the King's regiment joins Hamilton at..... 354
 Point Coupe (The "Cut Off")—Twelve leagues above Post Vincennes; one of the boundaries of the land grant of the Pyankeshaws; mention in note 222 Political Lies—Greater part of the speeches between Clark and the Indians, so called 280
 Pottawattamie Chiefs of the Upper Wabash—Go to Vincennes and profess friendship for the Americans..... 278
 Pooie, Professor W. F.—Amer. historian, born 1821, died 1894; historical writings of; mention foot note..... 458
 "Poitesfield," Lt. Col. T. T. M.—Certifies to Dejean's permission to go to Col. Clark's headquarters..... 308
 Pomoacan—Means sweet house, name of the Half King..... 369
 Posts—Military; mention..... 192, 198, 224, 331, 441, 442, 447
 Portage, at the Miamis—Hamilton designs forming a depot of supplies at 340
 Pouttawattamies (Poutawamies, Pottowattamies, Poteonat-tamies, Potawatamies, Poutcouattamies, Pottowattamis) —Indians. Chevalier executes orders to clothe..... 444 chief of takes letter and message for St. Joseph from De Peyster 342
 Clark's speech to tribe, copy of, in one of the captured
 letters 430-431

- in council Sept. 23rd, 1778, mention in Hamilton's letter to Haldimand 341
- Louis Chevalier's influence with..... 334
- of Detroit, chiefs of, sent by Hamilton to Kaskaskia; mention in letter of Hamilton to Haldimand..... 232
- of Detroit, party of prevented by low water from going to Kaskaskias; bring in prisoner; mention..... 234
- Poutcouattamies of St. Joseph, a young chief of, son of Lagesse, makes speech in council..... 356-357
- of St. Joseph; mention..... 361
- mention in letter of John Dodge to John Monture.... 380
- mention of, in Hamilton's speech to the Indians at Detroit, July, 1778..... 322, 324
- must be ordered to move down the Illinois River, mention in De Peyster's letter to Haldimand..... 365
- Powder Magazine at Vincennes—Built, mention in letter of Hamilton to Haldimand..... 233
- location known to Americans..... 261
- Prairie de (du) Chien..... 365
- Presents—absolutely necessary in dealing with Indians.... 278, 313, 317
- giving of to Poutcouattamies of Detroit, chiefs of sent by Hamilton to Kaskaskia; mention in letter of Hamilton to Haldimand 232
- "Present State of European Settlements on the Mississippi"—Historical work by Captain Philip Pittman, foot note.. 459
- Presque Isle (Erie, Pa.)—Army from Detroit goes to Niagara by way of 371
- Priests—At Vincennes gratefully received by French inhabitants 310
- Prisoners—Mention 230, 232, 255, 263, 270, 273, 416
- Proclamation, French 373-376
- Proclamation—Issued by the Commandant Edward Abbott, to the inhabitants of Post Vincennes..... 181-182
- of Colonel John Todd to inhabitants of the Illinois County 287-288
- Province of Illinois—Mention..... 310, 315
- Provisions—Scarcity of—extract from Bowman's Journal.... 250
- high at Kaskaskia, and to be gotten only by Clark giving bond for goods, or by force, mention..... 284
- mention 333, 447-448
- Patrick Henry (Fort of)—Name given, after capture by Americans, to Vincennes..... 410, 411, 412, 414-417
- Pyankeshaw Chiefs—Land grant of, note..... 222
- Pyankeshaw Land Grant—Ignored by the United States; mention in note..... 222
- ignored by the British commandant at Fort Chartres; mention in note 222
- parties mentioned in; see note on..... 222
- Quebec—Associates of John Murray in, mention in the grant of land by the Pyankeshaws..... 222
- express to carry the news of the taking of Kaskaskia; mention Hamilton's letter to Haldimand..... 330

- Haldimand to Gen. Bude (?), personal letter dated at, 17th June, 1779..... 450-452
- Haldimand to De Peyster, letter dated at, May 20, 1779. 439-440
- Haldimand's letter to Lord Geo. Germaine, dated from 445-449
- John Dodge makes his escape from..... 380
- mention 314, 331, 445
- Quindre, Lieut. Louis de (?)—Returned from attack on the fort at Ky. mention..... 357
- Quiquabones—
- Quiquaboos—(Kickapoos.
- belt, given to, by Hamilton at council held at Detroit.. 324
- chiefs of, at conference Ft. Sackville..... 394
- example of, followed by other Indian tribes..... 233
- (tribe) Kickapoos in council Detroit, 1778..... 319-323
- (Kickapoos) join Hamilton..... 220
- Mahimamba presents pipe for the Quiquabones at council held at Detroit June, 1778..... 320
- (Indian tribe); thanks given the tribe by Hamilton, at the conference at Detroit, 1778; mention..... 322
- united and sincere; mention in speech of Quiquapoquois at Detroit 1778..... 327
- (Kickapoos) village chiefs in council held at Detroit, 1778, list of..... 319
- (Kickapoos Indians) war party of, go toward Kaskaskia in interest of British..... 233
- Quiquapoquois (Oulatonon chief)—Hamilton presents certificate to 328
- mention 319, 320
- speech of, in reply to Hamilton at council of Indians he'd at Detroit, 1778..... 326, 327
- Racine, Jean Baptiste, alias St. Marie—French commandant at Vincennes..... 463
- Governor Abbott draws on treasurer, for pay of..... 314
- Raimbault—Two men by name of, traders go with goods from the Miamis to Vincennes..... 352
- Ramsey, James—Appointed to office by John Wilkin, commandant of the Illinois at Fort Chartres..... 316
- describes himself as Sub-Lieut. in His Majesty's 42d Regiment and Judge Advocate of the Province of Ills..... 315
- Randolph, Fer'k H.—Clerk of council, signs Dejean's permit to visit the Illinois..... 308
- Rastel, Philippe Francois, Chevalier de Rocheblave. (see Rocheblave) mention 463
- Rebel Flag—Mention by Hamilton in letter to Haldimand... 228
- Rebel Letters—Clark's speech to the Poutawatamies.... 430, 431
- copies of mention..... 429
- Rebel Officers—Mention..... 331
- Rebel Speaker—At Indian council, Vincennes, mention..... 357
- Rebels (Americans)—Enterprising and brave, but lack resources 346
- mention 197, 221, 320, 323, 325, 352, 357

- name used by English in speaking of American colonists in revolt.....227, 228
- "Recollections of persons and places in the West," by Brackenridge; mention 460
- Records—Old land office at Vincennes..... 316
- Recruiting Service..... 194
- Red People (Indians)—mention.....210, 211, 213
- Redstone, Old Fort—At mouth of Duniap Creek, a tributary of the Monongahela, present site of Brownsville, Pa....
- Clark appoints it a meeting place for companies..... 191
- Clark leaves that settlement late in May, mention.... 231
- Regular Troops—Bad conduct of some; mention..... 231
- Reinards } (Fox) Indians—Mention 437
- Renards }
- Religion—Mention201, 202, 376
- Renclo—A Canadian purchases horses for Clark.....436, 437
- Riviere a l'Anguille (Eel River)—Miami, at expected to join Hamilton 362
- Miami of, mention 220
- Revolutionary War—Koguethagechton (Capt. White Eyes) explains the causes of the war to the Delaware Indians177, 178
- mention173, 174, 179, 180, 289
- River Pearl—Mention 293
- River St. Joseph—Indians on..... 207
- Rocheblave, Philippe, Francois de Kastel, Chevalier de—Born Savournon, France. Died in Canada subsequent to 1786. Last British commandant in the Illinois country.
- abandons property at Kaskaskia and goes to Spanish possessions 297
- Abbott encloses note from, in letter to Carleton, relating to conduct of Spaniards..... 315
- Bentley believes Rocheblave had not taken the oath of allegiance to England..... 297
- Bentley hopes that Murray has explained to Abbott the nature of complaints against Rocheblave.....299-303
- Bentley states that Rocheblave has sworn allegiance to the kingdoms of France, Spain and Great Britain, perfidy of..... 299
- Butler (Henry), at Fort Gage, examined by.....304-306
- capture of..... 330, 332
- Carleton's letter to, mention in foot note..... 462
- commandant at Kaskaskia, captured by Clark..... 458
- Rocheblave—
- extract from a letter to Bosseron (translation)..... 309
- Illinois government of, vested in.....295, 298
- injustice of, to Bentley and other English subjects at Kaskaskia300-303
- marries Marie Dufresne, a native of Kaskaskia..... 463
- mention.....203, 232, 295, 296, 297, 302, 303, 306, 309, 311, 315, 330, 331, 332, 458, 462, 463.
- outrages, and contempt of law, instances of.....296-298

- succeeds Capt. Lord in command at Kaskaskia..... 463 Williamsburgh, Va., Rocheblave held prisoner at, by the Americans 232
- Roche de Bout—Rocher de Bout (Rock on end; standing rock)—Camp at, Hamilton writes letter there to Haldimand reporting progress of expedition to Vincennes. 354. 355
- Rocher-de-Bout. Neegik (Ottawa war chief)—There informs Hamilton of proceedings of the Rebels at Vincennes. 356-358
- Roetie River—Mention..... 336
- Rogers, Lieut. John—Cousin of George Rogers Clark, born Virginia, 1757, died Richmond, Va., 1794..... commands "The Willing," a large Mississippi keel boat 239 conducts to Williamsburgh, British officers taken prisoner at Vincennes, etc..... 274, 275
 mention 239, 248
- Rum, mention 296, 321, 327, 359, 368
- Runners, mention 200
- Sacred Pipe—Mention 208, 209, 213
- Sackville, Fort—Abbot gives name of Fort Sackville to Vincennes in honor of Lord George Sackville..... 311 chiefs of the Indian nations assembled at; conference. 394
 mention 244, 270, 311, 350, 394
 Vincennes so called in articles of capitulation..... 270
- Sackville, Lord George—Later known as Lord George Germaine; became, 1782, first Viscount Sackville, son of the first Duke of Dorset; born 1716, died 1785; secretary of state (of England) for the colonies, 1775, in Lord North's cabinet; Carleton's letter to, see foot
 note 463
 Ha'dimand to Sackville, letter of 173 letter of, to Carleton..... 174
 letter to Haldimand; mention in foot-note 174
- Saginaw—De Peyster sends to, to get corn for the Indians... 438
- St. Ange de Bellerive, Jean—Commanded at Fort Chartres 1721; again 1733. His son Louis, commandant at Kaskaskia 1727, surrendered Fort Chartres to English, Oct., 1765, died St. Louis, 1774 (Louis).
- St. Croix—Lieut. in McCarty's Cahokia volunteers; anecdote of 262, 263
 son of Lieut. St. Croix captured when disguised as an Indian; anecdote of 262, 263
- St. Geme Beauvias, Vitol—Sketch of..... 460
- St. Geme, Beauvias, Jean Baptiste—Family of; mention..... 460
- St. Genevieve, } Mo., later home of M. Beauvias of Kaskaskia 460
 Ste. }
- St. George's Ensign—To be hoisted at Vincennes by Hay as a signal to Hamilton 228, 229, 230 hoisted on Sundays and holidays; significance of to Indians 221, 222
- St. Germain, Jean—Signs French proclamation at the Caskaskias 457
- St. Joseph (Fort)—Attack on planned..... 455
 Chevalier given some authority at 335

Chevalier to Lernoult, letter dated from.....	443, 444
Chevalier of, mention	360
De Peyster orders Gautier to proceed to	367
De Peyster sends interpreter to	368
Gautier (Gotier) to attempt to assemble the Indians there to aid Hamilton	369
Indians of under control	334
mention
331, 334, 335, 336, 342, 345, 360, 362, 364, 366, 368,	398, 418, 443, 444, 455
Poutawattamis of join Hamilton	220
The "Welcome," sent to; mention	366
St. Joseph's River—Indians of, grow indifferent to the British ..	3
Miami village, Ke-ki-ong-gay, on both sides of	221
traders factor among the savages of the river	172
St. Lawrence (Fort)—Attack on planned; mention in Zeisber- ger's letter to Gibson	381
St. Marie—Jean Baptiste Racine, commandant at Vincennes; mention	314, 463
St. Marie (See Racine)—Mention	314
St. Pierre River—Indians to assemb'e at; mention	365
St. Tammany (The Patron Saint of America)—Name given Col. George Morgan during the war for independence, by his admirers	180
St. Vincennes—See Vincennes.
Ste. Genevieve, Mo.—Later home of M. Beauvias of Kas-kaskia	460
Sakis County—Renclo, a Canadian, purchases horses for Clark in	436
Sakis Indians—Mention	437
Saline River—Clark crosses the north fork of	240
Sample, Mr.—Instructed to open Gibson's letter to Brodhead	385
Sample—Killbuck sends six men to conduct Sample to Ochi- Town; mention in letter, Zeisberger to Gibson	381
stores asked for by, not forwarded by the quartermaster	383
Sample, Mrs.—Information concerning her husband with- held from; mention	384
Sandusky,
Sandooski (Sanduske, Sandusky, Santuske, St. Duskie)— Meaning of Sandusky, probably from Sah-un-dus-kee; in Wyandot Indian language, "clear cold water."
chiefs come to Detroit with John Montaine	420
Delawares brought there by Hurons	369
Huron Indians from; mention	552
mention	352, 369, 371, 381, 420, 421, 427, 435
warriors mustered at	381
"Sandy Barrens" of Knox County, Ind.	241
Sa-pa-ti-a (Ta-pa-tia)—Village chief of the Oulatonons (Ceas); medal given to; see foot note	325
presents a belt and speaks at the council held at De- troit	320
speech in reply to Hamilton at council held at De- troit	326, 328
Sargent, Winthrop—Letter of, to George Washington quoted; see foot notes by Dillon	283

- Sastaritsi (Huron Chief)—With Capt. Chene and Egnseway, attempt to enter Vincennes 424-425
- Sault Ste Marie—Mention 172
- Saunders, John—Guide in Clark's expedition, becomes confused; accused of being a traitor..... 198, 199
- Sauteux (Indians)—Mention 435
- Savages—Mention..... 220, 221, 297, 309, 331, 362
- Seneca Country—Army from Detroit takes route through; mention 371
- Senecas (Indian Tribe)—Mention 324
- Sentry—In Clark's army; mention 249-250
- Schieffelin, Lieut. (Jacob?)—A British officer under Hamilton; mention 228
- Schlosser, Mr.—Information given to by Chevalier in reference to the Indians at St. Joseph..... 335
- Schuyler River—A battle between the King's troops and rebels at; mention 304
- Scott, General Chas.—Mention in foot note..... 219
- Scouts (British)—Mention 232
- Scouts (Indian)—In British employ; mention..... 234
- Shaganoba (Indian)—Monture to send for; mention..... 389
- Shannon, Capt. W.—Taken prisoner 258
- Shawaneese (Shawanese, Shawnees) Indians—Chief of, delivers Capt. Helm's letter at the conference held at Ft. Sackville 395
- chief of; speech at conference held at Ft. Sackville..... 394, 395
- Hamilton holds council with, at the Miami town.... 359
- in Ohio, villages of the Miami, burned, note by H. W. B. 289
- mention 232, 233, 234, 324, 339, 343, 357, 359, 362, 389, 392-396
- probably at Indian council on Cherakee river.... 232, 233
- southern Indians to assist..... 389
- towns; Col. John Bowman repulsed at..... 285
- Shawneetown, Ill.—Present town of; Croghan captured by Indians on river near 217
- Shelby, Capt. Isaac (afterwards governor of Ky.)—Asked to join with the Indians in raids on Detroit 280
- received well by the Indian tribes in the Wea town of Ouitanon 280
- Shilby (Shelby), Capt. James—Commands troops at attack on St. Josephs..... 455
- Shroud, Lieut.—English officer under Hamilton, accident to, sent back to Detroit 354
- present at the council with Indians..... 341
- with servants and men, accompanies Hamilton..... 353
- Siggenake—Dissatisfied Milwaukee chief; mention..... 432
- Silversmith (a young)—At Detroit, friend of John Leith mention 269
- Singing—Mention 251
- war songs by Cha-ha, Ouittonons and others..... 327
- war songs by Chippewa, Ottawa (Ottawa), Poutawatamie and Qui-qua-bones 322

- war songs sung by Hamilton, Capt. Lernoult and several officers, mention 346
- war songs by Peemembikaetack, Poutawattamie chief. 322
- Smith, Capt.—Mention 192
- Smith, Major William—Advanced money to recruit men on Holston and to meet Clark in Kentucky 191
- Clark discloses his daring designs to company of..... 195
- of companies recruited by, on the Holston, but one arrived in Kentucky..... 195
- Soldiers—Under Clark, bravery and good conduct of.... 256, 257
- Son of Lagesse—A young chief of the Poucouattamies of St. Joseph, makes speech at council of Indians held with the Americans at Vincennes..... 356, 357
- Southern Indians—Designs of mention..... 389
- invited by British Indian agent to assemble at Cherakee River and go to Vincennes..... 233
- treaty of peace, presented to Ouabache Indians mention by 396, 397
- South Toledo, Ohio—Battle of "The Fallen Timbers" fought near, mention of in note by the editor..... 176
- Somers, Capt. (English officer)—Invents plan for block houses at Pensacola 290-292
- Spain—Alleged by Bentley that Rocheblave had taken oath of allegiance to 299
- mention 192
- Spaniards—Belt for..... 251
- mention 251, 299, 315, 327, 328, 331, 340
- Spanish—Mention..... 238, 284, 323, 326, 331, 378
- method of dealing with Indians through unwise by Clark, mention 208
- government preferred by Rocheblave to the English government, mention 297
- territory, mention 190
- war, mention 391
- Speeches—Mention 178, 209-214, 319-328
- Spies—Mention 189, 195, 197, 199, 200, 204, 463
- Stanwix, Fort—Mention 236
- Steele, Col.—Mention 387
- Stewart's Crossing—Stragglers of regiment at, mention in Gibson's letter to Taylor 387
- Sterling, Capt. Thos.—Takes command at Fort Chartres for the British 461
- Stone House of the Jesuits—At Kaskaskia mention..... 462
- Stuart, Mr. (John?)—British Indian agent; Hamilton sends belts to, for Indians and a letter describing conditions. 232, 344
- mention 242, 243, 250, 251, 395, 396
- Sugar Camps—Clark's army reaches; make camps..... 251
- place where Clark and his army encamped before Vincennes. See map..... 242, 243
- Sullivan, Dan—Awaits return of Indian messengers..... 386
- Sullivan's—Stragglers from the regiment at; mention in Gibson's letter to Taylor..... 387

- Surgeon—With Hamilton's army obliged to return to Detroit with Lieut. Shroud 354
- Surrender—Of Post Vincennes, placard to inhabitants signed by Geo. Rogers Clark..... 255
- Taffid—Liquor used by Indians; mention..... 296
- "Tamanend"—Name conferred by Delaware Indians upon Colonel George Morgan to show their great respect... 180
- Tammany—Society under the name of; foot note..... 180
- spoilsmen of New York build "a machine on its ruins, adopting its name and ceremonial forms;" mention note 180, 181
- Tapatia (Sapatia)—Village Chief of the Ouiattonons, presents a green belt and speaks at the council held at Detroit, June, 1778..... 320, 325, 326, 328
- Taylor, Maj. Richard—Gibson asks Morgan to give Taylor the news conveyed in letter..... 386, 387, 388
- Tennessee River—Clark daily expecting troops by way of, mention 283
- Clark plans to leave the Ohio at Fort Massac, three leagues below on an island in the mouth of river. 197
- easy conveyance down..... 454
- Territory (The)—Of the U. S. Northwest of the River Ohio, gained for the colony of Va. by Geo. Rogers Clark; mention 171
- Thiakli river, Forks of—Mention..... 340
- Thunder Bay—Chief Matchigrins with Indians from; mention 419
- Tippecanoe River (Thipicano)—Mention in note, accompanying Hamilton's letter to Haldimand..... 220
- Tippicon (Thipicano)—(Miamis of the Tippicanoe River) join Hamilton, mention in letter to Haldimand 220
- Tobacco—(The old) Indian chief makes speech to the Americans at Vincennes..... 356
- (the old) spurns American belts at conference..... 356
- Tobacco—Roll of Creek tobacco delivered to the Peaukeshaw chief by a Shawnanese 396
- Tobacco's Son (Francis)—A Plankeshaw called by Indians "The Grand Door to the Wabash," his great influence with the Indians..... 206
- Clark sends him a present by Father Gibault..... 206
- declares to the British that he is a friend to the Big Knives 255
- friendship for Helm..... 206, 207
- his conduct and attachment to Capt. Helm, amusing anecdote of..... 277-278
- mention 255, 259, 282, 326
- mention in speech of Quilquapoquis 326
- refuses to enter council..... 278
- resides in village of Chipkawkey near Vincennes..... 206
- speech to the Delaware Indians..... 282
- tells the Delaware Indians that he had become security for their good conduct..... 283
- village of, near Post Vincennes mention..... 278
- Todd, Col. John—Commander of the Ills. Country, born Pa. Killed, battle Blue Licks, Ky., 1782. See foot note 287

- visits Post Vincennes and Kaskaskia for purpose of organizing a temporary government..... 287
- Todd, John Jr. (same person as above)—mention..... 460 proclamation of..... 287, 288
- Trade—Places in the west, Peoria, Wea and Miami; places of evil notoriety 311
- Traders—In the interest of Detroit a busy factor among savages of Rivers Maumee, Ohio, St. Joseph, and the country of the Ills.; mention..... 172, 281, 437
- Trail—Between ancient villages of Kaskaskia and Vincennes few changes of the old route; mention..... 240
- Treaties—Between the U. S. and the several Indian tribes, from 1778 to 1837; quoted in foot note..... 181 with Indians 208
see Indian treaties.
- Treaty—Of alliance between U. S. and France; foot note; Dillon 197 of peace with Great Britain; mention... 289
- Trees marked by men from Clark's army to indicate route to camp 247
- Troops—Clark's at Vincennes, in need of clothing, given supplies from captured British boats..... 272, 273, 274 of the English troops which occupied the several posts, only a single regiment between Montreal and Michillieinaskinac; mention Hamilton's letter to Haldimand 331
- Tuscarawas—Letter to commanding officer at; mention..... 428
fort at; mention 427
- Twiss, Ensign (later Lieut.)..... 379
mention 370, 422
Twiss, Lieutenant—Bolton hopes Twiss will be ordered to Niagara, mention 422
- United States—Clark finds himself cut off from intercourse with, mention 238
flag of; mention..... 374
Illinois one of the leading states of..... 436
mention 171, 197, 222, 238, 374, 376, 459, 463
Post Vincennes, inhabitants of, felt independent when supported by U. S..... 204 treaty of alliance between, and France. See foot note, Dillon 197 treaty of peace between Great Britain and the U. S.... 289
- Vaudreuil—Governor general of Canada; letter to, from Mackarty; foot note 459
- Vernet, Henry du—English officer (see Du Vernet) second lieutenant of artillery; Hamilton's military engineer; signs list of stores taken from Detroit upon an expedition to the Illinois 384
mention 227, 229, 244, 421
- Vincennes (Fort at) enlarged and completed under plans of; mention in foot note..... 244
- Vermilion (Big) River—Mention..... 222, 273, 278, 329

- Vessel—(English) from Niagara arrives at Detroit with troops 353
 mention 366, 370
 none at Detroit; mention in Hamilton's letter to Haldimand 331
- Vessels—(Armed) De Peyster wishes for vessels to awe the Indians on Lake Michigan and prevent the rebels building boats 437
- Vessels of the King—People of Philadelphia prevail upon congress to remove prohibition upon 309
- Vigo, Col. Francis—Born Sardinia about 1747, died in Vincennes 1836.
 Spanish merchant who had been at Post Vincennes gives intelligence to Clark 238
- Village Chiefs of the Ojibwas—Have nothing to say in war; reference to, in speech of Sa-pa-tia (Ta-pa-tia) to Lieut. Governor Hamilton 328
- Vincennes (Post Vincenne, Post Vincennes, Fort Vincennes, Post St. Vincent)—A type of Western French settlements 310
 Abbott leaves on account of expense; necessity of a commandant there 310, 317-318 account of the capitulation of 270-271, 405-407, 424-426 arrival of "The Willing" at 407 articles of capitulation 270-271, 406-407 attack on agreed upon; preparations begun by Clark.. 239 Bailey (Lieut. John) ordered to march and fire on... 244 barracks at built; powder magazine built 233
 Boat with five Frenchmen captured by the sentry of Clark's army; Frenchmen report that Clark's approach is as yet undiscovered at Vincennes 250
 Butler examined before Rocheblave at 306 capture of by British under Sir Henry Hamilton; account of 227-235 capture of, by George Rogers Clark 203, 246-274, 285 capture of Hamilton at; mention 174 Celoron writes that Jean Baptiste Chapoton, Bosseron, Jr., and M. Le Gras are on good terms with rebel officers at; mention in Hamilton's letter to Haldimand 343 citizens of requested to remain in their houses; placard of Clark to inhabitants of Post Vincennes... 255
 Clark considers necessity of having an American officer in command at 206
 Clark discloses to his troops his designs upon 195
 Clark laments that they did not march from Post Vincennes to Detroit 283
 Clark leaves officers in command of, with necessary instructions 280
 Clark's march on, order of divisions, etc. 402
 Clark's route from the Wabash river over the flooded lands to; mention 240

Clark sends for Gibault and has conference with, in regard to	203
Clark sends orders to, to make war on the Delawares.	282
Clark with a party of horse, reaches Port Vincennes..	284
Commanded by a Frenchman, Jean Baptiste Racine..	463 completion of fort, after the plans of Henry du Vernet; mention in foot note	244 conference at with the Indians, Jan. 26, 1779.....	394-397 country between Vincennes and Evansville, Indiana, described in note	241 court at, assumes the power of granting lands to every applicant	288 court of civil and criminal jurisdiction instituted at, in June, 1779	288
crops at, bad; mention	454
Decker, Luke, citizen of, land grant of Moses Henry assigned to	245 described by Sir Henry Hamilton; plans for improvement of given; mentioned in letter to Haldimand	231-232
description of, Clark's attack upon.....	259-272
Duff (John) and party convey news to Clark that Gov. ernor Abbott had left Post Vincennes for Detroit..	197
expedition to; Hamilton reports progress in letter to Haldimand, from the Miamis town.....	359-360
French inhabitants of, take oath of allegiance to Virginia	214
Gibault goes to from Kaskaskia.....	332
Gibault, Dr. Laffont and retinue set out for, July 14th, 1778, with an address to the inhabitants, from Clark	203, 204
Gibault, secular priest of the French and Indians at; mention in foot-note	201
Hamilton desires to surrender the fort.....	425
Hamilton's letter to De Galvis, dated Vincennes, Jan. 18th, 1779.....	377-378
Hamilton's letter to Haldimand, dated Jan. 24th, 1779.. ..	389-393
Hamilton's letter to Haldimand dated Vincennes, Jan. 30th, 1779.....	400
Hamilton's notice to the inhabitants of (translation)..	237
Hamilton takes possession of; receives submission of inhabitants, etc., who swear allegiance to the king	377
Helm takes command at, by order of George Rogers Clark; well received by the people.....	206
Henry, (Ann) and children, heirs of Moses Henry granted a lot in; mention	245
Henry, Moses, made Indian agent at.....	245
Indian nations invited by British to convene at.....	233
Indians informed by rebels that the Indians of the Lake were coming to their assistance; reject overtures of rebels	354
Inhabitants of anxious to join Clark.....	273

- inhabitants of know nothing of the approach of Clark's army; mention 244
 inhabitants of, placard sent to; mention in Hamilton's letter to Haldimand 228, 230
 inhabitants of take oath of allegiance in the church at;
 an officer elected; American flag displayed, etc.... 204 inhabitants of, their situation and characteristics, described by Abbott 313
 Kennedy sent to plantation near to steal boats..... 248
 Le Gras acts as president of the court at; mention.... 288 letter from the inhabitants of, to Patrick Henry..... 329 Lienetot instructed to proceed to..... 284 memoir of the inhabitants of, addressed to the minister of France, M. le Chevalier de Luzene; mention.... 329
 mention..185, 195, 201, 203-207, 214-216, 220-223, 226, 227, 235-285, 310, 311, 316-318, 329, 332, 378, 394, 395, 400-418, 420, 421, 424, 426, 428, 436, 445, 454. necessity of a commandant at, mentioned by Gov. Abbott 317-318
 old land office records at, now in state archives at Indianapolis; mention, foot note 316 old trail between Kaskaskia and Vincennes; mention.. 240 placard to the inhabitants of, by George Rogers Clark. 255 plan of Major Hay for strengthening post followed by Hamilton; mention 390 population of, at time of Clark's advance upon..... 254 present city of, on left bank of Wabash in Knox county, Ind. 240
 prisoners taken by Hamilton; mention in Hamilton's letter to Haldimand 230
 proclamation of Commandant Edward Abbott..... 181 submission of inhabitants of; reference to in Hamilton's letter to Haldimand..... 330 surrendered by Hamilton to Clark; articles of capitulation, etc 270-271, 406-407 surrender to Hamilton by Helm; letter describing.... 226 taken by the British under Hamilton, Dec., 1778..... 215 Todd (Col. John) visits, for the purpose of organizing temporary government, etc. 287
 Virginians, after taking the oath at, establish officers there; list of in explanatory note..... 337 Virginia—Advices received by Lord Sackville that the Rebels of Virginia and Pennsylvania had deserted their posts;
 mention 174
 and Pennsylvania divided into parties respecting territory of Kentucky 194
 Clark assembles the people of Kentucky to elect deputies to assembly of..... 185 commonwealth of, pledged to assist and protect white inhabitants of Kaskaskia..... 192 description of the forts constructed in the western parts of 182-183

- emigrants from the interior of Va. and other states attracted towards Ky.; causes given..... 286
- French inhabitants of Kaskaskia take oath of allegiance to the state of.....203, 286
- general assembly of the state of, passes act, 1778, relating to Ohio and the Illinois country 214
- Illinois once a possession of; mention 463
- inhabitants of Cahokia take the oath of allegiance to.. 203
- Indians employed in exciting alarm on the frontiers of Va. and Pa.; mention 174
- laws, resolutions and state papers of; mention..... 171
- rebels from; mention in speech of Qui-qua-po-quois at Indian council held at Detroit, June, 1778..... 320
- Todd (Col. John) organizes temporary government, according to the act of the general assembly of, at Vincennes and Kaskaskia; mention..... 287
- Virginia, Governor of—Clark writes letter to; foot note... 258
- mention232, 275, 285
- Virginia Government—Sends letters to Clark by Wm. Myers, with notice of troops being raised 272
- Virginian Prisoner—Tells Monforton of the contents of a letter from an officer of Congress to the Huron Indians. 434, 435
- Virginian Troops—Inhabitants of Vincennes make it a crime to receive; mention 329
- Virginians—Advancing towards St. Duskie, restrain the Indians 420
- Big Knives, name given Virginians by Indians..... 210, 212, 213, 326
- establish officers at Post Vincennes; mention in explanatory note 337
- French and Virginians jointly concerned in an underhand purchase of land of the Peaukashaws.....343
- mention..193, 197, 326, 329, 334, 336, 343, 369, 393, 394, 395, 420, 425, 426, 432, 433..... 437
- war chiefs of the Ouliattonons (Weas) much pleased to go against; reference to in speech of Sa-pa-tia in reply to Hamilton 326
- Viviat, Mr., of Kaskaskia—Favored by Rocheblave in commercial transactions297, 301
- Volunteer Militia—Of Detroit; notice given that they were to be discharged232, 233
- Volunteer Militia of Detroit. See Detroit.
- Volunteers—List of persons who must carry arms when occasion calls; mention in Hamilton's letter to Haldimand. 346
- Wabache (Wabachees, Wabash)—Country of; advices received by Lord Sackville that the Indians were scouring the Ohio and Wabash country; mention..... 174
- (the two little Wabachees) quoted from the Mason letter in note, H. W. B..... 246
- Clark's army try to find..... 248
- commandants of the different towns on..... 189
- Indian nations on; join the Virginians under Clark.. 207

- mention in explanatory note..... 217
- Indians, greatly influenced by Tobacco's Son..... 206
- Wabash River—Capt. John Rogers ordered to go to Vincennes by way of 239
- Clark's army strive to find; mention in Maj. Bowman's Journal 248
- Clark crosses about ten miles below Vincennes..... 242
- Clark's route to, over the flooded lands; mention..... 240
- grant of the Pyankeshaws to John Murray lies on both sides of, to the Ohio, mention in note..... 222
- Indian nations on, friendly to Americans 278-279
- Indians of; indifferent to the British; continued services of must be secured..... 173
- Lands bordering on; mention in Col. Todd's proclamation 287
- (Little) channel of..... 247
- Little (The two Little Wabachees); Clark's army reaches after many difficulties 246, 247
- men ferried over, to a small hill called Mame'le; mention in Bowman's Journal..... 247
- mention.. 205, 209, 215, 217, 240-242, 245, 247, 248, 272, 279, 287, 313, 330, 428, 455.
- mention in note, Hamilton's letter to Haldimand..... 223
- Wabash Valley—Early settlement of, by Cox; foot note.... 219
- Wabenekiah—Death of; mention in speech of Lieut. Gov. Hamilton to Indians, in council held Detroit June, 1778 321
- Wampum—Mention..... 320, 321, 322, 324 326
- War—Foreign; reason to think one is declared; mention, Hamilton's letter to Haldimand..... 331
- for independence goes against British; mention..... 463
- songs; mention 322, 346
- with foreign powers; mention in Hamilton's letter to Haldimand 224
- Warrens' Island—See Warriors Island..... 243
- Warriors of the Weas—mention in Hamilton's letter to Haldimand 224
- Warriors Island—Clark's army concealed on..... 402
- mention 243, 244
- see foot note concerning; (H. W. B.)..... 243
- situated about two miles from Vincennes; mention.... 243
- Washington, George—Letter of Winthrop Sargent to; quoted. See notes by Dillon 283
- Wanaquibe—Chief of the Poutcouattamies, mention in letter of Hamilton to Haldimand..... 362
- Weas—Hamilton recommends the example of the Lake Indians to 224
- (Oulattonnons) village chiefs in council at Detroit, June, 1778; war chiefs in council, &c.; lists of..... 319
- Wea—Creek; mention 218
- Indian villages, description, location and numbers of.. 218
- Miami town of Ouiatenon, location of..... 218
- prairie; mention 218, 219

(Ouitenon) Captain Shelby and company well treated by Indians of; mention.....	280 towns, Maj. Lienetot and volunteers sent to Wea towns by Clark	284 village, trading place frequented by men of evil reputation	311
Weatanon—Mention in explanatory note.....	216
Welcome—(The) an English sloop, mention.....	368 benefits to be derived from use of.....	368
dismissed by De Peyster, mention.....	366
(vessel) mention	426
sent to La Bay, St. Joseph, Milwaukee; mention.....	366
Wesnippigoes—Indians, mention	418
Western Frontier—Brig. Gen. Lachlin McIntosh directed by Congress of U. S. to collect at Pittsburgh men for defense of	286
Wheat—Prohibition of export of.....	448
Wheeling—Clark takes in his stores at.....	194
White Belt—Mention. See Belts.....	212
White Eyes (Capt.)—Delaware Indian chief, friend of Zeisberger, died Nov. 10, 1778.
(Wicocalind) distinguished Delaware chief; mention	175
Heckwelder and Capt. White Eyes, friends and comrades of forest; mention in note.....	179
identity of established; mention.....	179
incident relating to his devotion to Heckwelder.....	179
Heckwelder gives the aboriginal names of White Eyes as "Koguethagetchton".....	179
with his followers always friendly to Americans; mention	179
White Horse—Henry Butler says general of king's forces was at place called	304
White River—Capt. John Rogers ordered to force his way up the Wabash as high as the mouth of.....	239, 240
Delaware Indians settled a town at forks of.....	281
limits of grant of Pyankeshaws to John Murray begins again at; mention in note.....	222
Wiagtonon (Ouitanon)—Celoron unfit to command there, opinion of Sir Henry Hamilton.....	235
Wicocalind, or Capt. White Eyes—Mention in foot note.....	175
(Capt. White Eyes) name of White Eyes as it was spelled at treaty of Fort McIntosh; mention in foot note	179
Wilkins, Col. John—Mention	295
Wilkinson, Gen. Jas.—Mention in foot note.....	219
Win, or Wm. (?), Mr.—Mentioned in letter of Helm to Clark	226
Williams, Capt. John—Commanded company under Clark; commands garrison at Kaskaskia.....	205 commands party of Americans who meet and capture party of Indians returning to Vincennes; foot note	267
goes to Ky.; conducts British officers taken prisoner at Vincennes	271

- mention 250, 402
- Williamsburgh, Va.—Clark visits and lays his plans before authorities; success of plans..... 463
- Gov. Henry's secret instructions to Gen. Clark dated at 191
- British officers, prisoners at Vincennes, sent to Williamsburgh 275
- Rocheblave a prisoner there; mention in letter, Hamilton to Haldimand..... 232
- "Willing" (The)—Clark's galley, arrives at Vincennes..... 407
- Clark sets sail in; mention 280
- crew of galley of Clark's army would have been a great reinforcement before Vincennes; mention..... 240, 255
- large Mississippi keel boat, named after Capt. James Willing; mention in foot-note 239
- Willing, James—Asks Haldimand to give him letter of recommendation to officers up the river..... 294
- mention 429
- writes letter from New Orleans to Gen. Haldimand asking permission to trade near New Orleans.... 293, 294
- Willing, Thomas, Esq.—Of Philadelphia, brother of Jas. Willing; given by his brother as security in letter to Haldimand 293, 294
- Willing, Morris & Co. (Thos. Willing & Robert Morris)—Send goods for Illinois Indian trade by Jas. Willing..... 293
- Winchester, Va.—Prisoners taken by Royal Army sent there.. 305
- Winsor, Justin—American historian, born Boston, 1831, died Cambridge, Mass., 1897. Historical writings of; mention foot note..... 458
- Wingenund, Capt.—Incident relating to his devotion to Heckewelder; mention in note 179
- Winston, Richard—Signs the French proclamation at the Cascaskias 457
- Wisconsin—Historical Soc.; mention in foot note..... 242
- state of; mention 177
- Wm. (?) 226
- Wold Rapid—Mention 339
- Wolfs (Loups)—Indians divided between the king's interest and the rebels; mention 435
- Indians, chief of, Rocheblave engages to speak to..... 309
- Women—Of the white race, their absence from settlements; remove necessary restraint..... 311
- (American) prisoners at Detroit; cruelties practised upon; mention 269, 270
- Sapatia in speech at Detroit in Indian council, June, 1778, hopes compassion will be shown women and children 320
- Wood—Cost of, at Post Vincennes; mention 391
- Worthington, Capt. Edward—Commanded company under Clark; mention 402
- ordered to go after canoes which had been seen, adrift 250
- Wyandots—Indians; mention in Capt. John Killbuck's letter to John Montour 379
- mention in Dodge's letter to John Montour..... 389

INDEX

609

Young, William—Mention	308
Zeisberger, Rev. David—Moravian missionary to western Indians; born Moravia 1721, died Goshen, Ohio, 1808.
historical data on our continental Indian affairs quoted from, in foot note	181
letter of, to Gibson dated Jan. 19, 1779; mention.....	381 writes letter to Gibson begging help; Gibson sends the letter to Morgan	383-386

GENERAL INDEX, 1-463.

- Abadie, }
 Abbadie, } St. Germaine de, French governor of La..... 165
 Albadie }
 Abbott, Lieut. Gov. Edward—British officer at Detroit and Vincennes
 181, 197, 203, 204, 227, 244, 299, 310-313, 316-318, 342, 356
 Abenakis—Indians of Acadia and Maine..... 135
 Accan (Michel)— }
 Accau (Michle) } Sieur Deau, Sieur Dean.....103, 131
 Accault (Michel) }
 Agoasto 133
 Aguel (Auguelle) Anthony—See You.....103, 105, 131
 Ains (Ainse, Joseph?)—Officer in English Indian service.... 398
 Ako, Michael (See Accault)103, 105, 131
 Albach, James R.—“Annals of the West,” edition of 1858.... 166
 Albemarle Co., Va..... 184
 Algonquin (Algonkins) Indian Tribe—The principal tribes were the Delawares, Miamis, Shawanese, Ottawas, Ojibwas, Sacs, Foxes, Crees, Pottowattomies and Illi-nois15, 25
 Alibanes—Indian tribe 389
 Alighin River 111
 Alighinsipore River—Probably Allegheny..... 111
 Alleghany Mountains175, 286
 Alloues (Allouez) Father Claud Jean—Jesuit priest.....14-15
 Alton, Illinois30, 31
 America88, 92, 105, 118, 277, 459
 American Archives.....171, 178
 American Colonies 178
 American Colonist 168
 American French 374
 American State Papers.....245, 315-316
 Americans
 Americans. 177, 201, 202, 277, 279, 299, 301, 302, 314, 376, 380, 391, 403, 435, 443, 446, 456, 457.
 Amherst, Sir Jeffrey—English Governor of Canada..... 460
 Anastatius (Father Douay).....153, 159, 160, 162
 Andrews, Captain—English officer 422
 Angelica (The) English Boat 421
 Anguille, Riviere a l'.....336, 362
 Annapolis 222
 Apalaches (Appalachian Mountains)..... 306
 Appendix to this volume.....458-463 Appropriation for collection and publication of historical material 1
 Aquipaguétin (Sioux Chief, of the Nadouession)..... 104
 Archives at Kaskaskia..... 461
 Argenson, Marc Pierre, Count de.....166, 167

- Arkansas (Acancas, Akancas, Akansa, Akansea, Kappas) Siouan Tribe—Algonquin name for the Quappas, a Da-cota tribe driven from the Ohio river (Gravler).....
36, 39, 92, 139, 146, 153, 155
 Arkansas (Akamsea) Indian Village..36, 39, 139, 146, 150, 154, 164
 Arkansas River 150
 Artizans44, 55
 Ascension, Fort of.....165, 168, 169
 Assotoue 155
 Assotoue (Indian Tribe) 155
 Atlantic Coast 41
 Atlantic Ocean 4
 Aubry, Charles Phillipe.....165-170
 Aubry Manuscript165-170
 AuGlaze River (Grand Glaise)..... 223
 Auguille (l'Auguille river) River.....336, 362
 Augushawa, Tawaa Chief 380
 Au-qua-sa-ca, Oulattounous war chief..... 319
 Autray (Autry)—Jean Bourdon Sieur d'.....68, 113
 Baley, (Bailey, Bayley), John, Lieut., later Capt.....
223, 244, 257, 280, 403
 Balise (The)..... 459
 Baltimore 222
 Bapaume, France 116
 Barbadoes, Island of 312
 Barbie (Barbier) Gabriel..... 116
 Baron, Major P. 337
 Barrataria Island
 Barre, Antoine Joseph Le Febvre de la—Governor of Canada.
116, 123, 147, 148, 149
 Batton (?) Capt..... 379
 Baubin, Mr. Charles319, 328, 343, 346, 352
 Baugy, Louis Henri, de Seigneur de Villecien.....147, 148
 Bautier 338
 Bay of Puans (Puants).....53, 61, 98, 99
 Bay'ey, Lieut. John—See Baley.
 Beale, Captain Robt.....384, 387
 Beaubin, Charles—See Baubin.....
 Beaulow (Beaulon) Major..... 318
 Beaupreau, Marquis de..... 166
 Beauvais, M. Vitol St. Geme 460
 Beauvais, Sieur de..... 460
 Beauvais, de Tilly, Charles Le Gardeuer Sieur de Tilly—See Tilly.
 Beckwith, Hiram W., President Board Trustees Ills. State Historical Library and editor of this volume. (See H.
 W. B.1, 2, 7, 46, 53, 216, 310, 402
 Becquet, Sieurs 309
 Belle River (Belle Riviere)—Ohio.....167, 168, 304, 337
 Bellefontaine, Sieur de..... 151
 Be'estre (Bellestre) Mr..... 352
 Bentley (Brentley), Thos.....
295, 298, 299, 300, 301, 302, 303, 307, 308, 415, 416 417

Bentley, Mrs. Thos.....	303
Big Knife	206, 207, 209, 210, 278, 279, 283
Big Knives (Virginians).....	210, 212, 213, 326
Berry, Lieut.	387
Big Muddy River	240
Billtre, Mr.	302
Bird, Capt. Henry	353, 427
Black, George Nelson, Trustee Ills. State Historical Library	2
Black River	98
Bloomer, Capt.	390
Bogis, M. de la (Baugy).....	147, 148
Boisrondet, Francois de	113
Boisbriant, Pierre Duque de.....
Bolons, Messrs.	425
Bolton, Capt. (Col. Mason).....
.....	369, 370, 371, 388, 392, 399, 420-422, 427
Bonhomme, Fort.....	150
Bonner (perhaps Pierre Bonneau).....	299, 300, 301, 303
Boon, Squire	423
Bordeaux, France	166
Bosseron, Jr.	343
Bosseron, Maj. Francis.....	259, 272, 309
Bosson, Capt.	424
Boston	314, 323, 376
Bottetourt County, Va.	186
Bourdon, Jean (John) Francois (sieur d'Autray).....	113, 116
Bowman, Fort	338
Bowman, Col. John.....	283, 285
Bowman, Joseph, Capt. (Major).....	171, 191, 194, 196, 205, 237, 238, 241-243, 248, 250, 252, 261, 265, 267, 270, 284, 285, 402, 413, 416
Bowman's Journal.....	171, 240, 242, 243, 248-250, 265, 267, 270, 284
Brackenridge, Henry M.....	460
Brehim, Capt.	451
Brigantine (The Little).....	128
British Colonies	41
Brink, W. R.....	462
Brashear, Lieut. Richard.....	280
Brodhead, Col. Daniel.....	385, 386
Brodelet, William	45
Brownsville, Pa.	191
Bœuff Fort le	422
Baude Lake (Mille Lake or Lake of the Issati).....	99, 100
Buade (Louis de, Comte de Frontenac); see frontenac.....
Buccaneer (English)	161, 162
Buccaneers (French)	76
Buckongahelas	175, 176
Bude, General	450-452
Buffalo River	98
Bukongahela	175, 176, 177, 181
Burgoyne's Army	190
Burron, Captain	226
Buseron, Capt.	266
Butler, Captain	371

- Butler, Col. Richard 175, 177
 Butler, Henry 304, 305, 306
 Butler, Jonn, Major, later Colonel..... 392, 422
 Butler's History of Ky..... 183, 193, 215, 286, 304-306
 Butler, Simon (assumed name of Simon Kenton).
 Cadadaquis }
 Cadadoquis } (Caddoes..... 154, 155, 156, 157, 158, 162
 Chadadoquile }
 Cahokia.. 201, 203, 205, 208, 214, 231, 232, 237, 238, 262, 285, 310, 330, 332.
 Cairo, Il.s..... 32
 Caldwell (The) 422
 California 39
 California, Gulf of..... 4
 California, Sea 5, 8, 31; 32
 Calumet (Pipe) .. 21, 22, 23, 26, 27, 29, 35, 36, 38, 57, 58, 59, 79, 92, 94, 101, 102, 104, 130, 131, 139, 142, 147, 153, 155, 159, 319.
 Calvert, Sieur 440
 Cample, Col. 367
 Campbell, Arthur 188, 423
 Campbell, Col. John..... 188, 197, 367, 387, 440, 454
 Canada.. 3, 8, 42, 43, 45, 55, 75, 89, 116, 117, 169, 172, 216, 276, 313, 315, 323, 329, 370, 376, 417, 434, 443.
 Canadian Archives (Letters from)..... 290-457
 Canadian Archives, mention..... 172, 173, 290, 311, 312
 Capiche Indians 156
 Cantucky county 423
 Cappa (Indian Village of the Akancas)..... 139
 Carbonneaux (Carboneaux) (Louis, Pierre Francois)... 305, 306
 Carleton, Gen. Sir Guy, afterwards Lord Dorchester—Gov.
 Gen of Canada.....
 295, 298, 300, 311, 313, 316, 317, 318, 330, 366, 368, 462, 463
 Carlisle, Pa. (Carlisle)..... 305
 Carolina 149
 Cassety, Lieut. James 342
 Catarakoui }
 Katarakoui } Indian name for site of Fort Frontenac.
 Cato, S. 457
 Cauchois, Jacques 113
 Cavellier, Jean..... 153, 154, 159, 161, 162, 163
 Cave'ier, John Baptiste, Sieur de..... 153, 159
 Cavellier, Rene Robert, Sieur de La Salle (See La Salle).
 Celoron.. 223, 232, 233, 236, 254, 330, 332, 336, 337, 343, 351, 352, 354, 355, 357, 359, 363.
 Chabadeba }
 Chabaoudeba } Indian Tribe 98
 Chabert, Lieut. (Phillipe Joncaire?)..... 332
 Chacouman, (Indian Tribe)..... 155
 Chaganon (Indian Tribe)..... 151, 154, 155, 158, 159, 160, 163
 Chaha (Ouittonon War Chief)..... 321, 327, 328

- Chaina, Isidore, Interpreter..... 420
 Chamblae, (Chamblace) 367
 Chamintawa—Ottawa chief 424
 Chaouans
 Chawanons { original spelling of Shawnees.
 Chowanons 33, 147, 149, 151
 Chapline, (Chaplin) Abraham..... 289
 Chapman, Sargeant 455
 Chapoton, Jean Baptiste..... 343, 344
 Chartres Fort (See Fort Chartres).....
 Chassagoac { Chief of the Ills. (Indian Tribe)..... 83 Chassagouausse {
 Chepontias River 109
 Chequamegon Bay
 Cherokees 232, 233, 385, 389, 395
 Cherokee River 167, 232, 233, 389, 398
 Chesne, Capt. 424-426
 Chesne, Isidore, Interpreter..... 319, 328
 Chesnes, Pointe de 354
 Chevallier, Louis..... 334, 342, 360, 361, 364, 365, 398, 418, 443, 444
 Chicago,
 Checagon, {
 Chegagon, {
 Chekagon, {
 Chicogon, { Name means Riviere de l'ail, Garlic River, from Chicagow, { the profusion of wild garlic found in the Chickager, { vicinity 357, 433, 439, 458
 Chickagon, {
 Chikagou, {
 Chicagoow, {
 Chicaou, Fort of 149
 Chicagon }
 Chicaou } River 107, 138, 139, 147, 439
 Chekagou }
 Chicagon }
 Chicagon Portage 7, 107, 138
 Chickasaes 232, 233, 345, 380, 389, 395, 396, 432, 453
 Chikacha (Indian Tribe)..... 108, 109, 111
 Chikakas, (Indian Tribe)..... 138, 139
 Chimney Rock 243
 Chippewa, (Ojebway Language)..... 4
 Chippewas, { 322, 324, 341, 361, 362, 366, 367, 374, 380, 393, 394
 Chippeweys { 397, 418, 432, 436.
 Chip-Kaw-Kay 206
 Choctaws, Indians 389, 396, 398
 Chongaskethon (Indian Tribe) (Dog or Wolf)..... 100
 Choye (Indian Tribes)..... 155 (Indian Village).
 Ciccaca, (Indian Tribes)..... 81, 92
 Clark, Fort (in the Ills.)..... 307, 308
 Clark, Capt. of Pa. Regt..... 383, 385, 387

- Clark, Geo. Rogers 226, 230, 237, 249, 365, 338, 403, 417, 420-425, 428, 430, 431, 436, 437, 453, 454, 455, 462, 463
- Clark's, George Rogers, Champaign in the Ills. 171-298
- Clark, Geo. Rogers memoir of. 245-266
- Clinton, Sir Henry. 424, 426
- Cohos, volunteers 402
- Colbert, John Baptiste (The Great Colbert) 41, 42, 43, 44, 127
- Colbert, Jean Baptiste, son of the Great Colbert. 115, 116, 117, 120, 128
- Colbert River (Meschesipi) 7, 81, 82, 86, 87, 90, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 101, 106, 107, 110, 111, 112, 118, 119, 120.
- Collett, Prof. John 241, 243
- Colonies, (American) 351
- Concarquin 435
- Conception Mission 10
- Conception River 10
- Conde, Louis de Bourbon, (The Great) 50, 51, 52, 98, 100
- Conestoga Indians 176
- Congress, Continental 171, 175, 178, 180, 181, 305, 309
- Congress of the U. S. 227, 286
- Conti } Louis Armand de Bourbon, Prince de Conty 44, 128
- Conty }
- Continental Indian Affairs. 181
- Conty, Lake (Erie) 46, 47
- Cooshocking, Ohio 379, 381, 382, 385, 386
- Corn Island 195
- Corneiller, M. 415
- Coroas (Indian Village) 155, 162, 163, 164
- Coroas River 163
- Coshocton (Cooshacking, Ohio) 351
- Couague, de—See De Couague. 351
- Country of Illinois, see Illinois. 143
- Country of the Scioux. 408, 409, 415
- Cournailier, Pierre 152, 153
- Coutoure (Guillaume (?)) 400
- Corvee 218, 219
- Cox, Sanford 166
- Craig, Neville B. 394
- Creek Nation 392, 394, 395, 396, 426
- Creek Indians 249
- Creoles (French) 87, 88, 89, 92, 93, 131
- Crevecoeur Fort 153
- Crevier, Rev. Father, (Gravier?) 217, 218, 221
- Croghan, George (Indian Agent of Great Britain) 219
- Crawfordsville, Ind. 411
- Cumberland 408, 409, 415
- Dablon, Father Claude F.—Jesuit missionary and writer, born Dieppe, 1619, died Quebec, 1697. Superior of the Jesuit Missions in N. Amer. 5, 6, 8
- Decotas (Sioux Indian Tribe) 26, 27

De'ay Farler (Donay).....	148
Damnoia (Indian Tribe).....	81
Deau, Sieur (Probably Michel Accan).....	151
Decker—Luke.....	245
Declaration of American Independence.....	181
Declaration of the King of France.....	375
DeCouagne.....	351
Deer Island.....	221
DeFrance Ohio.....	22
De Quindre, Mr. (Louis Cesaire Dagneau?).....	343, 357
Dejean, Philip (called Grand Judge of Detroit).....	224, 297, 308, 364, 428
Delawares—Leni-Lenapes—belonged to Iroquois Confederacy.....	179, 180, 232, 233, 281, 282, 283, 285, 302, 320, 325, 339, 345, 369, 381, 383, 385, 389, 394, 428
Delaware Chief (Buckongahelas, White Eyes).....	175
Denonville, Monseigneur Jacques Rene de Brisay, Marquis de Denonville, Governor of Canada 1685-89.....	149, 150, 152
De Peyster, Col. Arent Schuyler.....	299, 307, 308, 334, 335, 338, 342, 364, 369, 377, 368, 370, 371, 398, 399, 418, 419, 430, 431, 432, 433, 436, 437, 438, 439, 440, 441, 442, 444, 455, 462.
De Galvis, Don Bernardo.....	377, 378
"Description de la Louisiane"—Title of Hennepin's narrative.....	45
Des Plaines River (Branch of the Illinois River).....	7
Desplanes River (Chicago River).....	107
Detroit—Fort built 1686, by DuLhut.....	129, 151, 172, 173, 181, 197, 215, 216, 220, 221, 225, 226, 229, 232, 233, 235, 236, 238, 263, 268, 269, 270, 273, 274, 275, 276, 277, 278, 280, 283, 285, 289, 307, 317, 319, 320, 328, 330, 331, 332, 333, 334, 339, 343, 345, 348, 351, 352, 353, 354, 355, 357, 358, 360, 361, 364, 365, 367, 370, 371, 377, 389, 391, 392, 393, 394, 395, 397, 400, 401, 408, 412, 415, 418, 420, 421, 425, 426, 427, 428, 432, 433, 434, 437, 440, 445, 462, 463.
Detroit—Chief of (Dejean).....	428
Detroit—Indian partisans of.....	268, 269
Detroit—Militia.....	227, 232, 233, 236, 238, 276, 277, 362
Detroit Strait.....	47, 48
Detroit Volunteers.....	276, 277
Dillon, Judge John Brown—(American Historian).....	114, 173, 174, 178, 181, 182, 183, 184, 185, 191, 195, 197, 214, 215, 220, 239, 242, 246, 250, 258, 265, 267, 270, 272, 284, 286, 288, 289, 315.
"Discovery of the Mississippi" by Falconer.....	106, 116, 127
Discoveries and Explorations of the Mississippi—(Shea's)....	7
Doddridge, Rev. Joseph—American Historical writer, clergyman and physician, born Pa., 1769, died Wellsburg, Va., 1826.....
Dodge, John.....	379, 380
Dog Feast (Festin de Chien).....	151
Domine Salvum fac Regem.....	111, 113

Dominica Island of.....	312
Douay, Father Anastatius (See Anastatius).....
Douillanther—(Chief of the Hurons).....	434
Draper, Lyman C.....	242
Duchesneau
Duchense, Jacques, Sieur de la Doussiniere—Intendant of New France Sept. 1675 to Sept. 1682.....	127
Duff, John.....	197
Dufresne, Marie.....	463
Du Gay (Antoine Auguel).....	105
Duhault } M. M.—A member of LaSalle's last expedition
Duhaut }	159, 160, 161, 162
DuLac
DuuLud } Daniel Greyso'on, cousin of Tonty, born St. Ger-
DuDhu } main-in Laye, France, died 1710....	105, 151, 153, 154
Duluth }
Dulignon, Jean.....	113
Duluth (See Du Lac).....	105
Duncan, Mr.....	387
Dunmore, Earl of—Governor of Virginia (Title of John Mur- ray.....	222
Dunn, Thomas, Treasurer for the English at Quebec.....	314, 317, 318
Du Quesne, Fort (See Fort Du Quesne for Historical sketch)	165, 169, 170
Durantaye, Oliver Morel de la, born Notre Dame du Gaure, Nantes, Commandant at Michillimackinac 1683 to 1685, died 1727.....	148, 149
Dutch of New York.....	47
Du Vernet, Henry, (Du Verner).....	227, 229, 244, 314, 317, 341, 346, 347, 348, 349, 362, 391,393, 421
"Early settlement of the Wabash Valley" by Sanford Cox.....	219
Eclipse of the Sun.....	195
Editor of this volume. (See Beckwith, H. W.).....
Editorial and explanatory notes. (See Beckwith, H. W.).....
Edgar, Gen. John.....	314, 315, 316
Edgar, Mrs. Rachael, wife of John Edgar.....	315
Edward's History of Illinois, by Ninian Wirt Edwards.....	107
Edwards, Ninian Wirt.....	107
Edwardsville, Ill.....	462
Eel River.....	220
Egnseway, Ottawa chief.....	424, 425
Embarass River.....	240, 248
England.....	220, 323, 325, 326, 424, 441, 461, 462
English people.....	171, 175, 196, 204, 206, 210, 211, 212, 213, 216, 275, 286, 295, 298, 331, 332, 340, 341, 356, 398.
English Buccaneer (Helms or English Jem).....	161, 162
English, William Hayden.....	171, 242
Erie, Fort.....	322, 341, 370
Erie, Lake.....	5, 7, 46, 129, 151, 165
Estaing, Charles Henry Theodat, Count de.....	373, 376, 540
European Nations.....	34, 37, 39, 42, 74, 81, 91, 120, 141, 142

Evansville, Ind.	241
Falconer, Thos.	106, 113, 116, 127, 128
Fallen Timbers, (The) Battle of.	176
Falls of Niagara	129
Falls of the Ohio (Louisville, Ky.)
195, 203, 220, 221, 227, 234, 267, 274, 284, 286, 323, 340, 344, 357, 362, 393, 400, 413, 422, 425, 426.
Falls of St. Anthony.	97, 99, 100
Falls of St. Mary.	129
Faquier, Va.	191
Febvre, Rev. Hyacinth, the provincial of the Province of St.
Anthony in Artois, provincial of St. Denis in France. .	63
"Felicity" (The)	369, 420, 421, 426
Fetid, Bay of.	11, 12, 13, 40
Fevre, Rev. Father Hayacinth.	63
Fieri-facias, Writ of.	461
Flagg, Edmund T.	461
Florida	3, 39, 81
Flags	204, 221, 222, 223, 227, 229, 356, 374, 404
Flag, English	227, 356
Floyd, Col. J.	183, 184
Fol Avoines (Indian Tribe)	11
Forbes, Gen. John	170
Forest—Francois Daupin, Sieur de La.	137, 148, 151, 152, 153, 154
Foret {	123, 124, 182, 183, 216, 217, 219, 221, 339, 396
Fort Ascension	165, 168, 169
Fort of Bonhomme	150, 151
Fort Bowman	338
Fort Chartres, {	165, 168, 217, 222, 291, 292, 293, 310, 316, 459,
Fort Chartis, {	460, 461.
Fort of Chicaou	149
Fort Clark	307, 308
Fort Conty	54
Fort Crevecoeur.	87, 89, 92, 93, 95, 96, 131
Fort Detroit	151
Fort Du Quesne	165, 169, 170
Fort Erie	321, 332, 341, 370
Fort Frontenac. .5, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 54, 55, 89, 114, 122, 126, 127, 128, 129, 131, 132, 148, 152.
Fort Gage	304, 306, 458, 459, 460, 461, 462, 463
Fort Illinois	147
Fort Iroquois	131
Fort (at) Kentucke.	357
Fort Les Sab'les	152
Fort Laurens, {	381, 386, 420
Fort Lawrence {
Fort le Boeuff	422
Fort McIntosh	177, 179, 180
Fort Massiac (Massac)	165, 166, 168, 197, 198, 459
Fort (of the) Miamis	67, 68, 71, 176

- Fort Niagara 151, 152, 165
 Fort Oulatenon 216, 217, 223
 Fort Pitt 175, 192, 286, 304, 306, 309, 315, 380, 383, 386
 Fort Pt. Henry 410, 411, 412, 414, 415, 416, 417
 Fort Prudhomme 138, 146
 Fort Sackville 231, 244, 270, 311, 350, 394, 400, 406, 409
 Fort St. Joseph 151
 Fort St. Louis of the Illinois 116, 122, 123, 145, 147, 148, 149, 153, 154
 Fort Stanwix 236
 Fort Tuscarawas 427
 Fort Vincennes 227, 229
 Fort Wayne, Ind. 165
 Fox Indians (Outouagamis) 61
 Fox River 13, 14
 Foy, Capt. Edward 450
 France. 5, 31, 42, 44, 45, 55, 75, 89, 91, 105, 116, 117, 123, 124, 126, 127, 131, 132, 139, 143, 144, 150, 153, 166, 167, 192, 197, 202, 203, 217, 295, 298, 299, 329, 351, 374, 450, 456, 459, 460, 462.
 Francis, Tobacco's Son. See Tobacco's Son.
 Franciscan Friars 45
 French, Prof. Benjamin F. 6, 7
 French people. 5, 41, 46, 196, 201, 203, 205, 208, 210, 211, 212, 214, 215, 216, 217, 219, 221, 227, 234, 244, 249, 250, 251, 254, 284, 286, 287, 295, 298, 310, 323, 331, 333, 334, 340, 343, 351, 357,
 366, 368, 374, 376, 391, 411, 431, 456, 457.
 Frontenac—(Cartarcoui). (Kartarakoui) Fort. See Fort Frontenac.
 Frontenac, Lake 3, 5, 7, 42, 46
 Frontenac, Fort—See Fort Frontenac.
 Frontenac, Louis de Buade, Count de Frontenac.
 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 43, 54, 116, 123, 135
 Fur River. 248
 Gabrie', Father, de la Ribourde—Jesuit priest.
 59, 68, 70, 71, 78, 88, 92, 93
 Gage, Fort 458, 459, 461, 462
 Gage, Gen. Thomas—Commander British forces in America. 290, 291, 292, 369, 460, 461, 462
 Galelemand, Capt. John Killbuck. 379
 Galley, Clark's boat. 261, 272
 Galvis, Don Bernardo de—Spanish governor of La. 377, 378
 Gautier, } Chas. de Verville—
 Gotier. { 357, 365, 367, 369, 398, 399, 418, 436, 437
 Gay, Picard de—See You.
 Geological survey of Indiana, by Collett. 241
 George, Robin. 429
 Germaine, Lord George—English Secretary of State for the Colonies during Revolution. See Sackville. 311, 401, 449
 Gibault, Rev. Pierre (Peter)—Priest in the Illinois.
 201, 202, 203, 204, 205, 206, 234, 246, 330, 343, 398
 Gibson, Col. John. 381, 382, 384, 385, 386, 387, 388, 429
 Gibson (Miss Nancy?) 385
 Gicee, Indian chief. 433

- Girault }
 Gircault, } John— 301, 417
 Girciult, }
 Girtie, }
 Girty. } Simon— 381, 383, 386
 Gistie. }
 Goddard (James S. ?) Mr. 363
 Gordon's history 176
 Good Spirits 213
 Gotier—See Gautier 369
 Gouin, Charles 351
 Gouin, Nicholas 351
 Government—(Authorities of Virginia) 204
 Grafton, Ill. 96
 Graham, Capt. 427
 Grand Chief—(Tobacco's son) 255, 282
 Grand Door to the Wabash (Tobacco's son). See Tobacco's son 206
 Grand Louis—(Son of) 376
 Grandolos, Vigiel 376
 Grand River—(Mississippi) 5, 364, 367, 369, 432, 433, 436
 Grand River Indians 364, 367, 369, 398, 419
 Grand Traverse region 433
 Grande Coite 396
 Grande Glaise River—(Au Glaize) 220
 Grande Quoete—Peaukasha chief 396
 Grant, Capt. James 354, 370
 Grants of Land 190, 222, 288
 Gray (Deputy Sheriff of Montreal) 223, 224
 Great Bay—Near Lake Orleans 48
 Great Britain . . 172, 175, 178, 181, 182, 197, 199, 201, 222, 289, 299.
 314, 376, 459-461, 462-463. See England.
 Great Council of the Big Knives—(Congress) 210
 Great Council Fire—(Congress) 211 Great Fire—(Congress) 210
 Great Manitou 16
 Great River—(Mississippi) 4, 12, 18, 139
 Great Spirit 23, 209, 211, 212, 279, 320, 321
 Great Stone Fort 396
 Green Bay 11, 12, 13, 53, 105
 Gregory, Maj. 151
 Grey Gowns—(Franciscan priests) 45, 92
 Griffin }
 Griffon } La Salle's vessel 51, 55, 89
 Groseller, de 364
 Guay, Picard du—"The Jickard." See You.
 Gudert—(An interpreter) 336
 Gulf of California 4
 Gulf of Mexico 5, 7, 31, 38, 39, 44
 Haldimand, Gen. Frederick—English Governor General of Canada . . 173, 174, 216, 220-225, 227, 290-294, 312, 319-328, 330-336, 339-347, 351-355, 359-371, 389-393, 400, 418-422, 432-433, 436-438, 439-442, 445-449, 450-452, 462-463.

- Haldimand (The)—English vessel..... 422
 Halifax445, 450, 451
 Half King's Brother 369
 Hamilton—Sir Henry 173, 174, 181, 193, 215, 216, 219, 220-450
 Hampshire, Va. 193
 Hand, General Edward (American officer)—Born in Ireland, died Lancaster County, Pa., 1802.....193, 306
 Hanover (Virginia)—..... 187
 Harmar, Gen. Josiah 288
 Harrison, Col. Benj.....384, 387, 412
 Harrison, Ensign..... 387
 Harrison, William H.....181, 289
 Harrod, William—Brother of James Harrod, born near Bedford, Pa.193, 196
 Captain193, 196
 Harrodstown, Ky. (later called Harrodsburg)—Named for James Harrod186, 189
 Hay, Maj. Jehu—Of the Detroit Militia.....408, 409
 Hay, Maj. John—British Superintendent of Indian affairs at Detroit.
 227, 228, 229, 237, 267, 268, 269, 270, 319, 341, 328, 361,
 390, 408, 420.
 Heckewelder, Rev.—John (Gottlieb Ernestus)— (Heckwelder)—A Moravian missionary to western Indians, born Bedford, England, 1743, died Bethlehem, Pa., 1823. Noted for his writings as well as his missionary labors178, 179, 180, 181
 Helm, Capt. Leonard—Born in Virginia, died in Louisville, 1782. .191, 193, 194, 196, 206, 207, 215, 223, 226, 229, 230, 232, 258, 262, 267, 268, 269, 272, 273, 277, 278, 280, 281, 282, 392.
 395, 404, 405, 406, 407, 424.
 Henderson & Co. 185
 Henderson, Col. Richard (of the Kentucky Land Co.)—Born in Hanover County, Va., 1735. Died in Granville County, N. C., 1785..... 188
 Hennepin, Father Louis, Franciscan (Recollect) Priest—Born at Belgium about 1640, died Utrecht about 1702. French explorer, companion and historian of La Salle's Travels in Mississippi Valley....45, 46, 67, 68, 70, 87, 88, 89, 91, 93, 100-105.
 Henry (Ann)—Wife of Moses Henry..... 244, 245, 258, 429
 Henry, Governor Patrick—Born Hanover County, Va., 1736, died Charlotte County, Va., 1799.....
 171, 172, 187, 190, 191, 193, 214, 329, 410, 411, 413
 Henry, Fort Patrick Henry (Vincennes).....410-412, 414-417
 Henry, Mrs.—Mother of Moses Henry..... 429
 Henry Moses—Indian Agent at Vincennes.....
 244, 245, 258, 280, 429
 Henry, Mrs. Moses (Ann)—.....244, 245, 258, 429
 Hiens, or "English Jem".....161, 162
 "Historic Louisiana," by Gayerre..... 166
 Historical Collections of Louisiana—By B. F. French....6, 7, 106
 Historical Data—On continental Indian affairs..... 181

- Historical notes of the northwest—By Judge John B. Dillon.. 173
- Hochitagon—Seneca Indian word for bare-feet, name given Hennepin by Senecas.
- Holland 451
- Holland, Maj. 451
- Holston, Great Island of the Holston..... 191, 194, 195, 454
- Holston River—A tributary of the Tennessee River.
- Holy Ghost, Mission of—At La Pointe, Lake Superior. See La Pointe 4
- H. S.—Letter signed by..... 428
- Hough, Franklin B.—Translator of M. Pouchot's "Memoir upon the late war in North America between the French and English, 1755-1760..... 166
- Hoy, Andrew 461
- Hudson Bay..... 121
- Hunaut—Deserter from LaSalle's party..... 53
- Hunters Road..... 139
- Hurons (Indian tribes)—
Nadouessi.
Ochasteguis.
Ochatequins.
Onendats, Wyandottes.
34, 48, 51, 52, 107, 152, 153, 324, 352, 369, 393, 394, 413.
424, 425, 434, 435.
- Huron Lake—Called by Champlain first La Mer Douce, meaning "The Fresh Sea;" later, Lac des Attigouanien, after the chief tribe of the Hurons..... 11, 151
- Huron Slaves 151
- Huron Village 434, 435
- Hutchins, Lieut. Thomas..... 291, 292, 459
- H. W. B. (see Beckwith, H. W.)—Author of this volume and signs explanatory notes.. 14, 42, 43, 87, 96, 105, 106, 107, 112, 113, 115, 116, 120, 122, 123, 127, 128, 130, 132, 166, 168, 172,
174, 175, 177, 179, 185, 189, 191, 193, 197, 200, 201, 206, 219, 223, 226, 239, 241, 242, 243, 244, 245, 270, 273, 287, 312, 314, 315, 316, 458, 459, 460, 461, 462.
- Ilgonquines (Indian tribes)..... 107, 111
- Illinois—Word probab'y from Illini, which means in the language of the Illinois Indians, "a perfect or complete man;" Illiniwek means "we are men."
- Illinois Country.. 4, 24, 40, 42, 52, 53, 54, 76-97, 114, 129, 136, 145, 150, 159, 162, 164, 167, 169, 170, 172, 175, 189, 195, 196, 201, 205, 220, 222, 227, 231, 232-235, 236, 237, 240, 257, 276, 286, 287, 288, 307, 308, 310, 315, 316, 330, 332,
345, 346, 348, 349, 352, 357, 363, 365, 366, 377, 398, 410, 411, 415, 437, 443, 454, 462, 463.
- Illinois—History of..... 7, 107
- Illinois Indians—4, 10, 14, 20-29, 36, 37, 40, 54, 65, 66, 76-80, 81, 82, 86-7, 91-93, 101, 111, 122-23, 130-35, 138, 145, 147, 149, 151, 155, 201, 214, 293, 366.
- Illinois Lake..... 7, 39, 40
- Illinois Province..... 315
- Illinois State Historical Library. Board of Trustees of.... 1, 2

- Indians— . . 3, 4, 10, 20, 21, 22, 34, 36, 39, 48, 51-3, 65-6, 72, 76, 86-7, 91-2, 96, 98, 100-1, 104-5, 107-9, 111, 122, 123, 172-3, 175, 183-4, 196, 204-5, 207, 208, 212-16, 218-19, 221, 223,
225, 227-30, 232-34, 241, 245, 253-54, 261, 267, 273, 276,
277, 280, 293, 294, 313, 316, 317, 318, 319, 322, 325, 328,
336, 342, 366-67, 369, 371, 374, 379, 380-85, 389, 393-97, 400, 405, 418, 432, 434, 435, 436, 437, 446.
- Indiana, State of 171, 222, 241
- Indiana State Historical Society 171, 193
- Indiana State Archives 316
- Indianapolis 316
- Independence, Warren County, Indiana 218
- Index to Appendix 458-463
- Iowa Country 436
- Iroquois (or Five Nations)—Mohawks, Oneidas, Onondagas, Cayugas, Senecas (later Tuscarawas) . . 4, 33, 34, 42, 47,
48, 51, 52, 62, 65, 80, 81, 92, 122, 123, 129, 130-135, 138, 145, 147, 148, 150, 151, 152 154
- Iroquois Country 145
- Isle Royale (Isle of Minong) Island in northwest part of Lake Superior.
- Isonnoutouan (Indians) 129, 133
- Issati (Islati) Indians 98, 100
- Issati River (Nadoussion) 99
- Issati (Buade) Lake 99
- James, Edmund Janes, LL. D.—Member Board Trustees Ills.
State Historical Library 2
- Jason—Indian village 109
- Jaubard—American prisoner in Canada 448-4b0
- Jefferson, Thomas 171, 172, 185, 242, 288, 289, 453, 454
- Jesuit House at Kaskaskia 460, 462
- Jesuit Missions 5
- Jesuit Priests 45, 148, 460, 462
- Jesuit Relations 1
- Jesuite College at Kaskaskia 462
- Jogues, Father Isaac—Born Orleans, France, 1607. Killed by Mohawks in N. Y., 1646.
- Johnson, Captain 302
- Johnson, Governor 302
- Johnson, Sir William 165
- Jolliet } Louis—French Canadian explorer . . 5, 6, 7, 3-40 inc., Jolliet } 44, 45 105
- Jolliet's journal and maps 6
- Jolliet's journal 3-40
- Jolliet's maps 5, 6, 7
- Jones, Gabriel 186, 187 188
- Journal of Bowman 171, 243, 248-250, 267
- Journal of G. R. Clark. See Clark, George Rogers 402
- Journal of Croghan 217
- Journal of Jolliet and Marquette 3-40
- Journal of Marquette 3-40
- Kahokia. (See Cahokia) 262

- Kankakee River, of the Illinois—(Early Indian name, Thea-kiki) 69
- Kaskaskia } Illinois Indian town on right or west bank of the Kashaskies } Kaskaskia river in Randolph County, I. I. 40, 168, Kaskaskias } 174, 184, 191-3, 195, 197, 199, 200-5, 214, 223, 232-33, Kaskasky } 237, 238, 240, 258, 263, 281, 283, 284, 287-8, 291, 295-9, Kaskias } 302, 303, 307, 310, 311, 314, 315, 329, 330, 332, 336, Kaskaquis } 357-8, 389, 390, 424, 428, 429, 456, 459, 460, 461, Cascasquis } 462-3.
- Kaskaskia River 199, 240, 246 458
- Kaskaskia Volunteers 402
- Kaskasquias 232, 233, 357, 358, 378, 389, 390
- Kappas (Indian village) 155
- Ke-ki-ong-gay—Miami's village on both sides of the River St. Joseph 221
- Kennedy (Mr. Kenedy), Patrick 248, 280, 295, 298, 305-6
- Kentucky (perhaps from Onondago—Indian words Ken-tah-keh, meaning swampy country.. 173, 182-5, 189-91, 193, 195, 238-9, 261, 273-76, 283, 285-86, 357.
- Keraquis (Cherokee the present Tennessee River) 167-168
- Keraquis (Indian Tribe) 169
- Ker'erec, Louis Billouart, Chevalier de, succeeds Vaudreuil as Governor of Louisiana, 1753.
- Kickapoos.
 Kickapous
 Kikabous.
 Quickaboos.
 Qui-qu-a-bones.
 Quicpouz } A tribe of the Algonquin family.. 15, 135, 209, 214, 217, 232, 233, 261, 262, 319, 320, 322, 327, 338, 425.
- Kickapoo Village—(Mat-o-cush) 218
- Killbuck, Captain John, or Gale'emend, Tuscarawas, Indian Chief—American partizan 379, 381, 382
- Kinaytounak—Chief of the Renard Nation 333
- King of England 324, 434
- King of France 111, 126, 127, 132, 202, 204, 434
- King of Great Britain 374
- "Kings Pasture (The) at Detroit" 280
- King's Regiment 229, 353, 354, 421
- Kingston, Canada—Site of old Fort Frontenac 5, 128
- Kious (or Nadouessions) Indian tribe 111
- Kissingua (Indian) 395
- Knox Count, Ind. 241
- Koguethagechton (Delaware Chief)—Called by the Americans "Captain White Eyes" 177-179
- Koroas (Indian tribes) 109, 111
- Koroas (Indian village) 109
- Kouera (Indian village) 109
- La Barre, Le Febvre de. See Barre.
- La Bay Indians 336, 367
- La Baye 365, 367, 399, 436, 437
- La Bude River—
- La Chance (probably), Nicholas 300, 301, 309
- La Chappelle, Bazille 300, 301

La Chine Rapids.....	6
La Fayette, Gen. (Marie Jean Paul Roch Yves Gilbert Motier)	315, 366, 436, 437, 455
La Fayette, Indiana	216
La Fesse. {
La Gess. { The son of	122, 219, 356, 357
La Gesse {
Laffont, Dr. John Baptiste.....	204
La Forest, Francois Daupin, sieur de. See Forest.
Lagesse, The Son of.....	122, 219, 356, 357
Lagny, M. de.....	123
Lakes (The)	370
Lake Buade	99
Lake Conde.....	50, 51, 52, 98, 100
Lake Conty (Erie).....	46, 47
Lake Dauphin. 7, 40, 50, 53, 54, 55, 56, 60, 66, 76, 89, 107, 171, 207, 214, 220, 432, 437.....	455
Lake Erie.....	5, 7, 46, 129, 151, 165
Lake Frontenac.....	46, 128, 129, 132, 137
Lake Huron.....	11, 47, 129, 151
Lake Illinois	129, 136
Lake Indians	224, 343, 354, 364, 395, 397
Lake Issati.....	99, 100
Lake Michigan.... 7, 40, 50, 53, 54, 55, 56, 60, 66, 89, 207, 214,	220, 364
Lake Ontario	3, 7, 128, 441
Lake Orleans.....	11, 47, 48, 50
Lake Pepin	98
Lake St. Clare.....	47, 48
Lake Superior.....	4, 6, 44, 129
La Louisiane	45, 41-105
La Mothe, {
La Motte { Capt. Wm. 227, 258, 261, 262, 263, 264, 401, 403, 424, 425
Lancaster, Pa.	305
Liotot {
Lanctot {	160, 161, 162
Langlade, Charles Michel de.....	286, 367, 369, 398, 399, 418 436
Langnedoc (French vessel).....	376
La Pointe.....	4, 8, 10
Larnoult, Mr. Belanger.....	434, 435
La Rousseliere	53, 54
La Salle, Rene Robert, Sieur de—5, 6, 41, 42, 43, 44, 46, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 56, 57, 58, 59, 61, 70, 77, 78, 80, 87, 88, 89, 93, 95, 96, 106, 111, 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 122, 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 129, 130, 131, 132, 135, 136, 138, 139, 142, 143, 146, 147, 148, 153, 154, 159, 160, 161	162
La Touissant—.....	136
Law, Judge John.....	243
Lawrence, Fort.....	381, 382, 420
Le Barbier—Deserter from La Salle's party.....	53
Le Boeuff, Fort.....	422
Le Comte	377

- Lee, Arthur175, 177
 LeFevre. See Fevre.
 Legras. { J. M. P.223, 223
 Legrace. }
 Legras, Col. John M.259, 272, 288, 308, 343, 344, 366, 424 Legislature of Ills.1
 Lieth, John269, 270
 Leni-Lenape or Delawares. See Delaweres.179
 Lernoult, Capt. R. B. 341, 342, 344, 346, 353, 369, 370, 392, 408, 416, 417, 418, 420, 421, 427, 432, 434, 435, 443, 444.
 Letters.....171, 172, 173, 174, 193, 200, 225, 226, 244, 284, 290-457
 Levis, Gaston Francois, Chevalier de.....375
 Levees de terre124, 125
 Lientot, Maj. Godebory (Godfroy).....284, 285
 Lieth, John267-270
 Ling, W.306
 Linn, Maj. (Col.) Wm.197, 205
 Linne, Benjamin.....189
 Little Riviere363
 Little Wabash—See Wabash.....246
 Logansport, Ind.220
 London45, 222, 361
 Long Knives176
 Lord, Capt. Hugh.....295, 297, 461-463
 Loskiel, George Henry.
 Loskill181
 Louis XIV., King of France.....106, 107, 111, 115, 117, 126, 127
 Loui3, Saut, St.....9
 Louisiana, Hist. Collections.....6, 7
 Louisiana. { 6, 7, 50, 75, 76, 105, 106, 111, 118, 119, 165, 166, 167, 216
 Louisiane. }
 Louisville, Ky.22, 453, 454
 Loups (Indian Tribe)151, 435
 Lower Sandusky. See Sandusky.
 Luke (Pilot of the Griffin).....47, 55, 68
 Luzerne M. le Chevalier.....329
 Lynn, Capt.193
 McCarty, M. de—French commandant in the Illinois, 1751-1760.
 Makarty, Chevalier de.....167, 168, 169, 249, 334, 459
 born Ireland.
 McCarty, Capt. Richard.....262, 299, 334
 Machkoutens (Mascoutins) (Fire Nation).
 (Mush-Kooda, Us-ke, or Prairie land tribes) ..14, 15, 71, 107.
 319-328.
 McComb, Mr.444
 Macomb, John M.221
 Macomb, Mrs.227, 277
 McFall, John.....273
 McGary, Capt. Hugh.....284, 285
 McGee, Capt.370
 McIntosh, Fort382
 McIntosh, Gen. Lachlan, born Scotland 1725, died Savannah, Ga., 1806286, 383, 384

- McKee, Capt. Alexander.....343, 344, 362
Mackinack105, 172, 462
McLean Co., Ills.1
McLeod, Capt. (Norman?)228, 349
Madison, President James171, 185, 242, 283
Maheoula110, 111
Ma-hi-mam-ba, Kickapoo chief.....319, 320, 325
Mahingan (Loups or Wolves)—Indian tribe.....151, 435
Maisonville, Capt. Alexis.....228, 345
Maisonville, Francis263, 403, 424
Mamakossing381
Mambre—See Membre.
Mamel'es241, 242, 243, 250
Manatte149, 150
Manitou16, 27, 28, 30, 32
Manshack239
Mansion—Of the fort at Kaskaskia.....462
Manuscript Journal of Major Bowman—Extracts from....248-250
Manza Ouackange. }
Maza Wakande. } Dakota words for guns.....105
Maps—Beckwith, H. W.242
Collett, Prof. John.....241, 243
Hennepin's, reference to.....67, 87
Illinois Indian's6, 87, 91
Jollet's, reference to5, 6, 7
Membre's87
Marameg River—Early name of Kalamazoo River.
Marantete, Francois342
Marest, Father Pierre Gabriel—Jesuit, born Laval, France, 1662, died Kaskaskia, Ill., 1714.
Marest, Father Joseph—Jesuit, born Laval, France, 1653, died
Montreal, 1725.
Margry Pierre—French archivist and historian, born 1818, died 1894.
Marine Department of France, at Paris.....106
Marne, River, France.....71
Maroa }
Maroha. } (Indians)96, 101, 107
Marquette, Father James (Jacques)—Jesuit priest, born Laon, France, 1637, died on eastern shore of Lake Michigan,
1675.....3, 4, 5, 6, 8-40, 9, 10, 27, 29, 30, 31, 40, 44, 105
Marriage Register—Kaskaskia parish records.....463
Marsh of Fort Les Sables.....152
Martial law448
Mas, Jean113
Mascous (Indians) (Creeks).....394, 395
Mason, Edward G.458
Mason, George171, 199, 200, 223, 241, 242, 458
Mason Letter (The).....241, 243, 246, 458
Massac Fort.....197, 198 459
Massiac Fort.....165, 166, 168
Massiac, M. de—Minister of the French Marines and Colonies 165

- Mascoutenac } Indian word meaning open country.
 Maskoutens } (Indian Tribes).
 Mascoutens }
 Sacs, Foxes or Outagamies, really one nation the Musquakkiuk (Red Clay Nation)....15, 16, 71, 107, 319-328
 Maskoki (Southern Indians) Principal tribes Cherokees, Chickasaws, Choctaws, Creeks and Seminoles.
 Matchigrins Chief—Of Thunder Bay.....419
 Mathro301
 Mathews, Capt. Robert.....422, 450
 Matthews—Of Kaskaskia.....302
 Mattison, Ralph273
 Mat-o-cush217, 218
 Maumee River165, 166, 172, 173, 220, 278
 Mechah—Ojibway word meaning big, name; Mississippi probably derived from this word and the word "Seebee," which means river4
 Mech-Kigie (an Indian)431-432
 Melleoki River.. (See Milwaukee).
 Membre or Mambre—Father Zenobius, Recollect priest companion of La Salle, born Bapaume about 1645, died Texas, 1689.....45, 87, 107, 134, 135, 137
 Memoir of George Rogers Clark—Extracts from.
 237, 242, 245, 272-278, 458
 Memoir (The French).....219
 Memoir of Henry de Tonty.....128-164
 Memoir of La Salle.....115-125
 Menard, Father Rene (Jesuit missionary)—Born Paris 1604, died in Wisconsin 1661.
 Me-nom-o-nees (Wild oats)—(Indian tribe).....11
 Mermet, Father Jean—Jesuit, born Grenoble 1664, died in the Illinois Mission, 1716.
 Meschasipi (Colbert River).....81, 90
 Mesigameas (Indian Tribes).....111
 Meskonsing } River—Earliest French name for Wisconsin
 Meskousing } River.....16, 17, 18, 98
 Miskousing }
 Mesplet448, 449, 450
 Metairie, Jacques de la.....106, 107, 113
 Metsigmeas Indians108, 111
 Meucret, Gilles113
 Meulles, Jacques de, Intendant of New France, Sept. 1682 to July, 1686123
 Mexico (Mexique)3, 44, 120, 121, 124, 126, 149, 157
 Mexico, Gulf of...5, 7, 31, 38, 39, 44, 96, 106, 112, 115, 117, 153, 164
 Miamis Country.....107, 114, 343, 346, 352, 354, 359
 Miamis, Fort
 Miamis, Fort..220, 311, 336, 337, 340, 341, 343, 344, 346, 349, 354, 355, 358, 359, 360, 361, 391, 400, 439.
 Miamis (Indians)
 15, 16, 71, 72, 92, 101, 104, 147, 149, 151, 220, 233, 234, 278, 351, 352, 361, 362, 397, 424, 425
 Miamis Portage165

Miamis River	66, 67, 68, 69, 71, 99, 100, 130, 138, 147, 289, 346, 347, 355, 362, 392	420
Miamis Town	355, 359, 361
Michel, Jean (Surgeon).....		113
Michigan Lake—Lake of the Illinois, Lake St. Joseph, Lake Dauphin, Lac des Illinois, Lac Missihiganin, Magnus Lucus Algonquiorum—Early names for Lake Michigan	7, 40, 50, 53, 54, 55, 56, 60, 66, 89, 107, 171, 207, 214, 220, 364, 366, 432, 437, 455
Michilimakinac, {	10, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 69, 129, 131, 137, 146,
Misilamackinac, {	147, 151, 153, 299-303, 331, 334, 335, 364-
Missilamackinac, {	368, 398, 399, 411, 418, 419, 432, 433, 436,
Machilimackinac, }	437, 438, 440, 441, 445.....	462
Mille Lake		99
Milwaukee, }	Siggenakes Milwaukee, Chief.....	342, 366, 432, 436
Milwaukee, }
Mingoes, Indians		339
Minime Gabriel—One of La Salle's party; same person as Barbier		53
Minong, Isle of—Isle Royle of Lake Superior, called Isle of Minong by Le Mercier.....
Miskousing River—See Meskonsing.....
Mis-quitto, }		327
Miquetto, }
Mission of the Ho'y Ghcst, La Pointe du St. Esprit, near Ashland, Wis.		4
Mission of St. Ignatius		10
Missions, Jesuit		37
Mississippi River } (River Colbert).
Miss-i-sipi, }	Indian name Vega.
Meschasipl, }	(Spaniards gave it the name of River of the Ho'y Spirit, and Cucagua).....
Missipi, }
	3, 4, 5, 7, 9, 15, 16, 17, 18, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 39, 44, 46, 81, 82, 83, 90, 96, 97, 101, 105, 110-113, 116-118, 120, 127, 131, 138, 139, 143, 144, 148, 159, 162, 163-164, 165, 167, 172, 190, 196, 197, 214, 224, 233, 239, 240, 280, 281, 287, 288, 292, 300, 331, 332, 339, 340, 345, 365, 389, 391, 399.
Mississippi Valley	8, 42, 45, 119, 120-124, 143, 185, 460
Missouri River	5, 29, 340
Mitchigamea (Indian Tribes).....	35, 36, 37
Mitchigamea (Indian Village).....	35, 37
Mobib or Bubbriss.....	242
Mohegans (Loups or Wolves of the Algonquin family)...	151, 435
Moires, Wm. See Myers.....	414, 423
Money—American Currency	283, 284
Monforton, Gulle	434, 435
Monongahela River—Brownsville, Pa., located on (Red Stone old Fort)		191
Monsey Tribe, Wolf tribe of the Delawares.....
Monso—Miami Indian Chief (Monso Deer). In Chippewa language mons means moose. ("Nouvelle Decouverte" calls him a Mascuten.....	82, 83, 84, 85, 90

Montaine, John	420
Montcalm—Louis Joseph, Marquis de Montcalm, Gozen de St. Veran, born Nimes, France, 1712, died Quebec, 1759	375
Montgomery, Capt. John. Born Virginia about 1748, killed by Indians in Ky., 1794	195, 205, 206, 283, 284, 285, 307, 308, 457
Montour, John	379, 380, 435
Montreal	6, 9, 42, 44, 52, 53, 54, 114, 122, 126, 127, 149, 223, 224, 331, 334, 368, 369 448, 452
Moore, Samuel	189
Moors	124
Moranger.	{
Moranger.
Moranget.	{
Morangers.
Moravians	385, 386
Morgan, Col. George.	180, 305, 379, 380, 382, 385, 386, 387, 389, 391
Morin, James (Janis)	306
Morin, Sieur John	304
Moses, John	458
Motantees (Indian Tribes)	111
Mud River	289
Munburn—Lieut	337
Murray, Daniel	222, 295, 303
Murray, John (Earl of Dunmore)	222
Murray, Muckle	302
Murray, William	222
Muskigum	179
Muskingum River	177, 179
Myers, William	{
Myres, Mires,
Moires,
Morris,
Myette	337
Nachle, form of Natchez	156, 157
Nachitoches Indian tribe	156, 157
Nadas, Indian tribe	156
Nadoussion,	{
Nadouessious,
Nadouession,
Nadouessi,
Nadouessans,
Nadouessieux,
	Indians of the Siouan or Sioux tribes, also in Ojibway language called Dacotas. In Ojibway language the word means enemies. Henepin called them "Prairie men;" the Algonkins called them Nadoeussieux, the snake-like ones or enemies.
	26, 27, 98, 99, 100-105, 111, 156, 157
Nadoussion River, (Issati)	99
Nana'oihi, Poutawatamie chief	430, 431
Nancy, Miss, Perhaps Nancy Gibson, sister of Col. John Gibson	385
Naodiche (Indian tribe)	154, 158, 162
Naovediche,	{
Naouadiches,
Naoudiches,
	Sioux Indian
	154, 158, 162

- Narrhebota, } 103
 Narrhetoba, }
 Nasoui, Indian tribe 157
 Nachie, }
 Nahy, }
 Natches } Southern Indians.....109, 111, 142, 143, 146, 155
 Natchez, }
 Theuel, }
 Neal, Capt. 384
 Neegik, Ottawa war chief 356, 358
 New Biscay 125
 New England 3, 107, 119, 121, 124
 New France..... 4, 44, 114, 121, 122, 125, 126, 132, 134
 New Jersey 180
 New Mexico..... 3, 8, 9, 410
 New Netherlands 3
 New Orleans. 165, 167, 169, 193, 284, 293, 294, 310, 331, 377, 378, 390 391, 429.
 New Sweden 3
 Newspapers 122, 181
 New York 47, 180, 181, 290, 291, 323, 419, 451, 463
 Niagara—Word probably from Iroquois Indian dialect, fort built by DeNonville, 1678, destroyed a year later. Fort built 1725 by Chaussegross de Lery. Rebuilt by Pouchot 1756. Taken by English 1759..... 5, 46, 47, 54, 114, 129-131, 151, 152, 165, 330, 340, 344, 346, 351, 353, 369, 370, 371, 392, 421-422, 445, 447, 455.
 Niagara River 46, 47
 Nicanape—Illinois Indian, brother of Chassagoac, the most important chief of the Ills. Indians..... 83, 84, 85, 86
 Nicondiche 154
 Nika—Chaganon Indian hunter with LaSalle's expedition, killed in Texas by Liotot, 1687..... 155, 158
 Nimissakouat River 98
 North America 106, 128, 172, 175, 373-376, 461, North, Frederick—By courtesy Lord North, 2d Earl of Guilford, born 1732, died 1792, Prime Minister of England during Revolution 311, 451
 North West 7, 42
 Northwest, history of 242
 Northwestern Indians 176
 Nouvel, Father Henri—Jesuit, born Province of Toulouse, France, 1621, died Ottawa Mission, near Green Bay, 1674.
 Oabaskigo River 33
 Ochi Town 381
 Ohio Country 173, 174
 Ohio River. 32, 111, 168, 172, 175, 181, 182, 197, 217, 224, 232, 233, 238, 281, 286, 287, 337, 339, 340, 365, 378, 389, 403, 407, 453, 454.
 Ohio Valley Historical Series 191
 Ohmabadie 403
 Ojatinon (Weas.) Village 71
 Ojebway (or Chippewa Language)..... 4

- Olney, Ills. 249
 Omaouha—Illinois Indian Chief..... 82
 Ome—A corruption of Aux Miamis, an Indian village on site of present Fort Wayne Ind.....
 Omi River (Maume)..... 278
 On-an-ghis-se (Poutouattamie Chief)..... 54
 Onisconsin River (Wisconsin, Misconsin)..... 97, 98, 99
 Onnontagues (Indian Tribe)..... 133
 Onontio, } Means in Huron and Onondago, beautiful Onnotio, } mountain, name first given by the Indians to Ononthio, } Montmagny, governor of Canada, and afterwards given to all governors of Canada.... 54, 64
 Ontario Lake—(Lake Frontenac)..... 3, 5, 42, 128, 129, 441
 Onyas (Weas) 329, 336, 337
 O'Reilly, Don Alexander—Spanish Governor of Louisiana, born Ireland, 1735, died Spain, 1794..... 166
 Cresconsign, River 365
 Orleans 232, 284, 429
 Orleans Lake (Huron) 11, 47, 48
 Oruntundis 427
 Osage (Indian Tribes) (Siouan Family.)..... 80, 92, 155, 157
 Osage River—River of the Osages, Missouri River.....
 Ostony (Indian village of the Akancas)..... 139
 Otchipoises (Indian Tribes)..... 107
 Otententa River 97
 Ottawas, Chiefs of..... 394, 395, 398, 424
 Ottawa Country 9
 Ottawa, Ills. 40, 77, 124
 Ottawas } (Indian Tribes) . 51, 52, 127, 137, 151, 152, 220, 232, Ouataouacs } 233, 322, 324, 341, 356, 361, 362, 366, 367, 380, Outtatoutctz } 389, 393, 394, 395, 397, 398, 418, 422, 424, 425, Ottumwas } 432, 436, 456.
 Ottawas Lake (Lake Michigan)..... 3
 Ouabace } (Indian Tribes) 226, 231, 319, 325, 326, 330, 332, 333, Ouabache } 339, 341, 343, 356, 361, 362, 366, 367, 380,
 Ouabash } 389, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 418, 422, 424,
 Ouebash } 425, 428, 432, 436.
 Ouabash River 144, 346, 351, 354, 356, 407
 Ouaboukingon River—("Waboukigon")..... 32
 Ouadebathon, (Indian Tribe). River people..... 100
 Quasiconde 156
 Quasita—Principal war chief of the Sioux Indians..... 156
 Oulatenon (Oueaugh) }
 Ouliattonon (Ouiga) } Fort—Near present site of Lafayette,
 (Wea) } Indiana... 71, 207, 216, 217, 218, 220, } 221 223, 227, 232, 313, 343, 351.
 Ouittanon }
 Ouittonon }
 Oiatinon }
 Ouiat—Weas }
 Oulatenous }
 Ouiattonous } (Indian Tribes). 214, 217, 220, 223, 225, 227, 232.
 Ouliattonon } 280, 319-328, 329, 343, 351, 354, 394, 395.
 Ouitattonous } Ouittonous }

- (Ojatinon War Chief) Pi-e-mash-kee-canny.....319, 325, 327
 Oumahauha (Omaha)82, 93
 Oumas (Louisiana Tribe).....109, 150
 Outamas
 Outaoucs } (Indian Tribe). See Ottawas.....51, 52
 Outtourtztz }
 Ottawas }
 Outouagamis—Indian Tribe (Fox Indians).....61, 65
 Ouyas336, 337
 Pacific Ocean5
 Palms, River of.....112
 Paris Documents459
 Paris, France.....4, 6, 41, 43, 75, 95, 115, 116, 145, 165, 166, 456
 Parish Records of Kaskaskia.....463
 Parkman, Francis—American Historian—Born, Boston, 1823, died, Boston, 1893.....7
 Paterson, Mr. G.....439
 Paul, Col. John—Served under George Rogers Clark—Born
 Pa., 1758, died, Indiana, 1830.....
 Pawnee Nation410
 Pays Plat398
 Pearl River293
 Peakaskaas } (Indian Tribes). See Piankeshaws.....
 Peaukaskas {222, 243, 394, 396, 400
 Peemembikaetack—Poutawattamie War Chief.....322
 Pekitanoui—Name given to the Missouri River by Marquette
29, 30, 31
 Pekkileland (an Indian)386
 Pennsylvania.....121, 174, 177, 181, 182, 193, 194, 217, 304
 Pensacola267, 290, 291, 292, 294
 Peoria311
 Peoria Chief351, 400
 Peoria (Indians)25, 40, 105, 214, 311, 351, 389, 400, 425
 Peoria Lake78, 107, 131
 Peoria Mission105
 Peouria25, 46
 Peouarea, Village of25
 Pepin Lake (Lake of Tears).....98
 Permanent Pond (The).....243
 Peru124
 Petit Gres, Miamis chief.....426
 Petite Riviere, Camp at.....361, 362
 Petition of La Salle.....44, 126
 Philadelphia6, 180, 211, 222, 293, 304, 305, 309, 323
 Piankeshaws. 214, 222, 277, 278, 282, 286, 289, 290, 336, 343, 396, 400
214, 222, 277, 278, 282, 286, 290, 336, 343
 Picard du Gay—See Auguelle.....94, 103
 Pi-e-mash-kee-canny (Quiquabones chief).....319, 325
 Pierson, Father Phillipe—Jesuit, born Ath, Hainant, Belgium, 1642, died at Lorette, 1688.....
 Pipe, Capt.—Delaware chief.....369
 Pitt, Fort ...175, 192, 286, 304, 306, 309, 315, 345, 380, 386, 388 424 Pittman, Capt. Philip, English Civil Engineer, historical writings of459, 460

- Pittsburg180, 188, 190, 193, 194, 217, 274, 286, 379
 Plet, Francois—Cousin of La Salle..... 114
 Point (The)—See La Point..... 4, 10, 49, 454
 Point Coupe (The cut off)..... 222
 Point des Chesnes 345
 Point Ignace (Missillimakinac) 50
 "Poitesfield," Lt. Col., T. T. M..... 308
 Pomoacon (The Half King)—Principa, Chief of the Wyandots Ponchertrain Louis Phelypeaux Count de, Chancellor of France, successor of Selgnelay as Minister of the Marine 1690, born 1643, died 1717..... 128
 Ponchot }
 Pouchot } M. 166
 Poole, Prof. W. F.....148, 458
 Portage City, Wis..... 16
 Portages3, 7, 17, 399
 Portage—Chicago7, 107
 Portage—Miami165, 340
 Portage—Niagara Falls7, 107
 Portage—Of the River Divine, mention..... 7
 Post of the Illinois.....169, 170
 Posts.....120, 121, 198, 224, 331, 411, 439, 441, 442, 447, 453
 Poucouattamies,
 Poutouatami,
 Poutawattamies, } (Indian Tribes) ..53, 54, 56, 57, 58, 59, 130, Poutawatamies, } 136, 137, 152, 220, 232, 234, 322, 322, 324, Pottawattamies, } 334, 341, 342, 356, 357, 361, 362, 365, 367, Potamatamies- } 378, 380, 393, 399, 418, 425, 430, 431, 444, 456
 Pottawatamies,
 Pouttawattamies, }
 Pottawattomie Island } (Washington Island) 53
 Poutawattomie Island }
 Poupart—Deserter from La Salle's party..... 53 Powder Magazine at Vincennes.....223, 261
 Prairie de (du) Chien 365
 Prairie du Rocher (Rock Prairie)—Founded about 1733, by Jean St. Therese Langlois, a nephew of Boisbriant, about five miles east of old Fort Chartres, in present Randolph Co., Ills.....
 Presque Isle—Site of present Erie, Pa..... 371 Priest (The) Gibault..... 246
 "Proces Verbal"106-113
 Proclamation, Abbott's181, 182
 Proclamation, (The French)356, 457
 Proclamation of King of France.....373-376
 Proclamation, Todd's287, 288
 Prudhomme, Fort138, 146
 Prudhomme, Peter 139
 Puans, Bay of (Green Bay).....53, 61, 98, 99
 Puants (Otchagras, Winnebagoes).
 Puants, Lac des—Lake Michigan called Lac des Puants on Champlain's map, 1632.....
 Quanoouatinous, } (Indian Tribes)158, 159 Quanouatins }

- Quebec 3, 7, 17, 41, 42, 45, 122, 123, 128, 147, 222, 313, 314, 330, 331, 380, 394, 401, 439, 440, 441, 445, 449, 450, 452
- Quick, Major Thomas—Served under George Rogers Clark, born probably in Ireland, died Ky., 1803.
- Quindre, Lieut. Louis de (?) 357
- Quinipissas } (Indian Tribes)—Southern Quinipissis }
(Bayougoulas)
(Mongoulaches) 143, 145, 146, 150
- Quiquaboos } 319, 320, 322, 327, 328
Quiquabones } 209, 232, 233, 319, 320, 322, 327, 328, 394, 425
- Qui-qua-po-quois 320, 326, 327, 328
- Quivira—Kindom of 8
- Racine, Jean Baptiste, alias St. Marie, French commandant at Vincennes 314, 463
- Raimbault, Messrs. 352
- Rale (Ras'e, Rasles) Sebastian, Jesuit, born Pontarlier 1657, killed Maine, 1724 315, 316
- Ramsey, James 308
- Randolph, Perk. H. 308
- Rastel, Phillippe Francois, Chevalier de Rocheblave—see Rocheblave 463
- Recollets } (Franciscan priests) .. 45, 46, 47, 57, 59, 63, 64, 65, 66, Recollects } .. 70, 79, 92, 107, 129, 131, 132, 133, 153, 160.
- Red people. (See Indians) 210, 211, 213
- Red River (Saignelay) 120, 157, 158
- Red Sea—(California Sea) 8, 31, 32
- Red Stone Old Fort—Present site of Brownsville, Pa. 191, 194
- Renards } (Indians) 437, 473
Renards. }
- Renaudot, l'Abbe. 128
- Renclo 436, 437
- Revolutionary War 137, 174, 177, 178, 179, 180, 289
- Ribourde, Father Gabriel de la—Recollect Priest (Franciscan) Companion of La Salle, born in Burgundy about 1615, died in the Ills. 1680, killed by Kickapoo Indians. 94, 95, 133, 135, 137
- River Pearlart 293
- River St. Joseph 207
- River St. Pierre 365
- Riviere a l' Anguille (Eel River) 220, 362
- Rivers of the Taencas 155
- Ruerlord, M. de 167
- Rum River 99
- Ruter—English Buccaneer 161, 162
- Roche de Bout } 354-358
Rocher de Bout }
- Rocheblave, Phillippe, Francois de Rastel, Chevalier de—Born Savournon, France; last British Commandant in the Illinois Country. Died in Canada subsequent to 1786 197, 232, 295-299, 300-306, 309, 311, 315, 330, 332, 458, 462, 463

- Rochelle, France 128
 Rocher de Bout..... 354, 355
 Rock of St. Louis—Called "St. Louis of the Rock, "Starved Rock." See Fort St. Louis of the Illinois.
 Roetie River 336
 Rogers, Lieut. John—Cousin of George Rogers Clark, born in Virginia 1757, died Richmond, Va., 1794. 239, 248, 274, 275
 Rouen, France 48
 Roussel—La Rousseliere—Deserter from La Salle's Party.... 53
 Royal Artillery 227
 Royal Geographical Society 116
 Sackville, Fort—See Fort Sackville.
 224, 231-233, 244, 270, 311, 350, 394
 Sackville, George—Became 1782 first Viscount Sackville, son of the first Duke of Dorset, born 1716, died 1785. In compliance with a will assumed the name of Lord George Germain; became (1775) Secretary of State (of England) for the Colonies, in Lord North's Cabinet 173, 174, 311, 463
 Saginaw 438
 St. Ange de Bel'erive, Jean—Commandant at Fort Chartres 1721, again 1733. His son Louis, commandant Kaskia 1727, surrendered Fort Chartres to English Oct. 1765; died St. Louis 1774. (Louis).
 St. Anthony of Padua—Born Lisbon 1195, died Padua 1231. One of the early leaders of the Order of Franciscan Monks..... 50
 St. Anthony Falls..... 99 (Named by Hennepin).
 St. Bonaventure 100
 St. Claire—Founder of Order of Franciscan nuns, Clara Sciffl d' Assisi, founder of female orders of the Clarisses, 1212; Cordeliers or Gray Sisters and other orders. Died Aug. 12, 1253.
 St. Claire, Lake of..... 47, 48
 See Mich. Pioneer Collections, Vol. 3, Pages 650-651.
 St. Croix, Lieut. in McCarty's Cahokia Volunteers..... 262-263
 St. Croix 53
 St. Croix River 98, 105
 St. Esprit, Mission of—At La Pointe, near Western extremity of Lake Superior, one of the first two chief Jesuit Missions on the upper Lakes, founded by Allouez 1665... 8, 10
 See La Point.
 St. Francis of Assisi (Francis Bernadone)—Founder of the order of priests of St. Francis, of the Roman Catholic Church, founded about 1210. Born Assisi 1182 (or 1181), died 1226.
 St. Francis—Religious order called Gray Gowns or Bare Feet 57, 60, 92
 St. Francis River (Rum River)..... 99
 St. Francis Xavier—Mission Station founded at Green Bay by Alloues, 1669-1670.
 St. Geme, Jean Baptiste Beauvias—Family of..... 460
 St. Genevieve, Mo..... 460

St. George's Ensign.....	228
St. George's flag.....	229, 230
St. Germain, Jean	456, 457
St. Germain-en-Laye—One of the Palaces of the Kings of France, birthplace of Louis XIV. Town of France about thirteen miles from Paris. Palace now a museum of National Antiquities.....	106
St. Ignace—Mission (Jesuit) Station near Missilmakinac....	10
St. Ignatius (The Point).....	10
St. Josephs (Fort).....	151, 220, 231, 331, 334, 335, 336, 342, 345, 360, 362, 364, 366, 367, 368, 369, 398, 418, 443, 444, 455.
St. Joseph River	66, 172, 173, 207, 221
St. Lawrence, feast of.....	47
St. Lawrence Fort.....	381
St. Lawrence River	3, 5, 128
St. Louis, Fort of.....	147
See Fort St. Louis of the Ills.
St. Louis River	111
Sainte Marie du Long Sault.....	52
St. Marie du Saut } See Sault Ste. Marie.....	6, 9, 50, 52, 53, 172
Ste. Marie Sault }
St. Marie—See Racine.....	314, 463
St. Mary's College (Montreal).....	6
St. Pierre River	365
St. Tammany (The Patron Saint of America).....	180
St. Vincennes—See Vincennes.
Sakis Country	436
Sakis Indians	437
Sakinam Bay	49
Saline River	240
Salt Bay (Fetid Bay).....	13
Sample, Mr.	382, 383, 385
Sample, Mrs.	384
Sandooski } From Sah-un-duskee, meaning in Wyandot In- Sandusky } dian language "clear cold water".....
St. Dusky }
Santuske }	352, 369, 371, 381, 420, 427, 435
Sa-pa-ti-a, Oulatonous Chief.....	319, 320, 325, 326, 328
Sargent Winthrop	228
Sastaritsi, Huron Chief	424, 425
Sault Ste. Marie—The outlet of Lake Superior, Mission, founded 1640 by Raimbault and Jogues.....	6, 9, 50, 52, 53, 172
Saunders, John	198, 199
Sault St. Louis (Near Montreal).....	9
Saulteurs Indians	52
Sauteux Indians	435
Shieffelin, Lieut. (Jacob?).....	228
Schlosser, Mr.	335
Schouten, Antoine	45
Schuyler River	304
Scott, Gen. Chas.	219
Seas	8, 31, 32, 44

- See-bee—Ojibway or Chippewa word meaning river. See Mechah-Seebee 4
- Seignelai, Marquis de, Jean Baptiste (Colbert), French Minister of the Marine.....115, 128
- Seignelay
- Seignelay River (Illinois) (Kankakee). (Red River).
69, 71, 72, 76, 95, 97, 98, 120
- Seine River 77
- Seneca Country 371
- Senecas (Indian Tribe)..... 324
- Shaganoba 380
- Shannon, Capt. W. 258
- Shawanese (Indian Tribes)
 232, 233, 234, 289, 339, 343, 357, 359, 362, 389, 392-396
- Shawneetown, Ills. 217
- Shawnees Towns 285
- Shea, John Gilmary D.—American historical writer, born New York 1824, died Elizabeth, N. J., 1892.....7, 8, 40, 45
- Shelby, Capt. Isaac..... 280
- Shilby, Capt. James 455
- Shourd, Lieut. 341, 353, 354
- Sicily 128
- Siggenake, Milwaukee chief..... 432
- Siouan (Indian Tribes)—"Tribes Beyond the Mississippi" ..
 Sioux { 26, 27, 41, 100-105, 131
- Sipore River 111
- Smith, Capt. 192
- Smith, Major William.....:191, 194, 195
- Sonnonouans 152
- Soto, Ferdinand de—Spanish explorer in Mississippi Valley, born about 1500, died 1542..... 81
- South Bend, Indiana.....69, 81
- South Sea5, 31, 44
- South Toledo, Ohio..... 176
- Southern Indians 232, 238, 389, 397
- Sowers, Capt. 290-292
- Spain124, 154, 192, 299
- Spaniards.... 39, 121-124, 158, 159, 284, 315, 324, 327, 333, 391, 453
- Sparks, Jared—American historian, born Willington, Conn., 1789, died 1866.....6, 106, 116
- Stanwix, Fort 236
- Starved Rock on Illinois River, near Ottawa, Ills., See Fort St. Louis of the Ills.....122, 131, 132
- Steele, Col. 337
- Stewart's Crossing 387
- Stirling, Capt. Thos. 461
- Stone House of the Jesuits at Kaskaskia..... 462
- Stuart, Mr. (John?).....232, 344, 395, 396
- Stubblefield, Hon. George W.—Ills. State Senator from McLean Co. 1
- Surgeon Creek136, 137
- Sugar Camps (The) 242, 243, 250, 251, 258. See also map of.242-243
- Sullivan, Dan 386

Sullivan's	387
Superior, Lake	4, 6, 44, 105
Taensas } (Indian tribes) ...	109, 139, 140, 142, 146, 150, 155, 156
Taencas {
Talon, Jean Baptiste—First intendant of Justice, Police and Finance of New France, afterwards Count d' Orsainville, born Picardy, France, 1625; died subsequent to 1680 in Canada.....	3, 4, 5, 8, 9, 41, 42
Talusas (Indian tribe).....	109
Tam-a-nend	180
Tamaraas (Indian tribe).....	147
Tamaroa, or Maroa (Indian tribe).....	96
Tamarous (Indian tribe).....	138
Tammany	180, 181
Tangibaoes (White corn Indians).....	143
Ta-pa-tia (Sa-pa-tia)—Chief of the Ouliattonons.....	319, 320, 325, 326, 328
Tawaa Indians	380
Taylor, Maj. Richard.....	386-388
Tegantouki—Chief of the Isontoutan.....	133
Tennessee River (Keraquis).....	167, 168, 197, 283, 454
Territory of the U. S. Northwest of the River Ohio.....	171
Tezagon (Indian tribe).....	138
Thegualo—Kingdom of.....	3
Thevenot, Melchiseds	6
Thiakiki River, Forks of.....	340
Thunder Bay.....	419
Thurston, Cornet John—Served under Geo. R. Clark, born Va., 1761; died Ky., 1802.....	151
Tilly, Sieur Beauvais de	100
Tinthonha (Indian tribe).....	216, 220
Tippecanoe River
"Tippl-Con." } Miamis of the Tippecanoe.....	220
"Thippicano." {
Tobacco (The Old)—Indian chief.....	356
Tobacco's Son—A Piankeshaw, called by Indians "The Grand Door to the Wabash". 206, 207, 255, 259, 277, 278, 282, 283, 326
Todd, Col. John—Comandant of the Ills. country, born in Pennsylvania; killed battle Blue Licks, Ky., 1782.....	287, 288, 460
Todd, John, Jr., of Va.....	287, 288, 460
(same person as above).
Tomb River	98, 100
Tongenga—Indian village	155
Tonti (Tonty) Henri de—Italian explorer and soldier in French service; La Salle's Lieut. Commandant in the Ills.; born in Italy, probably Naples, about 1650; died at Fort St. Louis, Mobile, 1704.....	44, 45, 53, 67, 68, 69, 81, 88, 93, 107, 109, 110.....
Memoir of, 1693".....	113
Torremans	128-164
Toriman	155
Tourika	139
Tourika	109

- Toyongan 139
 Trail—Between Kaskaskia and Vincennes..... 240
 Treaties with Indians. See Indian Treaties..... 181, 208
 Treaty—United States and Great Britain..... 289 Treaty—United States and France..... 197
 Twigtrees, or Miamis Indians. See Miamis.
 Twiss Ensign 379
 Twiss, Lieut. 370, 422
 Tula (Indian Nation)..... 81
 Tuscarawas (Indian tribe)..... 427, 428
 Uh-ke (Indian tribes) Mush-kooda-Uh-kee 14
 Ulloa, Don, Antonio de—Spanish Governor of Louisiana, born Seville, 1716; died Island of Leon, 1795..... 166
 United States. 171, 177, 181, 197, 202, 204, 238, 286, 338, 374, 376, 379, 437, 459..... 463
 Upper Peoria Lake..... 46, 78, 107
 Utrecht 45
 Valiennes, Capt. 153
 Vaudreuil, Pierre Rigaud—Marquis de Vaudreuil Cavagnal, born 1698; died 1764. Son of a former governor of Canada, himself French governor of Canada July, 1775, to Sept. 1760.
 Governor of the Colony of Louisiana..... 167, 459
 Vermilion (Big) River..... 222, 273, 278, 329
 Vermillion Sea (Gulf of California)..... 5
 Vernet, Henry Du—English officer, Second Lieut. Artillery. See Du Vernet.
 Vigo, Col. Francis—Born Sardinia (about) 1747. Died Vincennes 1836 238
 } French trading post, founded 1727. (Dunn's Indiana) by Francois Morgane de la Valtrie, sieur de Vincennes. Present site of, on bank of the Wabash River, Knox Co., Indiana.
 Vincennes Fort. } 174, 181, 184, 194, 195, 196, 197, 201, 203-285, 287-289, 297, 298, 306, 308, 310, 311, 313, 316-318, 329, 330, 332, 336, 337, 343, 352, 354, 356-359, 360, 377, 378, 389-393, 394-397, 400, 402, 406-409, 412-421, 424-426, 428, 454..... 463
 Vincennes Post. }
 Virginia—4, 39, 119, 121, 171, 174, 181, 182, 183, 185, 187, 188, 192, 193, 203, 214, 232, 258, 272, 275, 286, 287, 307, 320, 434, 453, 460..... 463
 Virginians 193, 194, 197, 326, 329, 337, 343, 369, 393-395, 420, 425, 426, 432, 433-437.
 Vital 116
 Viviat, Mr. 297, 301
 "Voyages and discoveries by Father Marquette in the Valley of the Mississippi" 8-40
 Wabachees (The two little Wabaches)..... 240, 246
 Wabash Country. See Ouabash..... 174, 223, 248
 Wabash Indians. See Ouabash..... 206, 428

Wabash River—32, 165, 173, 189, 205, 207, 215, 216, 217, 222, 223, 239, 240, 242, 245, 247, 248, 249, 272, 278, 279, 287, 313, 330, 428.....	455
Wabash River (Little).....	246, 247.
Wabash River (Upper).....	278
Wabash Valley !.....	219
Wabene-kiah	321
Wanaquibe—Pouttawattamie Chief	362
Warren's Island! } See Warrior's Island.....	243
Warren's Island }
Warrior's Island	243, 254, 257, 402
Washington, George.....	288
Wea Creek	218
Weas (Oulatttonons).....	216, 218, 219, 224, 280, 284, 311, 319
Wea towns.....	280, 284
Welcome (The)—An English sloop.....	366, 368, 426
Wesnippigoes (Indian tribe).....	418
West India Islands	76
Wheeling	194
White Eyes, Capt. (Koguethagechton)—Delaware Indian chief (Wi-co-cal-ind)—Died Nov. 10, 1778.....	175, 179
White Horse	304
White River	22, 281
Wiaqtanon (Oulatanon)	235, 236
Wi-co-cal-ind	175
Wild Oats (Me-nom-o-nees, or the Fol-Avoines)—Indian tribes	11, 12
Wilkins, Col. John.....	295
Wilkinson, Gen. Jas.	219
Williams, Capt. John.....	205, 250, 267, 274, 402
Williamsburgh, Va.	186, 189, 191, 232, 275, 411, 412, 428, 463
Willing (The)—Boat	191, 239, 240, 255, 280, 407
Willing, Capt.	239, 429
Willing, James	239, 293, 294
Willing, Morris & Co.....	293
Willing, Thomas	293, 294
Winchester, Va.	305
Winsor, Justin	458
Wingenund—Delaware war chief.....	179
Winston, Richard	457
Wisconsin Historical Society.....	242
Wisconsin River (Maskoutens).....	16, 98, 105
Wisconsin—State of	171
Wm. (?) Mr.	226
Wold Rapid	339
Wolfs (Loups)—Indian tribes.....	309, 435
Worthington, Capt. Edward.....	250, 402
Wyandots (Indian tribes)	362, 379, 380
Wyandotts.....
Yataches (Indian tribe)	156
Yates, Richard—Governor of Illinois 1901-1905. Born Jacksonville, Ills., Dec. 12, 1860.....	1

- You, Pierre—Pierre You d'Youville, de la Decouverte, his real name was Anthony Auguelle (called the Picard) 113
- Young, William 308
- Zelsberger, Rev. David—Moravian missionary to western Indians, born Moravia 1721; died Goshen, Ohio, 1808.... 381-386
- Zenobius. { Father—Membre, Recollect Missionary. See
- Zenoble { Membre 78, 79, 88, 93, 116, 135

RETURN TO → CIRCULATION DEPARTMENT
202 Main Library

LOAN PERIOD 1	2	3
HOME USE
4	5	6

ALL BOOKS MAY BE RECALLED AFTER 7 DAYS

1-month loans may be renewed by calling 642-3405
 6-month loans may be recharged by bringing books to Circulation Desk.
 Renewals and recharges may be made 4 days prior to due date.

DUE AS STAMPED BELOW

	DUE
	APR 17 2006
REC. CIR. NOV 29 '82	FEB 26 '86 - 1 PM
 LIBRARY USE ONLY FEB 11 1984 CIRCULATION DEPT.
	REC. CIR. FEB 11 '84
	MAY 22 1991
	AUTO DISC.
	OCT 02 1992
	CIRCULATION

LIBRARY USE

000000

10-10-10

